Compare These Details Of The Two Constructions And Come To Your Own Conclusions

Right you are, the Semi-Iron house has our regular guaranteed wrought iron post, galvanized angle eave plate and sash bar clasps, but it has no steel rafters.

The new Number Two Construction, which costs not a penny more than the Semi-Iron, has a complete iron frame. It has steel rafters extending from the eave post to the ridge.

With the Semi-Iron there are no rafters, so the roof bars have to be larger, and the roof stiffened and given the needed extra support, by purlins and columns. That's why the Semi-Iron has so many columns, while the Number Two Construction has but two columns, even in a house forty feet wide.

Not only do you get a full Iron Frame House in the Number Two Construction, but you get one of L & B's, high class in every particular.

How we can sell you such a house, up to 40 feet wide, for exactly the same cost as a Semi-Iron, is hard for you to figure out.

The fact is, we can do it, so what more do you care?

Quick deliveries. Quick erections. You act quick, and you'll get quick action.

The Semi-Iron House has no rafters. The post stops at the eave.

The Number Two House, really extends its post, as a rafter, right up to the ridge. Note that good rugged splice plate. It's double—one on each side.

(Extract from Florists' Exchange, Issue April 22, 1922)

By FRITZ BAHR

RUBRUM LILIES

"Did you ever plant too many? For the average florist it means just this: He can get along without rubrum Lilies, even not miss them. On the other hand, those who once get into the habit of using them usually find them such a profitable and at the same time easily handled crop that they try each year to do all possible to prolong the flowering period, which with the help of cold storage bulbs is not hard to do. Every florist with a retail trade should grow rubrum Lilies. There is nothing finer for decorative work, for the corsage or the floral design. A plant grown in a pot makes a showy plant, and if not sold as such will frequently furnish you with flowers for three weeks from the time the first flower is ready to be cut until the last bud begins to open. The further away you are located from the larger cut flower markets, the more valuable are rubrum Lilies in your own establishment, the more necessary it is for you to try and have a few plants to cut from. To plant cold storage bulbs now into 5-in. or 6-in. pots is about all the work you will have with them, outside of watering. They will grow almost anywhere in or outdoors, and bloom in late Summer. Try this for a change: Plant in 6-in. pots now; let the plants come along in a cool house. About May 15 take them outdoors and plant pot and all in a bed or coldframe, deep enough to cover the top of the pot about 4 in. When in flower use the individual blossoms, or if you plant out leave them out all Winter. Every plant will flower again the next year and better than before."

Mr. Bahr is a "live" florist-grower in Highland Park, Ill., and a recognized authority on matters horticultural.

Don't Be

Caught Short

Without our patented cardboard Wreath Forms

Experience has shown us that most of our trade has paid too much for their Wreath Forms because they held back their orders until shipment had to be made by express. This increased the cost of the merchandise from 25 to 35 per cent. Besides, our customers lost business because they did not have the goods on hand—their customers would not wait when delivery could not be made at once. The profit on such specialties comes through having the goods on hand when wanted. It does not pay to approach the Christmas holidays with little goods on hand.

Therefore we suggest to you that you place your orders now for fall requirements in Christmas Wreath Forms.

Send for our line of samples of cardboard Wreath Forms as illustrated in this advertisement. Do it now. Prices and samples will be sent gratis on request. We make the following sizes:

Wreath Forms—4, 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14-inch.

Star Forms—4, 6, 7, 9 and 12-inch.

Heart Forms—5, 6 and 7-inch.

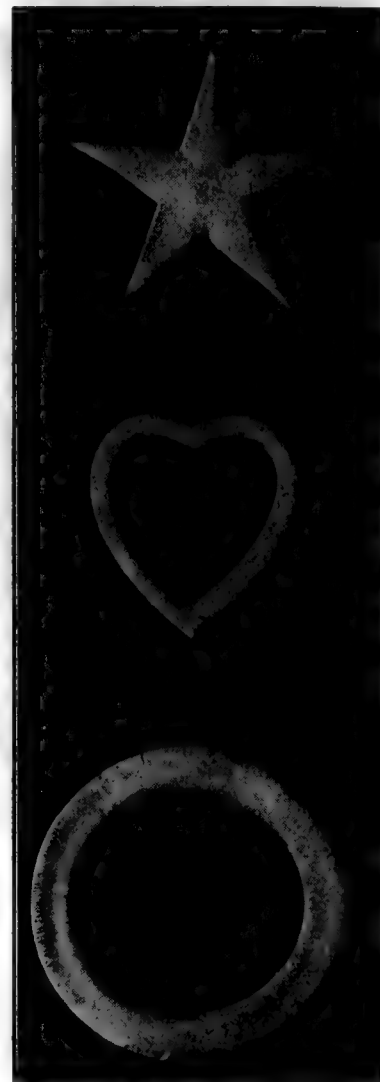

Cross Forms—14x21-inch and 18x30-inch.

FLOWERS FOR JUNE BRIDES

For generations June has been popularly dedicated to the bride. As in all dedications, there is a symbol: Flowers! For those who specialize in that symbol, a wedding may mean, besides the cadent chimes from the corner church, the allegro tinkling of the cash register.

JUNE, avers the pragmatical compounder of cyclopedic truths, is the sixth month of the year, consisting of thirty days, during which the sun enters the sign of Cancer. A definition as colorless as it is concise! June is far beyond the capacity of a few words. This is a month that exceeds the mind and invades the heart. There were more than words in the genius of the man who wrote "The Vision of Sir Launfal" and in that of the author of "Knee Deep in June." During these thirty all-too-brief days there is poetry in the spirits of all, both young and old. There is sentiment, exultation, sweet joy and long walks under moonlit skies.

Here Come the Flowers.

The sign of Cancer, indeed! This, above all, is the month when the bride, pretty in blushes, enters the sign of all future happiness. It is a month of brides, for brides and devoted to brides, with the floral world providing the atmosphere. And therein lies the factor that makes June an exceptional month for the florists' business.

Three parties are inevitable at a wedding—the bride, the groom and flowers. Besides the blooms that belong to the bride and her retinue, there are other flowers. Some are in corsages; some are worn in more natural form; perhaps the tables will be decorated with them; perhaps the entire residence and the altar at the church will be decked with them. But flowers there are bound to be. How many? In what manner? Attractive? Worthy of commendation? The florists' activity and ability are the answer, and whether or not a particular wedding is to be a big success is largely dependent on this trade. Flowers are a wanted "quantity." The trade has only to develop that "want."

At any wedding, of course, the bride-to-be is the center of attraction as well as the center of general activities. All the features of the wedding, one might say, radiate from her, and it is a wise florist who aims to get the prospective bride interested first of all. If the bride can be convinced that the most beautiful corsage is the only one for her, then she will convince the groom-to-be to that effect. It will follow, then, that the bridesmaids must be proportionately lovely, and the whole range of activities will be measured up to the standard set by the bride. It is often just as potent to convince the groom, but, as a matter of fact, he usually does as the inclination of his future wife decides.

Acquaintance Acquires.

The main objective in getting June bride business seems, then, to be contained in the injunction, "Get the bride-to-be interested." It should always be borne in mind in this connection that everyone who is about to take part in or attend a wedding is a prospective flower buyer.

This offers another instance where it pays a florist by square dealing and courteous friendliness to develop an acquaintance with customers that will let him "behind the scenes" once in a while. In this way he is often advised before the newspapers have the news as to when a wedding is to be enacted. Many times genial conversation has disclosed pointers that have led to large profits.

A courteous letter to the prospective bride or groom or even a telephone call made to the bride's parents or other members of the family, inviting them to visit the store and see the new creations, is a quick way to this kind of business. When once the "wedding job" is obtained, it should be carried out with a rigid regard for excellency, because there is no better or worse advertisement than the quality of one's own work. That is direct advertising. Every bridesmaid at that wedding is a prospective bride and, so, a prospective customer of the florist.

Tempus Fugit!

Time flies! And the styles change rapidly. It follows, logically, that if the florist wishes to remain popular with Hymen, he would better keep the pace. For instance, since 1920, styles, customs, decorations—many features have changed. Obviously, it would be decidedly unwise to handle a wedding now a la 1920. Herein reading the society news pays!

Knowing how to do the work, the florist has to go out and get the business. The method of personal contact, a splendid one, has already been touched upon. However, in practically all cases the newspaper offers the broadest field for appeal. And for these June bride advertisements there is a great chance for composing good copy; that is, writing the words for the advertisement in attractive style. For instance, take the well written advertisement of George Hart, illustrated on the next page. This is pulling copy. Imagine, in its place, a blank statement, such as "George Hart has good flowers for all occasions," and the contrast in effect is at once noted. Put yourself in the public's place and then start writing. Description that is magnetic; style that catches the eye; well arranged paragraphs—all these and more can be introduced to make the advertisement worth while. Often it is found profitable to run the photograph of a real bride in the advertisement. Remember that, in any case, you are paying for that space, so it is well worth the time and effort to have the copy right and to the point.

Convincing the Eye.

Still another good medium for advertising is the wedding booklet or something on that order. An attractively printed and well written booklet sent to all the customers on your mailing list at the opening of June, and to any likely prospects, will prove valuable, if it contains facts concerning the possibility of getting satisfaction at your store. Descriptions of wedding decorations, a statement of the latest customs, illustrations of weddings for which the florist has furnished the flowers—all these are business-getters. Perhaps the customer has been married thirty years and is not herself interested, but the chances are that she has young friends to whom she will be only too pleased to show the literature.

As intimated before, the most enduring advertisement is the quality of the work done. The display window offers unlimited possibilities for showing the kind of work one does. Here can be shown wax figures of brides and grooms, with all the corsages, decorations, etc., that are needed. Show the interior of a room at a residence, the altar of a church, or just the bride herself. The window catches the eye of many passers and will cause comment.

When an order has been especially well carried out, it is wise to get in touch with a representative of the local paper. If there is something out of the ordinary, the papers are always glad to get the news, and it eventually means free advertising for the shop. It is June for florists! "Here comes the bride!"

LILA LEE, THE BRIDE.

The exquisite illustration of a June bride on the preceding page shows Miss Lila Lee, the motion picture actress, in one of her most delightful poses. This is an ideal at which florists might aim when fabricating a bride's bouquet. The bouquet is the central point of the picture. If the flowers were suddenly removed from Miss Lee's arms, the effect would be at once noticed and there would be less charm to the picture as a whole. The photograph is printed through the courtesy of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

SIEBRECHT'S BRIDAL BOUQUET.

Simplicity is inevitably characteristic of the great, applying to inanimate as well as animate objects. In line with this logic is the fact that perhaps the greatest danger in executing any bit of artifice lies in overdoing it. Excess balks success. This applies to the making of brides' bouquets, as well as to the other forms of artifice. There may be too many flowers, too much ribbon or an excess of green, or the bouquet may be generally bulky and when the bride appears she may give the impression of bearing up under a heavy weight; the bouquet will become the cynosure of all eyes, and the bride will be second in attraction, whereas she should be the chief attraction and the flowers should be only a delightful means of improving the attraction.

The bride's bouquet on page 19 was wisely designed with an eye to simplicity. It is excellently made up, as can be seen, and, as a matter of fact, its excellency won for it the first prize at the Pasadena, Cal., flower show, April 20 to 22. Henry A. Siebrecht, of Siebrecht's House of Flowers, Pasadena, is responsible for the artistry. In the composition of this delightful piece are lilies of the valley, under which hangs a shower of phalænopsis, the whole being neatly tied with dainty lovers' knots. This bouquet was most accurately described at the time of the show as "airy, girlish, light and not a burden for small white hands."

FOR BRIDE AND BRIDESMAIDS.

When it comes to designing and making up bouquets for weddings, the Duluth Floral Co., of Duluth, Minn., is if the expression is permissible, "there." As evidence, is offered the illustration of a bride and her bridesmaids, which is shown on page 20. The bouquets were designed by J. E. Stapleton, of the Duluth Floral Co. Here is a photograph that the bride will look upon with intense pleasure on her golden anniversary. Like all other things of beauty, it will be "a joy forever."

The occasion of this work was the Abbot wedding, which was one of the great social events at Duluth. The bouquet carried by the bride was entirely of valley, while those of the bridesmaids were made of Columbia roses and pink cornflowers. This is an

CANNERS' ADVERTISING.

An insight into the advertising of the National Canners' Association and its financing is to be had in a report of the recent meeting of the executive committee in Chicago.

The refinancing committee reported that there are open accounts still due the inspection and advertising campaign fund to the extent of $185,966.22. Notes have also been given in respect of such accounts in the sum of $52,874.66. Of these notes $27,197.80 have already been discounted, and the proceeds received therefrom have been applied on the payment of the original $200,000 borrowed from banks to finance the advertising campaign. The application of the proceeds of these notes, together with credits of various amounts collected on account of the fund, leave, according to the committee's statement, a balance of $45,176.42 still due.

Assuming as contingent liability the full amount of the notes already discounted because of the possible failure to have them paid at maturity, there is left a maximum liability on account of the advertising fund of $72,374.22. While the aggregate underwriting of the inspection and advertising program of the association was several times that amount, it seemed evident to the finance committee that in order to maintain the equity of the situation between those who are delinquent subscribers and those who are underwriters, a call for the payment of the full amounts due on the various underwriting agreements should be made at once. Accordingly, the suggested action was approved by the board of directors. It is obvious, from the state of the inspection and advertising fund, that the final underwriting liability incident to it will be extremely small and it is presumed the call will produce no alarm.

WISCONSIN FLORISTS TO MEET.

The summer meeting of the Wisconsin State Florists' Association will be held at Oshkosh, July 25. President Rentschler has appointed the following committee in charge of arrangements: James E. Taylor, chairman; William Buchholz, Ward B. Davis, Carl Fugleberg, J. V. Nelson and R. E. Pamplin.

HOLLANDERS' CONGRESS.

The Netherlands Horticultural and Botanic Society (Nederlandsche Maatschappij voor Tuinbouw en Plantkunde) has decided to hold an international horticultural congress at Amsterdam on the occasion of its fiftieth anniversary, September 27, 1923. Papers will be read on various subjects of scientific research, practical breeding, horticultural education and landscape architecture. Trips are planned to the most important centers of horticulture in Holland. On the same days the Amsterdam section of the society intends to organize a great horticultural exhibition. Further information will be given later. This announcement is issued for the organizing committee by G. F. Van Tets, president, and Dr. M. J. Sirks, secretary, Bergweg 55, Wageningen, Holland.

OPIUM POPPY.

Opium poppy, which has been cultivated in Egypt from an early date, is grown for the narcotic alkaloid opium which it contains. The locality most favorable to its growth is Kena province, seventy-five per cent of which is under opium poppy.

Prior to 1914, considerable opium was imported, mostly from Smyrna, but its quality is inferior to the Egyptian variety. With the outbreak of the war importations ceased and the demand for Egyptian opium increased. In 1918, however, the government issued a decree prohibiting its cultivation in order to increase the area under cereals. This caused the price of opium to advance tremendously. It is said to have reached $90 per pound in the province of Kena during the summer of 1920.

Harvesting of opium takes place about the middle of March. Fresh opium is sold to merchants at the rate of fourteen Egyptian ounces to the rattle (rattle equals twelve English ounces). The merchants shape it into round disks, each weighing from two to three drams. These disks are brushed with the white of an egg to present a better appearance. Dry, pure opium is black-red, resembling cooked coffee. On breaking it shows a soft, compact fracture. It is often adulterated with lentil flour or mixed with "mor higasi," a gum from Hedjaz.

Cooked and ground helbeh or coffee and the epidermis of the pericarp are other adulterations used, but these adulterations can be detected. Pure opium burns without leaving a residue and contains not less than ten per cent of morphine—sometimes as much as twelve per cent. Oil extracted from the seed (fifty to sixty per cent) is used in painting.

The Egyptian government controls the cultivation of opium, since it was being sold for native consumption in considerable quantities and with bad effect. It is possible that the crop will be greatly limited during the present year.

FUCHSIA LEAVES FALLING.

What is the matter with the fuchsia leaves which we have sent? The plants were doing finely and all of a sudden the leaves appeared as though they were burned. The plants were in 2½-inch pots and we repotted them in 4-inch pots about two weeks ago, using a 4-inch potful of bone meal to a bushel of soil.

F. & F.—Wis.

It is quite probable that there is some escaping gas from city mains leaking into the greenhouse. I understand from one of your notes that this main runs close to your greenhouse and I am aware of several cases where gas has caused great damage to greenhouse plants. Usually, however, the damage is most noticeable in winter, when greenhouses are ventilated the least. With a little top ventilation left on your greenhouses, damage from whatever source should be eliminated. Other plants than fuchsias should show injury if growing in the same house. What varieties are you growing other than fuchsias, and how are they affected? If fuchsias only show damage, I should be inclined to think that most probably the compost in which the fuchsias were potted was too strong.

IRIS SOCIETY MEETS

AMERICAN IRIS SOCIETY.

Holds Meeting and Exhibition.

The third annual meeting of the American Iris Society, in connection with an interesting exhibition, was held at the New York Botanical Garden, Bronx park, New York, Saturday, May 27.

A luncheon, at which were forty or more members, was served in the Mansion, and, at the conclusion of the repast, the business session commenced.

Message from President Wister.

Secretary R. S. Sturtevant, of Wellesley Farms, Mass., read a message from President John C. Wister, who is in France, in which Mr. Wister said that he hoped the work of the past year would be thoroughly discussed, and that members would make suggestions as to the work of the coming year. There had been considerable satisfaction expressed at the work of the society, he wrote, as he had noted when visiting recently various sections of the country as far west as Colorado, which gave much pleasure, as there could be no feeling that the society was run by a small group. He felt that the members should be proud of the society's publication, and expressed the hope that in time more and larger bulletins could be published. It was merely a matter of finances, he stated. With the growth of the organization the clerical work increased, and it became imperative that the secretary be paid a proper salary for his work. An appeal for contributions sent out last winter had resulted in a fund amounting to $358, from about fifty persons, from which a new bulletin would be published, to consist largely of official descriptions of varieties. He referred to the symposium recently published, which dealt with varieties, and gave it as his belief that another and more general symposium should be produced five or ten years hence. He believed the test garden established at the New York Botanical Garden would prove of great value during this and succeeding years. He hoped that discussion would be had looking to the best means for discouraging iris breeders from naming and introducing varieties which have not been passed upon by the society and pronounced worthy. He said an endeavor would be made at the international conference on irises, to be held in Paris early in the month, to secure international action in regard to nomenclature, registration, classification and description.

Secretary's Report.

The report presented by Secretary R. S. Sturtevant was as follows:

"With the opportunities offered by our monthly page in the Flower Grower, a detailed report of work for the year seems unnecessary and I have occasion elsewhere to report on special subjects.

"The international conference on irises, at Paris, has largely influenced our work for the year, and today, as we meet here, our president, John C. Wister, is in discussion with other iris authorities in Paris at the opening of the conference. We have been accomplishing a pioneer work in standardizing and distributing information concerning irises; we have established nomenclature and methods of registration, judging and description; it remains to be seen to what extent our work will gain international acceptance. With Mr. Wister and Lee R. Bonnewitz to represent our interests, we can hope for success, and already from Mr. Wister's letters I can promise you notes of interest for our next bulletin. He has found the pumila hybrids and intermediates in fine condition, but far, far too many in number and not sufficiently distinct one from another. I am looking forward to his later reports, as I understand that Lent A. Williamson's and some of Miss Sturtevant's seedlings, as well as B. F. Farr's, are to be exhibited at London in competition 1921 membership list, and, lastly, the symposium, probably our most valuable contribution to the literature of the iris. I cannot too greatly emphasize the splendid work of Mr. Connell in compiling the votes of the symposium jury; I wish that he were with us to receive personal thanks from each of you. Of minor importance as publications are the new edition of the data cards for descriptions and a pamphlet on exhibition policy and management, accompanied by a full outfit of exhibition supplies that are obtainable at a nominal cost.

"Last year we assisted in some seven or eight exhibitions. This year I have already had reports of success in Nashville, Louisville, Kansas City, Richmond and Cincinnati, and await word from Canada and the northern states. Our policy has proved successful and I should not be surprised to find that we were cooperating in twenty-five exhibits in a not far distant year. These form our chief means of publicity and develop great enthusiasm. At the last meeting Chicago bid for our 1923 annual meeting, and just before I left home I received the heartiest of invitations for us to meet in Cincinnati, with the added inducement of seeing a batch of seedlings far finer than the famed Dominion. Mrs. Samuel Taft is an ardent iris lady and could give us a royal welcome. Personally, I am glad that I do not have to decide between these rival claims.

"In closing, I wish to urge everyone of you to send me notes for publication. They have been few this last year and I fear that I have been delinquent, perhaps, in my acknowledgments of your letters, but the pressure of the routine work has become heavy and your letters are the only things that make the job worth while."

The fee for life membership was, by vote, increased from $25 to $50.

Proposals and Discussion.

There was some discussion as to the advisability of continuing the selection of the Flower Grower, published at Calicum, N. Y., as the official organ of the society, on the present payment basis.

Miss Grace Sturtevant made a plea for the better establishment of iris nomenclature.

Resolutions of thanks were passed to the Horticultural Society of New York, to the New York Botanical Garden, to Dr. N. L. Britton and to Mrs. George F. Nash for their hearty assistance in connection with the meeting and exhibition.

After adjournment all journeyed to the test garden, which is located opposite the Fordham hospital and near the old 1917 convention garden of the S. A. F. This garden was not established to try out new varieties, as many suppose but to gather together a collection of general varieties for nomenclature purposes, and the result already is wonderful. There are more than a thousand varieties planted, covering mainly the germanica and pallida sections, with a few of the pumila and sibirica varieties. Fully 500 varieties were in "The number of our members is promising; fifty per cent had renewed their subscriptions before January 15 and over eighty per cent are now with us, together with at least 100 new friends, and I expect that we shall easily increase our membership beyond our record of 650 for 1921. It is, however, the real interest of our members, expressed by voluntary contributions of close to $1,200 in the last twelve months, that is most impressive. Through this generosity we have published the check list, have arranged to add greatly to the number of varieties represented in the test garden at Bronx park, and can plan to publish a bulletin this coming summer.

Year's Work.

"Since our meeting last year as guests of the Columbus Iris Society, we have published, in addition to the monthly notes in the Flower Grower, a bulletin on Sir Michael Foster and his work, a check list of varieties, a flower at the time of the visit; many had passed, and others were yet to bloom. Notebooks were kept busy until a shower dispersed all but the most ardent iris enthusiasts.

Those Winning.

The exhibition was held in the museum building, and, under the circumstances, was highly creditable.

The exhibition date had been changed from June 3 to May 27, and, even with this advancement, many varieties had passed, and a considerable number of the exhibits stood up but poorly, and collections were cut down. The showing made by commercial exhibitors was not large, but indeed commendable. The John Scheepers Co., New York, had a splendid exhibit on the broad landing of a stairway, but it was for exhibition only and not for competition. In the exhibit was the new variety, Asia, which everybody wanted to see. In the exhibit also were several stalks of eremurus.

John Lewis Childs, Inc., Flowerfield, N. Y., won the society's silver medal for the most comprehensive display, and also the prize for a special display to cover 100 square feet.

B. H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa., took first for a variety with blended tones; first for a collection of fifty distinct varieties, and seconds for collections of twelve and six, John Lewis Childs, Inc., taking the firsts.

The Garden Club of New Rochelle was the winner in the class for a display of at least ten varieties to cover fifteen square feet, with or without other hardy flowers and foliage.

Among the exhibits was noticed the variety Ambassador, Vilmorin's, Paris, 1920, introduction; the varieties Asia and Prospero, introduced by Wallace, of England, and the new variety, Mother of Pearl, by R. S. Sturtevant, of Wellesley Farms, Mass.

Election of Officers.

Election of officers resulted in the reelection of all officeholders, as follows: President, John C. Wister, Philadelphia; vice-president, William A. Peterson, Chicago; secretary, R. S. Sturtevant, Wellesley Farms, Mass.; treasurer, Frank H. Presby, Montclair, N. J.; directors, to serve three years, James Boyd, Haverford, Pa., and Bertrand H. Farr, Wyomissing, Pa.; regional vice-presidents, eastern district, I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, N. Y.; central district, Mrs. Samuel H. Taft, Cincinnati; northwestern district, T. A. Kenning, Minneapolis, Minn.; southern district, C. P. Connell, Nashville, Tenn.; Pacific district, Sydney B. Mitchell, Berkeley, Cal., and Canadian district, W. E. Saunders, London, Ont. J. H. P.

QUARANTINE 37

CHANGES IN QUARANTINE.

It will probably be July 1 before the federal horticultural board announces any changes in regulations 3 of quarantine 37, as a result of the conference held May 15 and 16. The special advisory committee appointed by Secretary Wallace to attend the conference and make a report on the changes proposed has not yet submitted its recommendations, nor have the various committees put their suggestions before the department formally.

Officials of the board hold out no promises of any great change in the regulations. They adhere to their former attitude that no chance must be given for the introduction of new pests and diseases and that America must make provision to supply all horticultural needs from within herself, rather than from Europe.

This last was strongly impressed upon the horticultural delegates from England, Holland and Belgium who attended the conference and later had a discussion with Chairman Marlatt and other officials of the board, during which they took up the international question. Intimations that retaliatory orders might be issued by foreign countries made no impression upon the board, which pointed out that the United States makes no material plant exportations, but, on the contrary, has always been a big importer. There will be no change in the regulations so as to permit the free importation of plant products, the foreigners were told, the original plant quarantine act making such an agreement impossible, even if the board were inclined to favor it.

Any changes made in regulations 3 will be slight, it is indicated at the Department of Agriculture, and calculated more to define clearly what is and what is not permissible matter than to relax the restrictions. The bulk list will be clarified somewhat, it is understood, and other minor changes will be made for the purpose of making importations of permissible stock easier than they have been in the past. T. SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Vaughan's Quarantine Resolution.

J. C. Vaughan, national councilor for the S. A. F. in the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, presented the following resolution to the chamber May 20, with this message: "On behalf of the Society of American Florists, a trade organization having ten votes in the Chamber of Commerce, I enclose a statement and proposed resolution for action by your body. I hope for an early acceptance of the same."

J. C. Vaughan, councilor representing the Society of American Florists, wishes to call to the council's attention a most serious innovation in bureaucratic control of commerce under which, in the guise of a quarantine, an absolute prohibition has been established against imports of healthy plants and bulbs except a certain few specified varieties and except in such cases as special permits may be granted for importation of the excluded material at the pleasure of the federal horticultural board.

This order, known as quarantine 37, put in effect June 1, 1919, has destroyed an extensive commerce which had been in existence for 100 years and it is now proposed to extend it further by an arbitrary executive action without legislative consideration or an opportunity for the interests affected to be heard before an impartial tribunal.

Though defended as a measure to prevent the importation of insects and diseases, this quarantine reverses the method of all other quarantines and instead of specifying insects and diseases or plants subject to them which are barred from import, it prohibits all importations even of plants free from disease and insects except the few specified classes which are allowed. Power is retained by the federal horticultural board to issue special permits to firms or individuals to import materials otherwise excluded. This sets up a system of special favors to be granted or withheld at the whim of a bureau official for reasons good or bad, honest or dishonest, without public record or the pretense of judicial hearing. This places concerns engaged in the business of importing horticultural material at the mercy of the federal horticultural board and destroys the principle of equality before the law. The commercial effect of this alleged quarantine, which is really a wall erected against all imports, whether healthy or diseased, has been to afford certain special producing interests protection far in excess of any conceivable tariff protection, inasmuch that in discussions of the quarantine and in its defense by the chairman of the federal horticultural board it is now considered, not as a protection against disease, but as a protection against foreign competition, thus presenting the spectacle of a federal horticultural board usurping the functions of a tariff board.

Though as yet applied only to plants and bulbs, the reasoning which is behind quarantine 37, if allowed to prevail and to be extended, would justify the exclusion of fruits and other food products, indeed of all materials of vegetable or animal origin which an executive board might profess to believe harbored insect life or disease germs and decide to shut out of this country except when imported under special permits issued by themselves. In view of the importance of this novel and radical application of the quarantine to commerce in general and the danger of its indefinite extension by doctrinaires should its present use be confirmed and amplified, I move the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved: That the directors of the United States Chamber of Commerce be and they are hereby requested to investigate the legality of quarantine 37 as established by the federal horticultural board, the fairness of its enforcement and the possibility of the application of its principle for restraint of commerce in general and that if such investigation indicates cause, a congressional investigation of the federal horticultural board and its action in promulgating and enforcing quarantine 37 shall be requested in the name of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

PAY FOR PARTNERS.

For some reason or other, few employees in the greenhouse business acquire enough in the way of cash capital to embark in business for themselves without outside assistance. So it is frequently the case that a partnership is formed between a man experienced in greenhouse work but with little or no capital and a person unacquainted with the flower business whose contribution to the firm is enough money to make a start. In partnerships of this type the question frequently arises how the profits are to be divided so that each of those interested will have an equitable share. No hard and fast rule can be laid down governing such cases, but a few suggestions as to ways which have been successful in actual practice may assist those who find this question a puzzling one.

To take first an extreme case, let us suppose that a grower with no money forms a partnership with a man who invests several thousand dollars, but knows nothing about flowers and takes no active part in the business. The grower wishes to be more than an employee or manager for the person who furnishes the capital; he wishes to be on a basis so that he will have a real investment in the concern's business and will be entitled to a certain share of the profits. First of all, the grower is entitled to pay for his services, in proportion to the responsibility which devolves upon the manager of the enterprise. After such salary is paid, the grower may feel that he is entitled to a share of the remaining profits, but the proportion of his share and that of his inactive partner may be a matter of considerable argument. One way to establish a basis that will not be questioned is for the grower to pay into the business out of his salary, in installments, a sum equal to that supplied by his partner. The result of this would be that each would have an equal investment in the business and would share alike in the profits without question on either side.

Where one partner contributes his experience as a grower and the other manages the business end of the enterprise and furnishes the capital, the division of the profits is not so easily arrived at. One way of adjustment would be for the grower to draw a salary commensurate with his experience and responsibility, while the partner would also draw a salary which would be fair payment for the type of work he does. The profits after the salaries of both are paid might be divided on any agreed basis. In this case, also, the grower might plan to pay into the firm a sum of money equal to that invested by his partner at the outset, so that they would thereby become equal partners. Of course, if either member of the firm is satisfied to draw a minor share of the profits, he may arrange to make his investment proportionately smaller.

If both partners contribute capital at the beginning of the enterprise, and their experience in the trade is widely disproportionate, the solution again would seem to lie in paying a salary in proportion to the services and experience of each and in dividing the profits remaining in accordance with the capital invested.

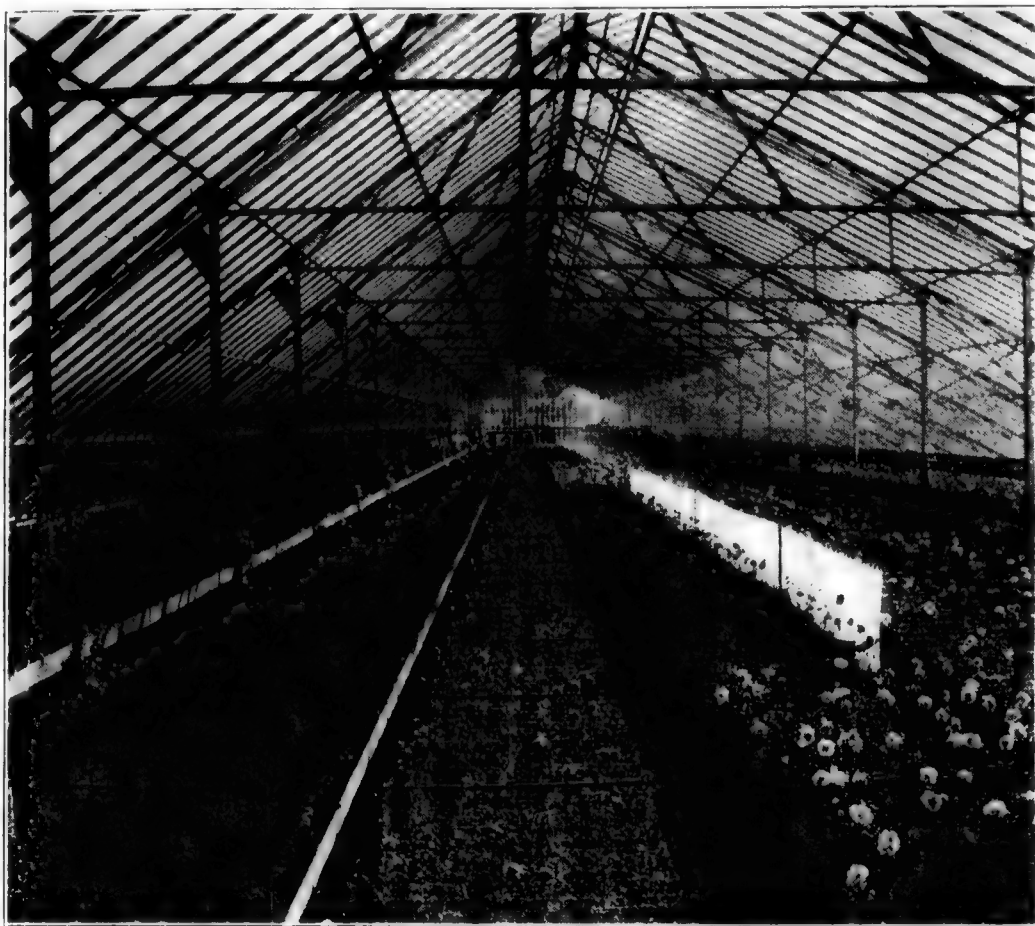

In case the partner without capital wishes to pay in enough to put him on an equal footing with the man who has the money, the latter might ask, not without fairness, that the former give to the firm promissory notes, which would pay the current rate of interest. This arrangement should satisfy one who wished to keep the books on a logical and mathematical basis.

MAKING SPACE COUNT.

Among carnation men the name of W. D. Howard has meaning, both because he recently completed a term as president of the American Carnation Society and because he is one of the foremost of a number of skilled growers of carnations in New England. His greenhouses, at Milford, Mass. are primarily devoted to this one flower, but, believing in making every foot of space count, Mr. Howard grows some sweet peas on the posts and runs a line of boxes down the side walls and along the supports, in which he can grow enough stock to pay the wages of a helper. A look at the illustration on this page, which shows the interior of one of Mr. Howard's carnation houses, reveals how well he utilizes every foot of space.

Aside from these plants that fill odd spaces, the whole range at Milford is devoted to carnations except one house, where they do not do well, which is given over to Godfrey callas. Mrs. C. W. Ward is a favorite variety. Matchless comes next in favor. White Delight, Pink Delight and Cottage Maid are grown in considerable numbers, while Benora, the only variegated variety grown, has a house to itself. A small lot of Morning Glow is grown and a few benches of Laddie. Main Sunshine, Bernice and Eureka do well, and some Belle Washburn are still grown. All plants are grown in raised benches.

The view in Mr. Howard's largest house, which is 65x300 feet and contains ten benches four and one-half feet wide, holding 27,000 plants, is a fine sight, as may well be imagined after a glance at the illustration. Although Mr. Howard did not begin his career as a grower until his health gave out as a machinist when he was about 30, he now has a most thorough knowledge of carnation culture and his son Ray, his valued assistant, absorbs his father's greenhouse learning.

GROWING DELPHINIUMS.

Will you kindly advise me how to grow delphiniums?

S. M. F. & S.—Mich.

You do not state whether you wish to grow the delphiniums from seed, from cuttings or by means of root division, but all of these methods are equally simple. They will do well in garden soil, but better results will be obtained if a deep, rich, sandy loam which is exposed to the sun is used.

The annuals are raised from the seed, while the perennials are generally grown from cuttings or by means of root division. The seeds should be planted in the greenhouse in March or earlier. Sufficient growing space must be given the young seedlings by transplanting them as fast as they grow. Set outdoors in June. If the seeds are planted in late spring or early summer, careful watering must be done during the dry weather. These plants will flower the next summer. To grow them from cuttings, take a few cuttings from the plants early in the spring, or use cuttings from the plants after the flower stems have been removed. These cuttings will root easily in a frame which is shaded, and no bottom heat will be required. An occasional sprinkling will be necessary during the hot weather. After the cuttings are rooted, they are treated in the same manner as the seedlings spoken of above.

The roots of the perennials are often left unprotected in the garden during the winter. It is best, however, to cover the bed with a dressing of barnyard manure when the ground begins to freeze. This will not only protect the underground buds, but will also enrich the soil. It will be better also to spade the manure into the ground in the spring rather than remove it entirely, as the delphinium can easily use a great deal of fertility, and better flowers will result.

TEXAS-GROWN FREESIAS.

Will you give us information as to how Texas-grown freesias flower? Are they as good as California-grown stock?

J. S. S.—O.

I have never handled Texas-grown freesias, but I see no reason whatever why they should not be just as good as those grown in California. If you can secure long, thin bulbs, they will please growers better than the round, heavy ones usually offered. I have never been able to purchase as satisfactory freesia bulbs grown outdoors as are grown under glass. If only the tops of the spikes are cut, without the foliage, and the plants are allowed to ripen off naturally, freesias, no matter whether grown in pots, pans, flats or benches, produce bulbs of the highest quality for growing. Perhaps some reader can tell us about Texas-grown freesias. Why not send a few to good growers in your vicinity to try out for forcing? C. W.

Frost, O.—John S. Leach, who formerly owned the range of the Hartford City Floral Co., Hartford City, Ind., and who is now farming, will enter the trade with outdoor flowers.

Geraniums

COMMERCIAL GERANIUMS.

Will you please give me a list of the best commercial varieties of geraniums to grow?
H. D. H.—O.

Good commercial varieties for you to handle are: Salmon, Beaute Poitevine; red, Alphonse Ricard, S. A. Nutt, General Grant and Maryland; white, Comtesse d'Harcourt; pink, Jean Oberle, Berthe de Presilly. Other fine sorts are Helen Michell, Mme. Buchner, Jean Viaud, Mrs. Lawrence and Marquis de Montmort. Far the greatest call is for scarlets and probably it would be well to grow from two-thirds to three-fourths of this shade. Salmon and pink come next, and white last. Save good stock for yourself, plant it out not too thickly and do not take cuttings until late. October gives firmer cuttings than September and a far larger proportion will root. Watch The Review from time to time and you will find seasonable notes on geraniums and other bedding plants.
C. W.

BLIND WOOD ON GERANIUMS.

This spring I found it necessary to throw out about half of my geranium plants, which seemed to be growing blind shoots. The shoots came out double and the leaves would often be deformed. The plants were vigorous, but would throw few blooms. Would this be caused by taking cuttings too closely, or are some varieties inclined to do this under any treatment? What would you advise putting on the benches in which to stand potted geraniums, in order to prevent them from drying out so rapidly? This year I had them standing on benches which contained six inches of soil. Some of the plants were partly submerged in the soil and I found that if they were not moved quite frequently they rooted down in the soil and then began to make a soft, rank growth.

What would be the best proportions to use in making a compost for the potted geraniums, and should bone meal be used in the compost at any time? I have one house with solid beds. Would this give satisfactory results if potted geraniums were set on this at their final shift?
H. D. H.—O.

I should say that careless selection of cuttings had been responsible for your plants throwing so much blind wood. Some growers use coal ashes beneath their pots successfully. Others find ashes harmful. Coarse sand is always safe. It is not a good plan to allow stock to remain long in one place and root through. This causes rank growth and such wood is too soft to flower well. Short, stocky wood which is firm will produce flowers. Frequent spacing of bedding geraniums, with picking over for decayed leaves and flowers, is necessary to get A-1 stock. Grow cool and well ventilated; 45 to 50 degrees at night in winter is ample. Give them plenty of sunshine, and do not play the hose over your plants. A little bone meal added to the potting soil will be found beneficial. Any manure used should be old and of such a consistency that it will readily crumble in the hands. There is nothing you can stand on the benches to prevent geraniums from drying out so rapidly, but at this season if you chance to have some cold-frame sashes, you can advantageously plunge at least part of your stock in them in ordinary loam; the plants will then dry out much less and will take on an excellent color. Of course, sashes should be kept over them for a few days as a shelter from rain storms. Solid beds should prove all right to set your plants on after their final shift, provided you space them apart and thus prevent too much rooting through.

C. W.

CARRYING ROSES OVER.

How should roses be handled that are to be carried over for a second year? What treatment should they receive?

A. H. K.—Kan.

After Memorial day, or at least after June weddings, roses to be carried over should be gradually rested, by being kept drier at the root. The plants should be judiciously pruned before being started up, at which time some of the old surface soil can be removed and a top-dressing of fresh loam given, or the old soil can be retained and a mulch of old cow manure spread over the beds. This is better than fresh cow manure, which will come in useful as growth progresses later in the season.
C. W.

POINSETTIA CUTTINGS.

When should poinsettia cuttings be taken and under what conditions should they be rooted?
A. H. K.—Kan.

Poinsettia cuttings can be taken advantageously from May 1 to August 1. The latter date is for dwarf plants to be used in making up pans. Short-jointed cuttings rubbed off with a heel are the best. Dip the ends of the cuttings in powdered charcoal as soon as they are taken off, to stop bleeding. The cuttings will root well in a mixture of fine charcoal and sand in a regular propagating bench or in coarse sand, or they can be put singly in small pots of fine charcoal, coarse sand or even fine coal ashes. The last medium I have found excellent. Careful watering, avoidance of sunshine and drafts, and a warm house make for success in rooting poinsettias.

CARNATIONS

WILTING CARNATIONS.

We are having some trouble with our Belle Washburn blooms and do not know how to remedy the situation. We have been cutting blooms all season and these have been excellent until about two weeks ago. Since then we have cared for the plants in the same manner and the blooms remain fine as long as they are on the plants, but as soon as they are cut and placed in water, they go to sleep, and in a large number of cases turn black around the edges. Twenty-four hours after cutting it is not uncommon for us to throw away the whole cut. What can we do about this trouble?
R. G.—N. M.

We have not grown Belle Washburn for several years, but never had any such experience with it when we did grow it. This variety has never been famous for long keeping and is usually one of the first to suffer in the exhibitions. It is probably not a good warm weather variety.

Try placing the stems deep in water for an hour after they are cut from the plants. After they have been in the water for an hour, cut the stems again and replace the flowers in water to the usual depth. They evidently do not take up water properly and this may help. Do not place them in the icebox. A cool cellar is the best place, provided there is proper ventilation. If the blooms keep well on the plants, there is nothing wrong with the watering. This is proved by the way your other varieties are keeping.

A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS OUTDOORS.

Is it advisable to plant carnations immediately in the benches where they are to bloom, without first putting them out in the fields and then bringing them in sometime during midsummer? Will they be as sturdy if bedded in June, or should they be field-grown?
A. H. K.—Kan.

In your state I should prefer to plant the carnations outdoors and house about the end of July. Some growers keep their plants indoors all summer, but the number of these does not seem to increase. Indoor culture should not be attempted unless you have large, roomy, well-ventilated houses. I should certainly plant outdoors for two months at least and, if you have facilities to water them outdoors and keep the soil well cultivated, your stock should do well and not be much troubled with red spider.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Executive Committee Meets.

At the executive committee meeting of the American Rose Society, at the Cosmos Club, Washington, D. C., May 15, the following members were present: Robert Pyle, president; F. L. Atkins, S. S. Pennock, J. Horace McFarland and H. Mills. Invited guests were E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; Dr. W. A. Taylor, F. L. Mulford and Dr. L. C. Corbett, of the Department of Agriculture; Richardson Wright and J. J. Lane, of House and Garden, and E. A. White, Cornell University.

Because of the absence of the secretary, who is in Europe, E. A. White was appointed secretary pro tem.

President Pyle reported a membership of 2,487. The first business transacted was in regard to the distribution of the Mary Wallace rose. President Pyle reported that his firm had propagated about 1,700 plants for the Department of Agriculture and Professor Corbett reported the department had propagated about 700.

It was pointed out that since the American Rose Society has now become incorporated, it will be proper to enter into a definite contract with the Department of Agriculture and it was decided to plant out the stock of the Mary Wallace rose thus far propagated, so that the dormant plants in 2-year size might be distributed to the firms who will have made application by December 1, 1922. Because the stock is sure to be irregular in size, it was decided that all should be brought together under charge of the Department of Agriculture for equitable distribution at the proper time.

Plans were made to have the rose photographed at its best and to have material prepared so all information and illustrations may be embodied in the circular to be issued to all the firms distributing the rose for use by them in advertising it, each firm to pay for the number of circulars used.

Other Activities Proposed.

It was further voted that the request be addressed to the Department of Agriculture that the American Rose Society be allowed to coöperate in the introduction of other Van Fleet novelties, including the rugosa hybrid, R. rugosa crossed with R. polyantha, and the cross between R. Wichuraiana and Duchess of Wellington. It is hoped that it may be possible to introduce several varieties at one time.

Due to the small attendance of members at the meeting at Indianapolis, at which time the annual meeting had been postponed, plans were made for the annual meeting to be held in rose season. Invitations were received from Bobbink & Atkins, of Rutherford, N. J.; Mrs. Aaron Ward, Roslyn, N. Y., and the Syracuse Rose Society, the latter being supplemented by Prof. E. A. White, who stated that the rose test gardens, at Cornell, would be on exhibition during June 23 and 24, at the time of the farmers' field days.

It was felt that Dr. Mills, president of the Syracuse Rose Society, was entitled to special recognition by reason of his work in establishing local rose societies throughout central New York state; therefore, the invitation from the Syracuse Rose Society to hold the annual meeting under its charge was accepted, the precise date to be announced later, probably June 20, 21 or 22. Dr. Mills indicated that the plans for the meeting included judging of exhibition by designated members of the executive committee in the morning; luncheon at Skaneateles lake; an afternoon meeting in Mrs. Hitchcock's rose garden, and an evening session with speakers in the exhibition hall.

Plans were made to announce all pilgrimages to the different rose gardens associated with the American Rose Society, notice of these to be announced in the trade papers.

J. Horace McFarland, upon his request, was released as chairman of the membership committee and Joseph J. Lane, now associated with House and Garden, was appointed chairman to fill the vacancy.

BLIGHT ON ROSES.

We have mailed you some Kaiserin Augusta Victoria roses. These plants are affected with a disease which is unknown to us and we should like to have you advise us what the disease is and how to combat it.

J. J. F. Co.—Va.

The Kaiserin foliage sent was affected with blight, to which this rose is subject. Not having had any experience with the disease, I am unable to give the cause of it; neither am I able to give a remedy for it. It is my opinion, however, that the disease is caused by allowing the plants to remain wet for too long a time. Under these circumstances the soil becomes soggy and root action is retarded, and generally ceases entirely. If the soil has become soggy, running it a little on the dry side, followed by a heavy watering to open up the soil, will help to overcome the trouble.

Newsy Items from All Over

Elwood, Ind.—Lee Goins has entered the trade, growing plants of all kinds. Mr. Goins has been a grower for many years and is well versed in this business.

Kansas City, Kan.—L. C. Fields used a full page in the Kansas City Kansan May 25 to advertise Memorial day flowers, quoting prices on staple items of cut stock and also on plants and wreaths for the holiday. The extensive advertising of this firm is rapidly increasing its business.

Beacon, N. Y.—The Home Garden Brigade, enrolled by Benjamin Hammond among the school children here, attains greater proportions each year. This is the fourteenth year of the brigade. Last year 135 children won prizes for making their homes attractive by gardening. This year an exhibition may be held of the children's products.

Ossining, N. Y.—The greenhouse property on River street, lately owned by Arleigh C. Hendry, was sold Tuesday, May 16, in foreclosure proceedings by S. L. Huntington as referee. The sale was made at the office of Mr. Huntington and the purchase price was $9,000. The purchaser was Antonio Angellilo, who held a mortgage on the place.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A fire which originated in the rear of the building occupied by the Drumm Seed & Floral Co. threatened the firm's quarters with destruction May 10. The damage to the building occupied by the seed company amounted to $5,000, while the amount of stock lost equals $15,000.

Burlington, Ia.—A cloudburst and resulting floods May 26 caused thousands of dollars' damage in Burlington. The partial destruction of the Ashborne Goldfish & Supply Co. building, on Agency street, caused a $15,000 loss. Hundreds of goldfish were swept from tanks and carried away. Many of them became stranded in pools as the water receded and boys and girls spent hours capturing the finny pets.

Norristown, Pa.—Four men narrowly escaped being buried beneath a concrete floor in the greenhouses of William Yeager when a loaded coal delivery truck, in being backed up to the building, struck one of the iron posts on which the girders supporting the floor rested. The post gave way at the contact with the truck and the entire floor, about sixty square feet, buckled, the center dropping down in the shape of a huge basin. It is estimated that the loss in building and flowers will amount to several thousand dollars.

OBITUARY

Charles W. Phillips.

Charles W. Phillips, veteran florist of Walla Walla, Wash., died May 18 at a local hospital, following a brief illness.

Mr. Phillips was born at Salem, Ore., May 27, 1855, and four years later moved to the Walla Walla valley, where his kindly disposition made many friends for him throughout his lifetime. Always a keen lover of plants and flowers, he naturally turned to the business of growing them. Besides being a florist, he was a decorator of exceptional ability. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie S. Phillips, and nine children.

Mrs. May Bonnot.

Mrs. May Bonnot, of New York city, died May 20, at the St. Francis hospital from an operation following an attack of pneumonia. Mrs. Bonnot was the wife of the well known New York and Brooklyn florist, Leon Bonnot, who was formerly in business in New York and in Jersey City, N. J., operating under the name of Bonnot Bros. He was also engaged in the trade in Hoboken and Flemington, N. J.

C. C. Thomas.

All his friends, in the east and west, will regret to hear of the death of C. C. Thomas, of Los Angeles. Mr. Thomas went to Los Angeles about three years ago from Indianapolis, Ind., and joined the staff of Lichtenberg's, Frank Lichtenberg having formerly worked with him for Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis. Although Mr. Thomas had been sick for a week or more, he had apparently improved and May 22 talked of going back to the store the next day. A high blood pressure, followed by a hemorrhage of the lungs, brought him down suddenly and he died from heart failure the following night.

Mr. Thomas, during his stay in Los Angeles, made many friends in the business, owing to his unfailing courtesy and good nature, and he will be greatly missed. He had considerable trouble with his health and Mrs. Thomas had also been ill a great deal during the last year. Mr. Thomas was about 55 years of age and leaves only a wife, no children.

John F. Hargrave, proprietor of Hargrave's Seed Store, Galveston, Tex., and grand knight of Galveston Council No. 787, Knights of Columbus, an active worker in civic and fraternal circles, died May 10, at his residence, 1207 E. avenue. Mr. Hargrave was a native Galvestonian, having been born there January 28, 1879. He was 43 years old.

Mr. Hargrave was well known throughout the state as an enthusiastic and capable worker in all Knights of Columbus and Catholic activities. He was a member of the Travelers' Protective Association and of the Grand Fraternity. He was also a member of the fourth degree assembly, Knights of Columbus, and president of Sacred Heart Parish.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ada Hargrave; two daughters, Anna and Ada V. Hargrave; his mother, Mrs.

William Parsons, prominent horticulturist and musical director, of Painesville, O., died May 25, from injuries sustained when he fell from a tree which he was trimming in City park. He was 56 years of age, and grew flowers and plants for the retail trade and especially for Lake Erie College. He was also superintendent of parks.

Mr. Parsons came to Painesville sixteen years ago from New Castle, Pa., and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, a thirty-second degree Mason and a Shriner. For eleven years the deceased was the director of the Euclid band at Euclid, O., also the director of the Painesville Citizens' band and originator of the Excelsior Military band. Mr. Parsons is survived by his widow, two daughters, Mrs. Merrill Hodges, of West Washington street, and Miss Lillian Parsons; also a son, Otto Parsons.

W. J. M.

Lorenz P. Geiger.

Members of the trade in Chicago were shocked to learn of the untimely death of Lorenz P. Geiger, who, though only 32 years old, had become well known through his long connection with Frank Oechsli, having acted as his book-keeper for several years and having been in his employ since boyhood. Mr. Geiger died at 9 a. m., May 30, at Baltimore, N. M. He had been in New Mexico about a month, having gone because of lung trouble. Complications ensued, resulting in his death. Mrs. Geiger and her sister were in New Mexico with Mr. Geiger.

Mr. Geiger is survived by his wife, his mother, two sisters and two brothers, Herman Geiger and Paul Geiger, the latter being foreman of Frank Oechsli's Forest Park range. The body is being brought home—for burial, and funeral services will be held Saturday, June 3, at 2 p. m., at the chapel of Kampp & Son, 318 North Central avenue, in Austin.

Patrick Welch.

The florists' trade of this country lost one of its outstanding figures the morning of May 25, when Patrick Welch, of Boston, Mass., passed away.

As president of Welch Bros. Co., one of the oldest and largest wholesale houses in the east, and as an ex-president of the Society of American Florists, Mr. Welch had a host of warm friends who will miss him. At his death he was 64 years of age.

Patrick Welch was born in Ireland in 1858, and at the age of 23 years came to Massachusetts with his parents, who made their residence at Dorchester. Immediately thereafter he entered the florists' profession, taking employment at the conservatories of William Wales, at Dorchester. In 1873 Mr. Welch was employed by Holbrook & Tompkins, who had bought the business of Mr. Wales. This firm opened what was, perhaps, the first store in Boston for the purpose of selling cut flowers, and it became a part of Mr. Welch's duty to deliver the cut to the city each day.

In the same year Mr. Welch went out on the road to sell a machine for fumigating, which had been invented by one William Wheeler. Mr. Welch proved a good salesman, for at almost the first trial he succeeded in selling E. M. Wood, proprietor of the Waban Conservatories, Natick, Mass., four of the machines. Mr. Wood, struck with the selling ability of Mr. Welch, offered him a position, "if he so desired." As a consequence, in 1876 Mr. Welch became Boston salesman for the Waban Conservatories, later going to Philadelphia, where he sold to the full satisfaction of his employers.

In 1877 Mr. Welch started the business of selling flowers on commission. And it is said that from that date may be dated the pioneer work of the wholesale florist in the eastern United States. At that time the only other wholesale house was that of James Hart, New York.

After a period of three years, during which Mr. Welch did not have a regular place of business, but carried his stock from place to place, he leased a store in a basement at Tremont and West street, Boston. This was in 1879, during which year Edward Welch joined his brother and formed the firm of Welch Bros. Later on another brother, David, joined the firm. The enterprise grew rapidly and soon moved to larger quarters, at 165 Tremont street; ten years later still another move was made, to Beacon street, thence to 15 Province street, and in 1906 to 226 Devonshire street. In 1912 the firm was incorporated as Welch Bros. Co., with a capitalization of $75,000.

March 29, 1915, it was announced that Patrick Welch had opened a new commission house, at 262 Devonshire street. This was under his personal management, although he still retained his interest in Welch Bros. Co. In 1916 a reorganization of Welch Bros. Co. was effected, following the resignation of David Welch and Edward J. Welch, who had opened commission houses of their own. At that time Patrick Welch still retained his office as president and treasurer. Henry Haas was elected manager and Frank J. Reynolds assistant manager. In 1917 Patrick Welch's firm was united with Welch Bros. Co. The staffs of both places were retained, and a larger business was immediately built. Patrick Welch was at the head of the concern so formed and retained his position until his death.

Among his business interests outside of Welch Bros. Co., Patrick Welch was treasurer of the Montreal Floral Exchange and secretary and treasurer of the Albany Cut Flower Exchange.

At all times Mr. Welch was active in matters pertaining to trade organization. He was especially prominent in the S. A. F., of which he was elected president in 1914, after having served a term as vice-president and filled other important posts. He was a member and ex-president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Boston, a member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, a member of the American Carnation Society, a member of the executive board of the American Rose Society, a member of the American Sweet Pea Society and an ex-president of the Horticultural Club of Boston.

He was also a member of the New York Florists' Club, Young Men's Catholic Association, Irish Charitable Society, Knights of Columbus, Boston Lodge of Elks and other organizations.

Mr. Welch had a summer home at Old Orchard Beach, Me., where he was one of the best known figures and where he frequently entertained his many friends in the trade. He was one of the last of what was familiarly called "the old guard," a body of men who did much to keep Boston in the van of American horticulture. Some of the former members of this well known contingent were W. J. Stewart, Joseph Tailby, W. S. Ewall, Patrick Norton, M. H. Norton, William Robinson, James Conley, John Shepherd, Fred Harris, C. M. Atkinson and David Allen.

Mr. Welch was married in 1891 and was the father of six children, three sons and three daughters.

Patrick Welch.

Funeral services were held May 27, with high mass at St. Peter's church, Meeting House hill. A large number of business men, including many in the trade, attended; among them were ex-Mayor Fitzgerald, Park Commissioner J. B. Shea, J. Mitchell Galvin, Thomas Roland, Frank Edgar, E. Allan Peirce, Gustave Thommen and others. There were large delegations from the Elks and other fraternal and floricultural bodies. There was a magnificent display of flowers, including several pieces from prominent members of the S. A. F. Interment was in Old Calvary cemetery.

Appreciation of Mr. Welch's value to the trade was estimated in a statement by Henry Penn, as follows:

"Patrick Welch was a man of rare ability. When called upon for opinions and facts, he was ever ready to give unbiased views and had an unusual way of reasoning out the proper channel to pursue. He was a tower of strength in bygone days upon questions of natural importance to the Society of American Florists and the older generation would always look upon Pat Welch's advice with great favor.

"He was a credit to the craft and will be missed as the years roll on."

THE OFFICIAL CATALOGUE.

While all of the heavy investigative and preliminary work in the preparation of the manuscript for the Official Catalogue of Standardized Plant Names has been completed for several months, it has been found that, in order to secure the required accuracy and easy reference quality, the lists of common and scientific names and the special lists must be finally assembled and checked in alphabetical sequence by only one person.

Dr. F. V. Coville, United States botanist, is the one man in the scope of this final work best fitted to thus handle it, and he is using all of his time that it is possible to divert from his official duties toward that end. It was not realized how arduous, difficult and slow this work would be. All are exceedingly anxious for an early completion of it, but it is entirely impossible to expedite it beyond the limit of the production of one able participant. The typesetting is progressing close upon the completion of the copy.

This statement is issued in behalf of the many persons who have subscribed for and are anxious to receive this catalogue. As the work proceeds, its quality and importance increase in estimation, and we sincerely trust those who have subscribed will realize that the subcommittee is doing its very best for early completion, the delays being those impossible to forecast.

Frederick Law Olmsted,
Chairman of Subcommittee.

Pawtucket, R. I.—Henry J. L'Heureux expects to enter the trade in the near future. He will begin the erection of a greenhouse about July 1.

Spartanburg, S. C.—F. L. Gentry has bought the interest of Fred W. Sass in Fred's Flower Garden and is now sole owner. Mr. Sass will continue for the present in the employ of Fred's Flower Garden and the intention of Mr. Gentry is to develop a large business, the experience of the last eighteen months encouraging him to believe there is plenty of opportunity.

OBITUARY

Charles W. Phillips.

Charles W. Phillips, veteran florist at Walla Walla, Wash., died May 18 at a local hospital, following a brief illness.

Mr. Phillips was born at Salem, Ore., May 27, 1855, and four years later moved to the Walla Walla valley, where his kindly disposition made many friends for him throughout his lifetime. Always a keen lover of plants and flowers, he naturally turned to the business of growing them. Besides being a florist, he was a decorator of exceptional ability. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nellie S. Phillips, and nine children.

Mrs. May Bonnot.

Mrs. May Bonnot, of New York city, died May 20, at the St. Francis hospital from an operation following an attack of pneumonia. Mrs. Bonnot was the wife of the well known New York and Brooklyn florist, Leon Bonnot, who was formerly in business in New York and in Jersey City, N. J., operating under the name of Bonnot Bros. He was also engaged in the trade in Hoboken and Flemington, N. J.

C. C. Thomas.

All his friends, in the east and west, will regret to hear of the death of C. C. Thomas, of Los Angeles. Mr. Thomas went to Los Angeles about three years ago from Indianapolis, Ind., and joined the staff of Lichtenberg's, Frank Lichtenberg having formerly worked with him for Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis. Although Mr. Thomas had been sick for a week or more, he had apparently improved and May 22 talked of going back to the store the next day. A high blood pressure, followed by a hemorrhage of the lungs, brought him down suddenly and he died from heart failure the following night.

Mr. Thomas, during his stay in Los Angeles, made many friends in the business, owing to his unfailing courtesy and good nature, and he will be greatly missed. He had considerable trouble with his health and Mrs. Thomas had also been ill a great deal during the last year. Mr. Thomas was about 55 years of age and leaves only a wife, no children.

No longer does the florists' season end with Memorial day. Those who make a special effort to do so keep right on selling flowers through the summer.

Most members of the trade today pay their bills promptly. Some fail to meet due dates because they cannot, but the largest number do so merely through neglect.

MANY more persons would buy plants for window boxes if they were properly urged. This is a department of our business that has not been developed as it should be.

MANY readers have responded to the Editor's request for clippings of their Mothers' day advertisements. Thank you. Send the Memorial day advertisements along, please.

Now that freight rates are ordered down, is it too much to expect that express rates also will be reduced? This seems to be a place where the Society of American Florists might well take the initiative.

HIGH prices are not so ruinous in this line of business as poor quality. Fresh flowers that last a fair length of time usually convince a customer that they are worth a good figure, but flowers that droop ere they are in the vase at home produce dissatisfaction at the cheapest price.

ADVANCES in coal prices lately are laid at the door of speculators, who would take advantage of the consumers' anxiety over the present strike to reap exorbitant profits. But so recently was the public badly bitten by these gentlemen that coal dealers and consumers alike are taking steps to prevent their activities.

AFTER a lapse of five years, during which experiment was made of a society journal, the proceedings of the convention of the Society of American Florists again appear in volume form. The book containing the doings at Washington last August is slimmer than its predecessors, containing only 176 pages. Its compactness is due to inclusion only of the actual proceedings of this convention, in addition to a membership list, and to typographical style. A neat volume has been provided members by Secretary John Young. Many will be glad to have the list of members for reference once more.

DON'T be satisfied to regard flowers as so much merchandise to be sold. Know enough about them to arouse your customers' enthusiasm.

REPORTS indicate that employment is on the rise and the resumption of dividends is beginning—two good straws in the business wind, for florists.

MAY surely was a record month for the trade, but unless all signs fail the summer now close at hand will put to a test the endurance powers of many in the business. It will be in line to collect outstanding accounts and to clean up outstanding liabilities. The florist who owes nothing is safe under any conditions.

JUNE 1 finds more than the usual quantity of bedding stock still unplanted. It is due, principally, to weather conditions. Much of the stock was not ready earlier, wet and cold retarded bedding out and experienced labor has been short of the needs of the last ten days. Probably the bedding season, scarcely begun in many places, will last later than usual this year.

FREIGHT REDUCTION.

Reductions of about ten per cent in freight rates, effective July 1, were called for in a decision of the interstate commerce commission last week. With the exception of farm products, practically all classes of traffic are affected by the ruling.

A total reduction of $225,000,000 in the operating revenues of the railroads will be caused by the ruling, according to railroad executives. Supplementing the reductions which have been put into effect since August, 1920, it is figured that an aggregate reduction of $400,000,000 in the operating receipts of the railroads will have been caused.

Florists will be able to save a few dollars on coal by this ruling. Other actual benefits are slight, though much is expected in the way of encouragement to manufacturers and producers, resulting in general business stimulation, which the trade hopes to share in.

THE COAL MARKET.

The coal market in the last week has been markedly affected by two things, the reduction in freight rates and the increased output of the mines, though the strike still keeps production at about half of normal.

A leading coal trade journal stated May 27: "General market conditions in the coal industry received a decided setback May 24, when it was announced at Washington that the commerce commission had ordered a reduction in freight rates. Up until that announcement was made the demand for coal in practically all sections had continued on about the same level as the last few weeks. That is, buyers from practically all of the railroads, steel mills, utilities and larger industrial concerns were to be found in practically all fields where production was still in force. These apparently were anxious to obtain coal, regardless of prices, and this attitude on their part, as in weeks past, forced prices still higher than they had been at any time since the strike was called on April 1. When the rate reduction was announced, however, an immediate reaction set in and the demand became almost entirely absent. This had the effect of softening prices to a considerable extent. Owing to the great demand that prevailed up until May 24, every effort was made by producing mines to increase their output, with the result that greater outputs were noted in almost every field still working."

Last week, the eighth of the coal strike, opened with a decided increase in production, according to the weekly report of the geological survey. The returns so far received indicate an output of soft coal close to 5,000,000 tons.

Final reports for the seventh week of the strike, May 15 to 20, showed an output of 4,472,000 tons of bituminous coal. Anthracite production remains close to zero.

RECOVERY PERMANENT.

After watching the signs that make up the business barometer seesaw for many months, the commercial reporting agencies find the change for the better now taking on a certain and enduring aspect. Last week Dun's review of the general business situation said:

"With stronger underlying conditions the current business recovery reflects more positive characteristics of permanency. Progress is still impeded by labor troubles in certain important industries, but response to constructive factors is more clearly evident in the improved sentiment and revival of buying and the reversal of the price movement has become more decisive. Declines in various markets, continuing for many months, have been succeeded by an advancing tendency and demand in different instances is being stimulated by the prospect of higher quotations to follow.

"Except in retail channels, where price concessions have not infrequently been necessary to maintain distribution, most sellers are now more favorably situated, with orders more numerous and in some cases extending farther into the future. While purchasing to cover closely defined requirements remains the prevailing policy, commitments in anticipation of forward needs are unmistakably increasing, and some leading producers, in contrast to their recent position, are now well engaged ahead. Such phases as these not unnaturally find reflections in statistical barometers which measure the rise and fall of business.

"With commodity prices at about the same general level, bank clearings this week are considerably in excess of last year's; commercial failures, although still above the average, have lately diminished in number, and car loadings disclose gains in railroad traffic, which may become more marked under the stimulus of the freight rate reductions just announced."

PLENTY OF DEMAND.

Once in a while someone reports lack of demand for his stock this season, but the preponderance of evidence is that the demand this year has been as strong, in proportion to the supply, as it ever was in any other season. Most of the reports are like this:

We are sold out for the present, thanks to The Review.—Schlund Floral Co., Cumberland, Md., May 20, 1921.

We thought we had you stuck this season, but you are too much for us again this year. You have brought us all the dracena orders we can fill.—Frost & Spence, Greenville, O., May 19, 1922.

I have had the best of results from ads in The Review and I thank you for it.—Fred W. Baumgras, Lansing, Mich., May 20, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market last week was well supplied with flowers of all kinds. The supply was subject to a demand not sufficient to consume it; consequently the heyday of the street man again occurred, numbers of peddlers being in evidence on the business streets. An avalanche of peonies from southern points upset the market balance and sent prices of several staples down a point or two. The peony arrivals were moved at any prices obtainable for them, from $2 to $5 per hundred, and much stock in a condition to warrant it was tucked away in cold storage for Memorial day. Peonies from Pennsylvania are pouring in and are better in quality than the southern stock. Locally grown peonies, hybrids, are coming in also, so there is a clash which makes the survival of the fittest rather hard on the survivors. It was expected in this neighborhood that peonies would be late, but they are really ahead of time, the only late ones being of the officinalis type, flowers from which are coming in with the better kinds and bring practically nothing.

Roses have taken on their summer condition, both as regards quality and quantity, and prices quoted last week are barely maintained, as concessions are frequent to effect clearances. American Beauty continues to arrive in fair quantity and to move within the price range of $15 to $40 per hundred. In hybrid teas the price range is about $1.50 to $10 per hundred, the grading not exceeding the fancy. The best blooms of Premier bring a trifle more, as do those of Hadley and Crusader. Scott Key comes in the Beauty range.

Carnations show little signs of falling off, and fluctuate in value almost daily. The quality has been affected by somewhat warmer weather, and evident inattention on the part of some growers. Not all arrivals are taken through legitimate channels, the street men carrying off much of the held-over stock. The price range is $2 to $4 per hundred for the best grades.

Cattleyas are not in abundant supply, but their movement is slow at $35 to $100. Stray shipments of spray orchids arrive, but not in sufficient quantity to establish particular prices. Gardenias are not overplentiful, but more than enough for the demand at prices not exceeding $2 per dozen.

The supply of white lilies has shortened considerably, and prices last quoted are pretty well maintained under present market conditions. Lilies of the valley are in oversupply and sales drag materially.

Sweet peas continue in great abundance, moving slowly. Snapdragon is also in heavy supply, with a sluggish movement. A little northern-grown lilac arrives, but has now to meet heavy shipments of the wild spiraea. Other flowers of a miscellaneous character available are white and yellow daisies, Spanish and German irises, mignonette, cornflowers, Centaurea imperialis, lupines, pyrethrum, feverfew, gladioli, delphiniums, pansies, schizanthus, poppies, calendulas, myosotis, ranunculi, stocks and columbines.

Various Notes.

The white carnation appears to have been selected as an emblem for another organization of national renown. At a funeral in Rutherford, N. J., some twenty-five members of the Ku Klux Klan appeared in full regalia and each threw a white carnation into the grave.

It was arranged by the Horticultural Society of New York to hold an exhibition of peonies, orchids, roses, shrubs and herbaceous plants in connection with the exhibition of the American Iris Society, May 27, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, but since no entries were received, the show was abandoned.

W. E. Marshall & Co., 166 West Twenty-third street, last week had an excellent display of cut iris blooms on view at their store. Previously they had staged a fine exhibition of lilac.

Robert S. Rennison, of Westbury, is laying out and planting the extension grounds of the new million-dollar high school at Hempstead.

Major P. J. O'Keefe, of Boston, was in the city May 23, returning from Syracuse, where he had been to deliver an address on publicity before the vegetable growers and florists.

I. S. Hendrickson, manager of the Flowerfield establishment of John Lewis Childs, Inc., staged several groups of iris last Friday at the exhibition of the American Iris Society.

The many friends of Patrick Welch, of Boston, were grieved to learn of his death Thursday, May 25, after a long illness. The deceased was always a welcome visitor to the New York flower markets.

The number of those sending in their names to the chairman of the New York Florists' Club's transportation committee as anxious to take the de-luxe trip to the Kansas City convention is now over thirty. The committee has issued a splendid booklet descriptive of the trip out and return by way of the Great Lakes, the cost of which, including everything, is $220 for the round trip.

Prof. A. C. Beal, of Cornell University, was a visitor last week.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Perhaps in an effort to square himself for what he did to us at Mothers' day, the weather-man has been kind to the Chicago market for Memorial day. Outside of having provided an unusual quantity of blooms in private gardens, weather conditions were ideal in this territory this Memorial day. Cool, bright days for a week preceding the big flower day produced large quantities of stock and made the quality all that could be expected at this time of year. It is the general opinion that the Chicago market never has sold more flowers for Memorial day than it did this year and that the average quality of the greenhouse stock never has been better. Whereas Mothers' day brought complaints without parallel in the recent history of this market, it is figured that the Memorial day stock will give general satisfaction.

The volume of business for Memorial day has been enormous, but the demand was spread over almost a week and at no time was the market more than momentarily short of any item. It was a condition which led to a big volume, but low prices. It was evident that the observance of Memorial day would begin on Sunday, because shipping orders called for large quantities of stock to go out Thursday. There was a steady increase in the volume of shipments until Sunday, which was one of the biggest days this market ever has known. The express company gave delivery and pick-up service all day, up to 5 p. m., at which time all but a few scattering shipments were ready. Rarely has the express company taken off this market a larger quantity of stock than was boxed and ready for the last trucks to the stations on Sunday. As a matter of fact the quantity exceeded the expectations of the express company and it was necessary to make extra overtime trips to get the mountains of boxes hauled away. Even after this big day's shipping, many of the iceboxes were full, though most of it was the kind of stock not in request for the shipping trade.

Probably the peony played the part of first importance in the Memorial day business. Cool weather retarded the local crop, so that the supply was not so large as it has been in some other years. Because of the conditions under which southern peonies were cut and shipped, there was considerable difference in the quality of the stock from various sources. Nearly everyone was afraid of festiva maxima because it has been behaving badly this season. The stock cut early and put in storage during the heat wave has come out in poor shape; nearly every bunch was a "shaker." On the other hand, some festiva maxima cut farther north under cooler weather conditions has held up beautifully. The trouble has been that no one could tell from the looks of it how any lot of this variety would behave. It was noted, too, that the buyers wanted pink peonies instead of white. Practically all the good peonies were out of storage May 28, except small quantities reserved for city customers. The quantity remaining was of the kind that delights the man who takes his stand in a wagon at the cemetery gate. There was an abundance of peonies for him this year. The average price of the peonies handled up to Decoration day this year has been lower than was expected. While any price was a good price for a considerable part of the cut, the abundance of the low grade stock served to depress the price of the better grades. Also, from some sections cancellations came because their local peonies had made the date.

Carnations occupied second place. Having suffered severe losses on carnations at Mothers' day, there was less than the usual disposition to hold them back for Memorial day. Also, the weather, which was highly unfavorable to the keeping quality of carnations at Mothers' day, was ideal at Memorial day. No doubt the disappointment many retailers experienced on orders of carnations at Mothers' day had something to do with the cutting down of orders for Memorial day. At any rate the orders were not so large as many shippers had expected them to be. There were enough carnations to go around, and some to spare, with the result that average prices will be low.

There are varying reports as to roses. Some houses say their rose orders took everything good, even that it was necessary to cut some of the orders for the better grades of stock. On the other hand, some houses say their orders ran lightly on roses and that they had some left every night during the week.

With the abundance of the three leaders, peonies, carnations and roses, the miscellaneous stock fared rather poorly for Memorial day. While the high class stores try to show a variety of flowers, the merchants who handle quantities for an occasion like Memorial day prefer to deal with the smallest possible number of varieties. They never take the miscellaneous stock when they can get a sufficient quantity of the big staple items. The result was that sweet peas, valley, Easter lilies, callas, snapdragons, daisies, calendulas, mignonette, gladioli, feverfew, candytuft, etc., needed pushing to get into the business and these items sold only at low prices.

The total sales made a handsome figure, because the business was distributed over such an unusual number of days. While Sunday was the big shipping day, there was a considerable amount of shipping May 29 and the local buyers came into the market in force that day. The city stores had not placed many orders in advance, counting that the market would be abundantly supplied. Had they been seeking quality goods their calculations would have been astray, but Memorial day calls for quantity rather than quality. The regular city trade was fixed up in good shape May 29. It was possible to meet any buyer's ideas regarding reasonable prices. Heavy as the business was, the market was not clean on the evening of May 29 and on the morning of Memorial day the hucksters had their inning. The flowers they bought would not have been satisfactory in any first-class flower store, but it represented a considerable quantity of stock. These buyers practically cleaned the market, but they made their own prices.

The Course of Expansion.

That the retail trade in flowers in Chicago is increasing steadily and rather rapidly no one doubts, but ask almost any established retailer and he will tell you his sales fluctuate little from year to year. How, then, is the increase made? The answer is found in the large number of new stores that have been opened, not in the downtown center, but in outlying business sections. During and just after the war this growth was arrested and the established stores profited greatly thereby, but in the last two years the number of new stores opened has exceeded anything in the previous history of the trade. Check up on almost any of the mit much profit. The small neighborhood stores figure seven to ten per cent of their sales for rent. They do, most of them, from $10,000 to $25,000 per year gross business, with a few doing $30,000 to $50,000, rarely more, and the small capital required to start such a place makes it seem probable that new stores of this kind will be opened as rapidly as there is business to support them. An interesting point is that where such a store is opened by a man of experience in the trade, as an employee, success almost always follows, whereas such an undertaking by someone outside the trade, who expects to hire expert help he needs, rarely proves permanent. Numerous druggists, con-fectioners, tobacconists, etc., have found this is a field of no value to those not able and willing to work at it.

fields considerably exceeds the cost of the coal and the reduction of ten per cent in freight will make quite a material saving for many of the local growers. The present freight rate from the West Virginia fields to Chicago is $3.58 per ton. After July 1 there will be a saving of 35.8 cents. The present freight rate from the southern Illinois fields is $2.17 per ton. After July 1 there will be a reduction of 21.7 cents. The freight rate from Sullivan county, Indiana, at present is $1.88 per ton. From the western Kentucky fields it is $2.40 per ton and from the eastern Kentucky district it is $3.43 per ton.

The coal trade is beginning to urge the purchase and immediate delivery of fuel for next autumn, basing the recommendation on the improbability of an early settlement of the miners' strike. Not many florists, however, take these recommendations seriously, believing they are prompted by the considerable stocks now in dealers' hands and by the present extremely slow movement. Most florists have enough coal on hand to carry them some distance into the autumn.

The Fair Price List.

The city's high cost of living "expert," whose chief occupation seems to be to depress the business of small retail stores, issued a "fair price list" of flowers for Memorial day, his first undertaking along this line having been for Mothers' day. He gave the retail florists a little better chance this time than he did before. The price list published in the daily papers was as follows:

Members of the Allied Florists' Association have agreed to the following price schedules for May 29 and 30, Mr. Poole said: Peonies, $1 to $2 a dozen, depending on size; carnations, 75 cents to $1.50 a dozen; sweet peas, 50 cents to 75 cents for a bunch of twenty-five blooms; daisies, 40 cents to 50 cents a dozen; roses, $1.50 to $2 a dozen; lilies of the valley, $1 to $1.75 a dozen.

Fair prices for potted plants are given as follows: Geraniums, 15 to 25 cents for 3-inch to 4-inch plants; begonias, 15 to 20 cents for plants of the same size; French hydrangeas, 50 cents to $2, depending on the size of plants and blooms.

Various Notes.

There is one order in town for Saturday, June 3, calling for 30,000 carnations.

The A. L. Randall Co. has completed the purchase of a 7-acre tract along the St. Paul tracks about a mile north of the well known Lyon & Healy factory and a half-mile north of the new Superintendent Andrew Benson is kept busy these days supervising the replanting at the Premier Rose Gardens. About 50,000 plants are being replaced.

News of the sudden death of Lorenz P. Geiger reached Chicago the day after Memorial day. Fuller report appears in the obituary column of this issue.

John Poehlmann thinks "Poppy day," May 29, when every taggerette pinned a cloth poppy on every taggerette, was a help to the sale of flowers. He believes the mental reaction to sight of the artificial in flowers is thought of the natural.

The A. B. C. sold out of red poppies for May 29—the taggers took them all.

With appropriate ceremonies the old established wholesale house of Wietor Bros. closed its doors for the last time May 31, N. J. Wietor and Henry Wietor retiring from the business with a competence. C. A. Alles and Charles Dressler, who have been with the firm many years, June 1 joined the staff of Peter Reinberg, Inc., where the roses will be sold from the greenhouses to be operated by Henry Wietor's sons and son-in-law. The carnation range was taken over by John Eschette and he will ship to Joseph Foerster Co.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There were a million flowers. That covered the Memorial day situation up to Saturday evening, May 27. There was business, but the supply was too heavy. The week opened badly; peonies came in heavily; the weather was warm; flowers were plentiful, and business was light. Business improved as the week progressed, but the supply was enormous, and there was no catching up with it. The peony might become demoralized. Prices were cut and things generally were at sixes and sevens.

The strike up-state—from the coal regions usually come heavy orders for Memorial day—added to the fact that the up-state florists had their own peonies, did not improve matters. There was a vast difference in the quality of the peonies—some were easily worth the top quotations of this week's list; others could only be offered at the lowest figure, with an apology. Carnations sold pretty well, what there were of them, but roses languished. Perhaps we shall end better than we expect, but Saturday the Memorial day business looked like a disappointment.

An Unfortunate Situation.

The federal authorities have lately shown a decided disposition to recognize commercial flower culture as a national industry of some importance. This has been shown through the Department of Agriculture in various ways. The department's entomologists have been and still are endeavoring to aid rose growers in destroying the

If we meet them halfway and help them as brothers working for the common cause, good will result, but if we antagonize them, as some of us have unfortunately done, they will soon get discouraged, and a powerful ally will be lost.

Butterfly Versus Ophelia.

When the new rose, Madame Butterfly, came out, the experts were unanimous in their opinion that it would supplant Ophelia. Butterfly was more productive and it was a better color. As a result everybody planted Butterfly and the fate of Ophelia was regarded as sealed. This spring reaction has set in. One of our leading growers finds the returns from Ophelia decidedly better than from Butterfly—production larger, price the same. Since Easter, Butterfly has been selling at low years in natural flowers and far surpass it in the artificial "creations." There was little activity in cut flower circles until May 27, and on that day there was a lack of snap to the buying. A veritable avalanche of flowers arrived, of good, bad and indifferent quality. A great deal would have been better thrown away in advance, and was evidently pickled and on its last legs. Prices were lower on the average than for several years. Good values ruled for the best stock, but, as usual, much inferior material realized little.

There was a fine crop of roses. Short and medium-stemmed were in big demand at from $6 to $15 per hundred. Some fancies made more, and in the case of Hadley, Crusader and Francis Scott Key $25 was realized.

A good many American Beauties came in and sold from $25 to $50 per hundred, more going for the former than the latter price. White roses, as usual, were the slowest sellers. Carnations made $6 to $8 for the best stock, but much inferior material went at from $2 to $4. Laddie made $10 to $12. More miserable carnations appeared than for years. Sweet peas came in veritable shoals, $2.50 to $3 being the top-notch prices, and yellow daisies averaged about the same. Gladioli of the best grades sold for $2 to $2.50 per dozen. Callas and lilies made only slight advances.

Good colored ten weeks' stocks sold well, but a lot of singles were hard to move. Candytuft went a little slowly. Much colored candytuft came in, but little of it came to the wholesale markets. Those who got it on time made good money. Double feverfew sold fairly well and Gypsophila elegans went remarkably well. No Dutch bulbous stock appeared, except some belated Darwin and cottage tulips. Lilac was mostly on the wane, but some good deutzia, outdoor valley, German iris and other outdoor flowers were seen. For asparagus there was a good demand. No local peonies were in season, but some were received from Philadelphia and vicinity.

The demand for orchids was not great. A good supply of Cattleya Mossiae appeared. For these no great advances were made. There were other seasonable orchids. Outdoor valley proved better than the forced article, although selling lower.

The demand for plants was excellent.

MONO SERVICE CO., NEWARK, N. J.

Geraniums were splendid sellers and for these a shortage already exists.

Most of the retailers filled their windows and a large part of their stores with the usual extensive line of artificial wreaths. Tens of thousands of these metal and wax tokens were handled in department stores, meat markets, hardware stores, grocery stores, on street stands and by undertakers. Great numbers were being hawked around near the big cemeteries at low prices, and a greater number than ever were unsold.

The most overdone fresh flowers this year were snapdragons. Good flowers sold well, but a great proportion looked jaded. Many had twisted stems, and flowers fell in showers when a bunch was handled. The flowers were left too long on the plants and such stock proved almost unsalable.

While it is generally stated that Memorial day broke all previous records, it is not easy to compare this year with previous years. There was undoubtedly more artificial material sold than ever, and probably as many fresh flowers, but I have seen more animation and snap to some previous years' business. However, about everyone seems satisfied.

Flower Show at Chestnut Hill.

The flower show staged by the Chestnut Hill Garden Society and effectively arranged in two large tents on the beautiful grounds of E. B. Dane, May 24 to May 26, was the most charming flower show of its kind ever held here in May. Groups of flowering plants, covering 400 square feet each, were a feature in one tent. First prize and a gold medal were awarded to Peter Arnott, gardener for Mrs. E. S. Webster, with an artistically arranged group which included many beautiful godetias, clarkias, pelargoniums, campanulas, pimeleas, hydrangeas and calceolarias. An excellent second was William C. Rust, gardener for Mrs. C. G. Weld. Splendid gladioli, godetias, calceolarias, lilies and other plants were in this group, as also in the third prize group from L. C. Seagrove, gardener to Mrs. R. M. Saltonstall, and Donald McKenzie, gardener for Mrs. E. B. Dane.

For the best group of orchids Donald McKenzie won with a superb lot of odontoglossums, odontiodas, cattleyas, renantheras, masdevallias, oncidiums, brassocattleyas and other varieties. Peter Arnott, who was second, showed some choice varieties. Splendid standard fuchsias and calceolarias were shown by J. Clancy, gardener for Mrs. Andrew Adie, while Arthur T. Bradlee had an excellent group of flowering plants. L. C. Seagrove had a splendid lot of Marshall strawberries loaded with luscious-looking berries. There was a keen contest for table centerpieces from ladies, and fine displays of native plants and vegetables. Thomas Roland judged the groups of plants. The attendance was large on all three days, the tents being crowded most of the time.

Various Notes.

An excellent half-page illustrated Memorial day advertisement appeared in the rotogravure section of the Boston Herald May 28. Participating firms were the Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co., S. J. Goddard, Houghton-Gorney Co., Zinn the Florist, Beacon Florist, Belmont Flower Shop, H. M. Robinson & Co., Janiten & Kunan, Anderson Conservatories, Axel Magnuson, Galgay the Florist, W. C. Bowditch, J. K. Alexander, S. Irving Moody, William Sim, Littlefield & Wyman and H. R. Comley. An illustration showed the work of each advertiser. A fine, readable story appeared in the news section of the same paper, giving Boston's history and position as a floral and horticultural center.

The executive committee of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club met May 26 and completed arrangements for the ladies' night at Horticultural hall, June 20. The finest entertainment in the club's history will be given on this occasion. July 20 has been selected as the date for the annual picnic at Cunningham park, East Milton.

has had a good commercial training and should make good in his new undertaking. Mr. Christensen has the framework completed for two King Construction Co. houses, each 40x200, to be devoted to carnations, and has a large service building well under way. He will later erect additional houses at his new location in Reading. He is also going heavily into nursery stock of all kinds. His new enterprise is called the Reading Nurseries & Greenhouse Co.

Edward Winkler, of Wakefield, has completed grading ground for a new Hitchings house, 40x194, for carnations. He has purchased a plot of several acres of excellent land adjoining his greenhouses and plans to erect a dwelling on it quite soon. His greenhouses are all well stocked with carnations, snapdragons, candytuft and Gypsophila elegans. Of the last named he has a fine lot, grown in shallow flats. Seedling raising continues to interest Mr. Winkler as much as ever and he has some promising varieties. The popular Morning Glow is one of the varieties raised here.

There were over 75,000 visitors to the Arnold Arboretum to view the lilac display this season. The display of Azalea Kaempferi at present is remarkably fine and the rhododendrons are blooming profusely. The mountain laurels are also commencing to show color. Professor Sargent is interesting Mayor Curley in a project for a fine rose garden at the arboretum. The estimated cost of this will be $300,000 and it will be the finest of its kind in America. It is hoped to get some money from the Parkman and George R. White funds for this project.

The Beacon Florist reports an enormous business in artificial wreaths and other Memorial day designs. John Eise-mann sees no sentiment in these designs, but a large class of people want them and are pleased with them. He, therefore, merely assists in satisfying this demand. No doubt other florists feel the same way about this artificial material, though it is cutting into the natural flower business more heavily each year.

While no locally grown peonies have yet appeared on the markets, singles are due this week and a week hence some doubles should be available. Plants are promising and there should be a splendid exhibition of these at Horticultural hall June 17 and 18. The annual convention and show of the American Sweet Pea Society comes June 24 and 25, in conjunction with the rose, strawberry, late peony and sweet pea show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

Anthony Waterer, of Philadelphia, was among our callers last week and did a good business in bulbs, as usual. He reports business as rapidly getting back to a normal basis.

Memorial day business in fresh flowers did not take on any snap this year until May 29. Then buying had some power. Weather conditions this year were extremely favorable. May 26 a temperature of 84 degrees was recorded, but May 27 it fell to a maximum of 53 degrees, and light frosts occurred at night on low lands north of Boston. May 28 and 29 were clear, with comfortable temperatures, as near perfect as possible.

The death of Patrick Welch, reported elsewhere, removes one of Boston's most notable figures in the commercial florists' field. "P. W." and "P. Welch" were titles usually given him. He was a man of keen foresight and a general favorite. His passing leaves a blank not easy to fill. W. N. C.

RUST ON HYDRANGEAS.

My otaksa hydrangeas that should have bloomed this spring are so affected by red spider or rust that they are of no account for this year's bloom. Will they make good plants for next year if they are cut back and placed outdoors, letting them make a new growth, or would it be better to throw them away and get new stock entirely? I have a supply of new cuttings already started, but I am afraid they may also be affected in the same way. I fumigated several times in the early spring with hydrocyanic acid gas, but it did not seem to help them. T. H. S.—Pa.

Cut your plants down quite low and plant outdoors in good soil, preferably where the plants can be watered occasionally in dry weather. Dig the plants up and pot them before the weather gets too cold. The plants should make vigorous growth if properly cared for. Plant out your cuttings in the same way. If you carry the plants over summer in pots, the best plan is to plunge them to their brims in a coldframe where they are within easy reach of the hose. These hydrangeas are not usually attacked by red spider or rust, and it may be that your plants have been sun-scalded. In a clear house when sprayed overhead, the sun is apt to burn some of the foliage and hydrocyanic acid gas, unless given in light doses, would be liable to intensify rather than alleviate the trouble. C. W.

New Bern, N. C.—Two greenhouses are being erected at the establishment of the New Bern Greenhouses. One of the new houses is 30x100 feet and the other is 20x80 feet. The new firm handles all kinds of cut flowers and pot plants.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

During the week preceding Memorial day, business kept up fairly well, with plenty of stock of all kinds. By shipping time it was expected that there would be an abundance of gladioli and other flowers suitable for long-distance work and probably plenty of left-overs for local use. Memorial day, as a rule, does not call for high-priced stock, but rather for quantities of showy material that will stand the heat so late in the season.

Rose growers are in with a fine cut. Some peonies are in and are attractive, although there is some complaint as to their lasting quality. The herbaceous peony has never become popular here, although the Moutan varieties thrive well. For the first time this season yellow and shasta daisies have sold freely.

Various Notes.

"Turn again, Whittington, lord mayor of ———." No, we mean Armacost, lord mayor of Sawtelle. Good luck to the modern Dick Whittington and may his shadow never grow less! The Old Soldier city never had a better executive head.

The L. A. Evergreen Co. is bringing in fine herbaceous peonies from the north. They came in well before the Memorial day demand and were handled at the American Florists' Exchange.

Some years ago A. W. Pooley, of Pomona, raised a fine red gladiolus, which he named Virginia. This is now beginning to appear on the market here from several growers and it is a remarkably distinct and beautiful thing. It was mentioned some years ago in The Review, when Mr. Pooley was working up stock of it, and the good things prophesied of it then seems about to be realized. It is a clean-cut, bold flower; the flowers are set well on the spike and are of a beautiful, clear color.

The Broadway Florist continues to be one of the heaviest buyers on the local market and the store is always a busy place. Outside of the regular box trade and decorations, the amount of funeral work turned out here is remarkable.

Gorini Bros. are bringing in some of the best Halley gladioli of the season. This firm is noted for its special strain of Shasta daisies, which are arriving in the usual fine shape. The strain is noted for its fine texture and long-keeping qualities; consequently, most of the stock is taken by the wholesalers for shipping.

E. Schaeffer, at 2905 South Figueroa street, has a fine stock of all classes of bedding and similar plants. He reports good business.

J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, Ore., was in the city last week on one of his periodical visits.

C. E. Falls, of the C. E. Falls Service Co., Chicago, was in the city last week. The firm is opening a local branch in Los Angeles. Mr. Falls was being piloted about by Arthur Howard, of Howard & Smith, and A. H. Soules, district manager. Mr. Falls expressed himself as delighted with all he had seen.

Communications from J. Dieterich show that he is enjoying himself in the east, en route to Europe. In the meantime Emil Brinkmeyer, his son-in-law, is running the business, at Wall street, and the nursery, at Wintersburg, and it keeps him busy.

Among the newer buyers on the market here is Walter B. Parker, proprietor of Parker's Flower Shop, of Pomona. This business was recently started at 164 West Pearl street, and Mrs. Parker is also interested and active in the business.

Albert Goldenson has signed a lease for a new store at Sixth and Spring streets, one of the busiest corners in Los Angeles. He will keep the store farther out on Sixth street for a time, until he gets established in the new location, where he will eventually concentrate all his energies. Such a location should almost insure success and, of course, the long-established name of Wolfskill's & Morris Goldenson insures a steady and good trade, in addition to new customers.

The death of C. C. Thomas, of the staff of Lichtenberg's, is reported on the obituary pages of this issue.

All the wholesalers bought heavily for Memorial day and, although at the hour of writing they have not started to ship, everything is in readiness for a big holiday and orders are coming in rapidly.

crops seem to be coming along. The carnation crop was not large last week, and some doubt seemed to exist as to whether there would be a sufficient quantity of carnations in the market to take care of the Memorial day trade. There were still some irises from late planting and a good many fine peonies are in evidence, though this year's crop is not so large as was expected. Marguerites began to arrive. Their lateness was due to the unusual amount of frost experienced last winter, which froze the plants and curtailed the supply. Large quantities of fine sweet peas are seen in the market, as well as gypsophilas, gillyflowers, pansies, delphiniums, marigolds, poppies, mignonette, cornflowers, sweet williams, and a host of other summer flowers. Large crops of strawflowers are now being cut, some for drying purposes and some for immediate sale. Gladioli are not yet in their full season and baby gladioli are almost at a premium. There is plenty of valley and gardenias are no longer scarce.

Various Notes.

San Francisco and Oakland are preparing to "Say It with Flowers" to the visiting Shriners June 12 to 15. In Oakland, work on the great Shriner emblem of flowers in the city hall plaza is progressing rapidly under the direction of Howard Gikkey, city landscape engineer. Fifty thousand flowering plants are being set out. Outside the Ferry building, San Francisco, the Shriner emblem in flowers is being planted under the supervision of Donald McLaren, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. David Lichtenstein, the Terminal Florist, is urging the board of harbor commissioners to retain this conspicuous spot as a permanent flower garden. The oil service stations in the city and on the highways are having gardens planted with Shriner emblems in flowers, to welcome the delegates, and Park Superintendent McLaren is having floral emblems put in Golden Gate park.

J. A. Axell, Frank Thatcher, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., and Charles Brown, of Brown & Kennedy, headed an expedition to attend the "'49" celebration in Sacramento. They were much Peter Matraia and his wife also attended the celebration.

Speaking of this year's peony crop, J. A. Axell said: "I have taken up the question of the peony crop with various growers, and they state that peonies can be grown at less expense in the east than here. In the first place, in the east they can grow peonies on land that does not cost one-tenth as much as land in the west. In the east, the ground freezes in the fall and the peonies do not require any attention because they are frozen for at least six greatly reduced by competition with artificial flowers from Germany and other European countries." Mr. Inoue added that the cut flower business is good at present.

Domoto Bros. had some nice Shasta daisies and marguerites, which, they said, would be ready for cutting for Memorial day, as well as roses, peonies, etc.

The Growers' Floral Co. is cutting a fine stock of statice, helichrysum and other strawflowers, including the coral-like flowers known popularly as "Russian cattail."

S. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., has returned from a visit to Santa Cruz, where things are growing satisfactorily. Some of the Japanese growers in Santa Cruz have good supplies of freesia bulbs, Mr. Enomoto stated. He has made arrangements to handle a considerable quantity of these bulbs. These are for July delivery.

In places where San Francisco florists congregate, one is apt to see and hear the admonition: "Don't forget the florists' picnic, Fairfax park, June 25."

Frank Thatcher represented Pelicano, Rossi & Co. at the "'49" celebration in Sacramento. Frank D. Pelicano says that he knows, from old-timers he has met, that Mr. Thatcher was quite in keeping, neatly shaven and wearing fine raiment. "The city boys dressed well in the days of '49."

Podesta & Baldocchi have had numbers of Shriners in their store already. They belong to the Honolulu delegation, which is here. Manuel Russell, of this firm, is going away for a two months' outing on the Russian river.

Joseph's have a number of orders for Shriner affairs, including a big banquet at the Palace. They also have considerable work in connection with affairs for the delegates to the national real estate convention. The Civic Auditorium is being transformed into a red-wood forest for this convention, with the floor carpeted with pine needles and wild flowers.

The Misses Hannon's store is busy with bon voyage baskets.

The Charles C. Navlet Co. has the largest and most extensively assorted stock of dahlias that it has had for some years. The stock includes a fine line of pompon dahlias.

Darbee's designed some clever wreaths in strawflowers for Memorial day. The firm reported heavy advance orders for local decorations for that day, as well as a rush of shipping orders.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

General trade activities last week were slow on most lines, and it was conceded by all florists that only a good sale on bedding stock and a brisk demand for funeral work saved the day.

Funeral work was heavy last week, and there has been an unusually heavy demand for the larger pieces. There has been an increase in small decorations and the booking on early June weddings insures a good run of work.

Stock is plentiful in all lines. The first deliveries of anemones, local irises and peonies were made last week. Iris is of especially fine quality and the same can be said for the gladioli which are being cut.

The latter part of last week was marked by unusually warm weather, with the result that roses were forced ahead, and the cut showed a material increase. Carnations showed better color, and the supply of tulips and narcissi is still ahead of trade demands. Orchids continue scarce, with lilac in plentiful supply. Forget-me-nots are about the only item in popular demand on which it is hard to supply the necessary stock.

Various Notes.

Walter Garbett, who succeeds the late Martin Reukauf as the Pacific coast representative of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, has been calling on the local trade during the last week. He reports business conditions average in most communities visited.

Roses of exceptional color and length of stem were among last week's offerings at the City Flower Shop, and these have proved good sellers. A number of good-sized orders for fraternal funeral pieces have been filled.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop has been using its smaller windows on the Union street side for an effective display of some new pottery lines, and these have met with good success. Blues and variegated patterns of this same color have been most popular. The larger window has been given over to the summer flowers in baskets and other combinations. One luncheon decoration handled last week called for the arrangement of a yacht several feet in height, of yellow tulips and lavender sweet peas, combined with yellow ribbon, sailing on a sea of maidenhair ferns.

The B. E. Hammond Co. is to move June 15 to larger quarters, at 1510 Western avenue, where better arrange-

OUR NEW STORE AND GREENHOUSES AT 600 HARLEM AVENUE, OAK PARK, ILL., A RESIDENTIAL SUBURB OF CHICAGO

FOR SALE

A place in one of the finest suburbs of Chicago that can safely be called one of the best establishments in the country doing a retail and wholesale florists' business; a sound, successful business that has thrived for forty years, serving a high-class retail trade and doing wholesale business with Chicago's leading florists; everything new and in best of condition, the entire place having been rebuilt recently and new equipment installed; there are eight new and modern Moninger iron-frame greenhouses covering 30,000 square feet, equipped with a new heating plant and devoted to a general line of pot plants; the spacious store at the greenhouses is equipped along modern lines with new fixtures and is connected to the greenhouses by a large, well arranged service building; at the rear of the range is a fine 10-room residence and a heated garage big enough for six cars; there are three motor trucks and all other necessary equipment; in addition there are thirteen 50-foot city lots next to the store and greenhouses; another store is operated on Lake Street, the main business street of the suburb; not far from several very large cemeteries; there are steam railroads, Chicago elevated railroads and trolley lines and many other things that make for an ideal location; the amount of business that can be done is limited only by production, for there is a ready market for all that could be produced in a place two or three times as large.

FLOWERS FOR THE LIVING.

Funeral flowers are purchased for a person only once. For few persons are obsequies performed twice. But flowers may be bought for one living any number of times. To make flowers the requisite of the living rather than the dead is, therefore, to increase our business manifold.

Carrying out that idea, M. H. Lockyear, of Evansville, Ind., has devised envelope stuffers to embody a message to customers. Here is one of them:

Don't send me flowers when I lie cold and lifeless.

As if it were a duty,
When I've no voice to thank you for your gift
Nor eye to look upon their beauty,
But give them to me now, before 'tis night,
While I can smell their fragrance,
Touch their petals, hold them in my hand,
And look upon their colors bright.
Not when I've passed away,
But send my flowers today.

As an antiphone to the preceding verse, Mr. Lockyear has the following also:

It is not strange, but plain to see,
God made the flowers, for you and me;
I will not wait till you are dead,
But send these flowers today instead.

WINDOWS CAN INCREASE SALES.

"I've noticed one characteristic about most successful florists that to my mind has a deal to do with their success," said a keen observer the other day. "Every man of them has a mania for borrowing ideas that will increase sales. For instance, I believe it is impossible for a florist to walk down State street in Chicago, Fifth avenue in New York or Chestnut street in Philadelphia without borrowing at least one sales-making policy from the big department stores. This is the sales value of attractive window displays. Few merchants today deny the importance of attractive windows, whether they sell boots and shoes, refrigerators or flowers.

"However, it is my observation that florists, as a class, have not developed their windows as highly as have merchants in other lines. One thing that has held florists' window displays behind is the cost of fixtures that are usually necessary to produce striking effects. Such fixtures, when at all elaborate, increase the overhead of the store prohibitively."

For this reason a recently introduced line of metal flower boxes, procurable in half a dozen different finishes and sizes, has found favor with a number of florists who have keen eyes for attracting the passer-by and enticing him or her into the store. These boxes—as well as similarly made hanging baskets and pedestals—are not only inexpensive for store decorations, but also are sold at a profit to customers. Some florists report that women who previously refused to grow flowers in the house were sold first on the box and then on the flowers to fill it. The manufacturer of these metal boxes claims to have overcome all drainage and irrigating difficulties heretofore experienced with metal flower boxes.

The boxes can be set off their stands, which are collapsible. They fit in well with a variety of attractive window displays and can be removed to the sales floor to good advantage after serving in the window. This has helped to overcome the window fixture cost, as the boxes are carried as merchandise and not as overhead.

There is undoubtedly a growing inclination among florists to devote more thought and time to their windows. Such care as is given this important side of the store is generally quickly apparent in the increased sales which result.

INSURING YOUR OWN SUCCESS.

In time with the current interest in the finer points of business management, covering, among other features, the problem of cash and credits, Joseph Harris. There are florists who are building poor. We do not buy anything that we cannot pay for. If we desire to buy and cannot pay, we go to the bank and borrow in order to pay our bills. Some will say that they have no credit at the bank. Then work and make credit! Do not buy pleasure when you cannot afford it. I have failed to see the board of directors of any bank of our acquaintance who would not extend credit to an honest, hard-working man; nor have we met a man of this type who is not a success."

Joseph Harris & Bro. own, besides their concrete-reinforced store, 15,000 feet of glass at the greenhouse establishment at Springfield, Pa. The entire range is equipped with concrete benches, which were installed in 1906. Since that time the firm estimates it has saved 125,280 feet of lumber, which would otherwise have been used for bench construction. It might be said here that the firm is a pioneer in the construction of concrete greenhouse benches.

And the company does business. Last Easter 16,000 bulbs and plants were handled at retail. Better than 660 deliveries were made in three days, using a Stanley steamer truck, one Ford truck and a horse and wagon. The company is located in a hilly country, which calls for thought on the delivery question. But the firm has thought this out, just as well as it has thought out its window decorating, an example of which was shown in the May 11 issue of The Review.

KNAPP VS. SAYRE, PA.

The equity proceedings of J. B. Knapp, Sayre, Pa., against the borough of Sayre, which were to have been argued before Judge Maxwell at Towanda, Pa., May 16, were continued by agreement of the attorneys until a later date. It was understood that the county judge would hear both sides of the question at that time and determine whether he would continue the preliminary injunction or discontinue it. A preliminary restraining order was issued May 12 by Judge Maxwell, enjoining the borough or any of the police officers from interfering with J. B. Knapp in the display of merchandise in front of his Packer avenue flower shop. This action came after the borough police had taken a quantity of flowers and plants from in front of the florist's store. Mr. Knapp was also placed under the charge of maintaining a common nuisance and was held for appearance in the county court.

Harris, speaking for Joseph Harris & Bro., of Shamokin, Pa., makes the following opportune statement and suggestion regarding the successful operation of a florist's business: "For making money in the florists' business, first of all watch your credits. Show me a florist whose accounts on the ledger are gilt-edged and you have a successful florist. This man will pay his fellow man. A man who does a business of $15,000 a year cash is a better business man than the one who does $30,000 and has $15,000 on the books, of which he is not sure. Joseph Harris & Bro. pride themselves on their system of cash and credits. We have been in business twenty-five years and have not lost $250. This, we think, is a real record.

"We do not believe in overbuying. We would rather be short at times on supplies and stock than overbought. This holds good in building green-of R. A. Adams, formerly of Fayetteville, Ark., one of a trio of brothers who have made a success of the florists' business in Fayetteville. Mr. Adams has had a wide experience in the making of corsage bouquets, funeral designs and all sorts of interior and exterior floral decoration work.

The front of the retail store has been converted into a flower shop, and in the basement arrangements have been made for caring for the wholesale trade. Here long worktables and a large built-in refrigerator have been installed to facilitate the handling of flowers.

Potted plants of all kinds, ferns, cut flowers, including roses, carnations and various flowers in their season, will be featured in this new department.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The local wholesale cut flower market was in an excellent condition all last week, as far as the supply went, but the demand from the retailers was not there to consume the greatly increased daily consignments. The retailers say that the week was rather quiet in all lines, though Memorial day, school com-

How a Knoxville Jeweler Says to Say It

If you doubted for a minute that "Say It with Flowers" has gone over big, all over the country, you have but to travel a bit and see its evidence everywhere. Everybody seems to be imitating it by trying to say something with something or other.

Was in Knoxville, Tennessee, in February, and walking along the street came to the leading jeweler's window. In the center was a beautiful collection of gems in rings and other adornments. On either side of them was a beautiful silver vase, each holding some choice roses. A daintily lettered little sign said: "First say it with flowers, then keep it said with gems."

When I came back to New York, I promptly passed along the idea to a Fifth Avenue jeweler. Just naturally he bought his roses of me, and has kept on buying ever since. Which may or may not be an idea for you.

mencements and June weddings should keep the trade busy to June 15, the end of the social season. Throughout last week prices came down considerably on all cut stock and in all grades. For Memorial day there was a large cut of peonies of extra good quality and large shipments of cape jasmines from Texas. Roses in all varieties have been more than the trade can consume, while extra fancies alone hold up in price. Carnations show the effects of the hot weather and the blooms are becoming smaller. Prices have been cut down low, in order to clean up the daily shipments. Sweet peas are scarce in the fancy grades, but short-stemmed stock is arriving in great quantities. Gladiolus spikes are not in oversupply and seem to clean up nicely every day. Valley and lilies are in demand. There is a great supply of outdoor stock, which is used for window displays. Cornflowers are selling well, as well as delphiniums. The supply of greens has been large, and the fancy ferns, asparagus and smilax clean up almost daily.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association's executive board will hold an important meeting June 6, in publicity headquarters, at 2:30 p. m. As the big flower days for this season are at an end, the board will at this meeting take up the advisability of summer advertising. The board consists of L. Jules Bourdet, chairman; J. F. Ammann, Louis A. Hoerr, W. J. Pilcher, Joseph Deutschmann, A. S. Cerny, F. A. Windler, H. G. Berning, W. A. Rowe, treasurer; J. J. Beneke, secretary, and W. A. Ferree, advertising manager. All are requested to attend this meeting.

The big meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club will take place Thursday, June 8, at 2 p. m., at W. J. Pilcher's place, in Kirkwood, Mo., when the members will celebrate the club's thirty-sixth anniversary. Luther Armstrong, the only living charter member and the club's first secretary, promises to be present for a talk on the early history of the club. Automobiles will be in waiting in the wholesale district to convey the members to the meeting place and will leave promptly at 1 p. m. The trustees have outlined a program of unusual interest to all members. O. C. May, state vice-president of the S. A. F., also will have something of interest. Cigars and refreshments will be served.

St. Louis County Growers' Association, says the association will endeavor to hold a meeting June 7, at the Eleven Mile House, at 8 p. m., if enough respond to the call. The nomination and election of officers will take place. Martin Ude is president of the association.

Grimm & Gorly, Mullanphy Florists and the Ayres-Tubbesing Co., leading downtown florists, had attractive Memorial day window displays.

Sunday, May 21, the last day of the flower show at the Missouri Botanical Garden, attracted an attendance of 28,000, which filled the big display house to capacity all day long. All prize-winning cut flowers were sent to the various hospitals by the officers of the Garden Club of St. Louis.

Paul Hranicka will be the rose grower for the St. Louis Rose Co., which is building a range of glass at Larimore station. The range will be devoted entirely to the growing of roses. The Lord & Burnham Co. has the contract. Louis A. Hoerr, the majority stockholder, is the president of the company.

Several large conventions last week brought visitors to the city from all parts and taxed the capacity of the hotels. These brought considerable business to the florists for banquet decorations, and cut flowers to the rooms daily.

The local gladiolus growers say that gladioli will not be so plentiful this season as expected, since about thirty per cent are coming blind. Among the largest growers here are W. A. Rowe Co., Phil Goebel, Jr., C. E. DeWever, O. C. May, Kalisch Bros. Co., the Deutschmann Bros. and A. L. Kopp.

Joseph Witek, Julius Schaeffer, F. H. Weber and Fred C. Weber, leaders in that section, say this has been an exceptionally busy season all through. All have good-sized June wedding orders booked to the end of the season, June 15.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Peonies are now beginning to come into the market, and poppies have made their appearance. Carnations are quite plentiful. The early Memorial day sales were satisfactory to most florists. Potted geraniums were sold in large numbers, the retail price for single plants being from 20 cents to 25 cents. When sold by the dozen these brought from $2.25 to $2.50. Foliage plants were in great demand and there was a fair sale of such plants as phlox, mountain daisies and other small plants suitable for transplanting. Some pansy plants were sold, though the season for these has nearly passed. Ivy and myrtle had a considerable sale also.

Various Notes.

Henry A. Strobell, whose store is at 931 Broad street, is recovering at his home, at 112 Park place, Irvington, from two operations which he underwent last week for the removal of abscesses.

Fred P. Wolfinger, Broad street, reports much funeral work for last week and states that there was also considerable wedding work. R. B. M.

BALTIMORE, MD.

The Market.

Last week the supply of stock on the market exceeded the demand. Peonies were plentiful and a great many have reached the streets. These were selling at 25 cents per dozen, which is a big price, considering the supply on hand. Gladioli were plentiful and the quality of the stock was excellent. A few good carnations reached the market, but most of them were poor. Roses were good. Delphiniums were plentiful and the quality of the stock was fine.

is favorable, writing a few days before the holiday. There will be a good supply of peonies, but only a limited supply of daisies and cornflowers.

Various Notes.

Joseph Merritt reports that he has sold out completely his stock of pot roses. His Radiance, both red and pink, were exceptionally good. His other varieties were also fine.

Robert Kift was in town calling on old friends in the trade last week.

A representative of Wertheimer Bros., New York, and a representative of the Mono Service Co., Newark, N. J., called on the trade last week.

The Market.

At this writing, a few days before Memorial day, iceboxes are loaded with stock. Peonies are abundant; every grower has a large crop. Many of the florists have enough to supply their own trade and some to spare. Home gardens are still blooming. Peonies are much more in evidence than they have ever been at the time they are most needed. Those that were in cold storage came out in perfect condition. A considerable number were held in the iceboxes in water for several days. The supply Friday and Saturday, May 26 and 27, was large enough to meet a normal holiday trade. They are all of good quality. The average price is 6 cents. Department stores advertised peonies in quantity, for Saturday, May 27, at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen. It is believed they will have sales at the same prices Monday, May 29. Carnations are almost as plentiful as peonies. They are far more plentiful than they were for Mothers' day. Growers brought in big cuts the morning of May 27 and said they had more ready to be cut for the afternoon if needed. They are even of better quality than they were earlier in the month. Instead of the small, soft flowers familiar at this season, the blooms are large, firm and clean. Shipments have been heavy all week. Orders were placed early. Saturday was an extremely busy day. Orders for wreaths have been in excess of those of other years. Supplies and artificial goods have moved well.

Various Notes.

S. Bryson Ayres has opened a retail flower store at 1120 Walnut street, in the building formerly occupied by the People's Trust Co. He is negotiating for a lease on the property and will remain permanently. Since opening the store, May 20, business has been good. All the stock handled is grown on his farm near Independence, Mo.

William Wade, secretary of the Missouri State Florists' Association, says that the association will hold its annual meeting with the St. Louis flower show and chrysanthemum exhibition, November 7 to 12. One day will be known as Missouri state day.

Frank X. Stuppy has returned to his home in St. Joseph, Mo., from the Peter Bent Brigham hospital, Boston, Mass. He is feeling much better and has been at his store several times.

Many handsome bouquets and baskets were made up by various florists last week for the principals in the annual week of grand opera. All but one or two of the stars are local artists and have many friends here.

WORCESTER, MASS.

Speaking a few days before Memorial day, florists of this section state that business looks promising for the holiday. The demand for cut flowers already exceeds former years. One reason for this is the safe and sane conduct of business on Mothers' day. In many places in this eastern part of the country many people got angry at Mothers' day on account of the high prices charged and the press is still discussing the subject. Littlefield's have had to limit the amount of purchases to each customer at the greenhouses. Outdoor flowers are in the market in small quantities. Lilacs will be gone before Memorial day, while, on the other hand, many other shrubs and perennials lag behind. The season has been favorable for germination of seed in the open and vegetation in general looks good. E. A.

With Easter and Mothers' day over, the efforts of the J. W. Davis Co. are being directed toward moving the large stock of ferns now on hand, which includes in all about 60,000 plants of different varieties and sizes. A force of about ten men is kept constantly pack-son is still far off. Preparations are al-

As this is written, the stage is being set for another holiday, and yet the retailer is just a little nervous as to the outcome. Everyone is afraid to take a big chance, as the whole situation lies in the hands of the weather man, and he has got to act within the next few hours. It seems unlikely that there will be any surplus of outside stock, as the weather is cool. Rain has been the predominating feature, followed by cool, dark weather, which is against a forty per cent crop of peonies for Memorial day. The peonies are streaked here this year, and yet this is a fine season for the early varieties. In fact, this is the first year that peonies have looked so well in years, and then along comes the dark, cool weather and spoils the Memorial day situation.

At the week-end one can buy peonies all the way from 50 to 75 cents per dozen. One retailer has contracted for 2,000 choice peonies at 4 cents each.

There are some nice carnations to be had. The carnation crop is not heavy, and there will be a great many more roses than carnations to offer the public. There are unlimited numbers of Shasta daisies and marguerites for the holiday. Roses demand all the way from $3 per hundred for short to $20 for the longer grades. About the best roses on the market here at present are Russell and Premier. There are a few Beauties coming in, but they are nothing to brag about. Unlimited numbers of calendulas are arriving daily. Some excellent snapdragons are in. The market is pretty well loaded with gladioli, but they are a good asset. Pendleton and America never were better. Sweet peas are scarce, as so many of the growers are throwing out their stock. Callas are plentiful. Easter lilies are a little

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Last week brought a large number of funerals, weddings and graduations, which kept the retail florists busy. Stock was plentiful and a fair supply of outdoor stock arrived daily. The Memorial day demand for bedding stock was large. Roses played the big part in the cut flower market. Stock continues to be of excellent quality and the prices are moderate. Carnations are getting toward the end of their season and the quality is not up to its former standard. Sweet peas are also slowing up, but their quality is good. Sunday, May 28, was observed at Highland park as azalea day. The fine weather and warm rains had brought out the blooms so that the azaleas were about at their best. In addition to the blossoming shrubs, the Japanese peonies and a number of other flowering shrubs and plants have donned their summer beauty and are doing their best to make the park a gem of splendor. BOAST OF BADGER TRADE.

Part of Milwaukee's Fame.

In the monthly magazine called Wisconsin Horticulture, which the Wisconsin State Horticultural Society issues, is a florists' department, the feature of which in the May issue is an illustrated article regarding C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, and his extensive range of greenhouses at West Allis. As a director of the Society of American Florists, Mr. Pollworth is widely known officially, as he has long been personally. So some of the article will be interesting to readers of The Review. "Ten to one, few people thought Clem Pollworth would become one of the largest wholesalers and growers in the northwest twenty-five years ago, when he started in a humble way, selling flowers in a little store near his present location," says the article. "But Clem knew folks and he was industrious and absolutely dependable. He still is—and in any flurry among the Milwaukee florists, his is the cool head that again brings harmony and tides over the trouble, whatever it may be. Though by no means an old man, he has a trusted line of advice which he shares

"Two decades ago he began the building of his own greenhouses, out in the wilds of West Allis, where now a thriving settlement grows, with stores, a cemetery, a mausoleum, n'everything. And his greenhouses are not a bit behind the march of progress. They have steadily grown until he now has thirty-two 250-foot houses. He expects to make it an even three dozen this coming summer."

"The establishment is easily reached by the West Allis car line, at the Fairview Mausoleum stop, and visitors are always welcome, although there is no retail business done either at the greenhouses or the store downtown. The downtown establishment is on the northeast corner of the city hall square, on Market and Oneida streets, and is really almost overcrowded, with the enormous supply business, which supplies florists in nearly every state in the Union. There is carried an immense stock of florists' supplies—fancy baskets, containers and the hundred and one things a retail florist uses. Last month orders were shipped to Pennsylvania, New York state, Texas and Bermuda and two to the Hawaiian islands. Some of the supply business is due to the traveling representatives, who call on trade and sell these lines clear to the Able Grower.

"Early in the game Mr. Pollworth associated with him a good English grower, William Kennedy, Sr., who has kept things going economically and energetically at the range. And now that William, Sr., has passed middle age there is a Bill, Jr., as he is affectionately known at the range, who, they say, has more pep than his dad ever had. Anyhow, a little thing like an order for 100,000 carnation cuttings doesn't make Bill bat an eyelid. They do stunts like that frequently out at the range. I've forgotten how many minutes it takes to walk from one corner of their carnation house to the other, but it isn't in yelling distance. "Roses are another big stand-by at the range, such proven varieties as Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Hearst, Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Premier, Columbia, Butterfly and Mrs. Russell being grown.

"In the mum season you'd think they were growing them all for the flower show. The fellows at the range are not 'stick-in-the-muds,' either. They are always originating something that other growers want. Their Mrs. C. C. Pollworth proved a fine yellow show type of mum. Their new hybrids of pompons are eagerly sought by Milwaukee growers.

"Pollworth's bulbous stock is carried and grown in great profusion. Likely they are not excelled in the northwest in this respect. The jonquils, daffodils and narcissi are in many varieties, with an eye to new introductions. Some of their King Alfred and Gloire de Sessenheim daffodil bulbs cost 20 cents apiece, and more, in Holland, but you should see the huge trumpets!

Plants Up to Pace.

"Most of this article has dealt with the cut flowers so far, but don't forget that there is a large section of potted plants, too, ably presided over by William Hogue. What he doesn't know about shaving production costs isn't worth knowing anyhow, and you'd really think he was holding an exhibit, when you see how neat his stock always looks. To name the kinds of pot stock he grows would take up too much of this magazine, because that is a seasonable affair, and he always keeps pace with the fickle public taste—yes, and anticipates it. Although he is solid with the usual hardy foliage plants, ferns, geraniums, begonias, sansevierias, coleus, crotons and such, he is always growing novelties in improved Primula obconica, cyclamens, calceolarias, cinerarias, azaleas, genistas, Japanese lilies, ice-plants, Cleveland cherries and such plants. He is generally to be found around the orchid house, seeing that the hundreds of plants of Cattleya Schroederæ and Cypripedium insigne are properly cared for. And let me ask you if one orchid plant that produces twenty-four blooms at $2 per, at one time, is properly cared for? If we could grow a dozen of these

"We have hinted before that Clem
Pollworth is well thought of at home.
He is a leading light, indeed, in the Milwaukee Florists' Club, which comprises eighty florists in Milwaukee, some forty-two of whom are growers. Of course, with such an establishment he cannot begin to grow all he can sell, so he handles quantities of their stock as a wholesaler.

"Mr. Pollworth is also a member of the board of directors of the Society of American Florists, and as we write this is down in Indianapolis, Ind., arranging for the national show. He expects to make quite a display at this show, especially in carnations. And we hope and expect that he'll show the world that hooch isn't the only thing that makes Milwaukee famous!"

MOTT-LY MUSINGS.

Gathering up the morning cut of a house of Delphinium Belladonna, now in second crop, Victor Groshens, Roslyn, Pa., commented upon the value of these as a catch crop. Something happened to the rose, Mrs. Charles Russell; so, without dallying to bring the rose back, Mr. Groshens threw it out.
"We cannot afford to wait in these strenuous times," observed our hustling confrere. Plants sell freely at the 5 and 10-cent stores; a prompt source of revenue.

Adolph Farenwald, Roslyn, Pa., is cutting fine crops of the Russell rose.
This rose has held up with the best of them throughout the entire season.

construction with the rose, American Legion, as it is doing so well here.

William Wunder, Pittville, Pa., commenting upon the early arrival of the Memorial day number of The Review, said, "It is good to have it around—best kind of publicity. Although really a trade magazine, it need not be kept out of the sight of the customer, so to speak." The gradual encroachments of the city will soon absorb this busy establishment and swell the coffers of our confrere, who, it is hoped, will decide to "carry on," even if it must be elsewhere.

William Koehler, Frankford, Pa., observed that the call for variety in bedding plants is encouraging. While geraniums will, doubtless, always lead, large quantities of small plants, such as alyssums, calendulas and the like, grown in frames, find a ready sale. son. The great wealth of conifers and flowering shrubs of the firm have been heavily drawn upon. Shade trees also are in big demand.

Peter A. Peterson, Asbury Park, N. J., is having a grand rush in planting for Memorial day. He also is furnishing the best hotels here with decorative stock.

M. H. Kruschka, Asbury Park, N. J., has his hands full filling contracts for summer residents. Mrs. Kruschka has charge of the store, which is exceedingly attractive.

D. B. Edwards, Edwards Floral Hall, Atlantic City, N. J., predicts this season to be one of the best on record. Pot roses and hydrangeas are making a fine showing for Memorial day, while crotons and dracenas are freely used for decorating purposes by the leading hotels. Speaking of dracenas and the splendid stock grown by the Robert Craig Co., Norwood Station, Pa., their novelty for 1923, Dracena tricolor, will create a sensation. The combination of pink, white and green is highly effective.

William Bryan, Elberon, N. J., and John Bennett, Hillside Greenhouses, Atlantic Highlands, N. J., are well pleased with the season's prospects, as also are members of the long established William G. Eisele establishment, at West End, N. J., where a choice assortment of stock may always be seen.

Memorial day created the usual demand for cut flowers and blooming plants among Albany, N. Y., florists, regardless of the sale of paper poppies on the streets, which ran into the tens of thousands. Mabel Harding, of Danker's, arranging some lovely floral baskets for special orders, remarked that some charming brides were to change their names in June and the prices of some of the bouquets were given in a whisper. F. H. Kelliher, of Danker's, secretary of the Albany Florists' Club, mentioned that the next meeting will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms in June, when special business will be taken up. Fred A. Danker commented upon the damage done to conifers last winter. He said that large numbers of them have the appearance of having been blasted, while many show signs of having been either partially or totally killed. These conditions were noted through Long Island and elsewhere. R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., stated that, while it was true that the average temperature had been higher throughout the winter, the total mortality was greater than when the winters had been more severe.

Charles E. Lenker, Freeport, N. Y., follows the custom of many growers in planting carnations indoors, claiming that better control is possible and that checks in replanting are avoided. A fine crop for Memorial day, together with a batch of Geranium Beaute Poitevine, swelled the treasury. W. M.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

The glut of flowers in the Washington market continued last week and the wholesalers and growers found it impossible to move even a part of the stock that came in. Fortunately, Memorial day helped to use up quantities of certain of the flowers. All through the week the retailers placed orders for peonies, which they placed in cold storage. On quantity sales the price was made at approximately $40 per thousand, but in small quantities good peonies brought $6 to $10 per hundred. The local growers have produced some good flowers of this variety this year.

Literally speaking, the outdoor flowers came into the market in cartloads and naturally much of this class of stock found its way to the refuse heaps. Included in this class of flowers were cut rambler roses, gaillardias, cornflowers and sweet williams. Easter lilies are moving slowly, on account of the large supply of peonies. Roses were more in demand last week than they have been for some time, although prices continue to be low from the growers' standpoint. Some fine Russell and Columbia were offered at reasonable figures and were well taken.

A large number of local schools and seminaries are now holding their annual commencement exercises. These are productive of a large amount of extra business for the retail establishments and, of course, are reflected in the day's sales by the growers and the whole-salers. Gude Bros. Co. last week furnished 125 shower bouquets made of lavender and white sweet peas for the National Park Seminary and, in addition to that large order, furnished many corsages which the girls wore following graduation. The corsage bouquets were all of fine stock.

Carnations are still in glut and are hard to move on account of the small size of the flowers. The price hovers around $3 and $4 per hundred. Orchids and valley are much in demand and the supply is only sufficient to take care of the orders. Orchids are rather scarce at this time and are bringing from $9 to $12 per dozen. Valley sells at $6 to $8 per hundred. The commencement exercises make the sale of these two flowers good. There is a huge quantity of sweet peas on the market at the present time and the quality is good, considering the lateness of the season, but there is no

George C. Shaffer was seen on the boardwalk at Atlantic City last week.
Mr. Shaffer went to that popular summer resort to attend the convention of Masonic clubs.

Daylight saving in Washington has proved a failure. Large business houses of the city, and the department stores in particular, have returned to standard time. Practically all of them gave the local plan of daylight saving a trial for one week, but found that for them it did not work. The local flower stores suffered in common with other specialty shops. The people did not come out early in the morning and at 5 p. m., the closing hour under the daylight saving plan, the stores were crowded.

received a beautiful tribute on Mothers' day from the Reliance Seed whose names were furnished by the Red

The Review is able to announce that it NOW is in position to make immediate shipment of

BAILEY'S STANDARD

Cyclopedia of Horticulture

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in present competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

Send Your Orders Now—Delivery by First Express, Prepaid

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

Don't Forget It

Confidence is a firm's best asset and it certainly applies to our business in a very large degree.

We can say, however, without fear of contradiction, that no one has ever felt that their confidence was misplaced when they consigned their flowers to us. Consign that next shipment to us and acquaint yourself with our service.

Special opportunity for a couple of good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

SEATTLE NOTES.

evening F. A. Allen was also host to a large party at his home and a number of florists were included among those present.

Felix Rosaia has been moving large quantities of tulips through special window displays. He reports continued good results in the sale of potted geraniums and other seasonable offerings.

Recent visitors included Mr. King, manager of the Butte Floral Co., of Butte, Mont., and G. Gagnon, of the Gagnon Sweet Shop, at Aberdeen, Wash., the first of the northwestern candy stores to take up the handling of flowers.

McCoy's has had several large funeral commissions of late.

The Pinehurst Floral Shop advises that the better weather has drawn more shoppers downtown and helped smaller transient sales to a notable degree, with stock plentiful. Funeral work has been ahead of the average.

The Capitol Hill Floral Co. has been moving all the early peonies it could secure, and has practically cleaned up the supply of several of the local growers.

Kenney's developed an attractive window background for showing its flowers through the use of flowering dogwood, the bright blooms standing out to advantage against this green and white background.

Irving Harris, of the Bon Marche Flower Shop, has been enjoying the best business since opening his shop during the last two or three weeks, and has been moving considerable summer stock.

The Orpheum Floral Co. continues to feature its combination boxes of flowering plants in colorful combinations, with good results. Tulips have been in heavy supply and special efforts have been made to keep this stock moving.

H. M.

Bemidji, Minn.—A bad fire recently destroyed the stock of bedding plants of A. E. Webster. Mr. Webster is the proprietor of the Bemidji Greenhouse and Florist.

Corning, N. Y.—Spiros Condos, who conducted the flower shop at 8 West Market street for several years, has sold his interest in the shop to James Massadon and Harry Maragus, of Hornell, N. Y. The new owners took possession of the shop May 11 and expect to conduct it here in connection with their Hornell shop. Mr. Condos has no definite plans for the future.

TEN acres of peas for seed to be supplied to a Portland firm this year are being grown by J. W. Chase & Sons, Pruneville, Ore. The first five acres, which were planted February 6, are now ready to bloom. In case this year's crop proves a success, there will be a much heavier planting for the coming season.

FRENCH BULBS.

It appears that there are to be complications in the French bulb situation again this season. Last week certain exporters at Ollioules cabled prices and obtained some acceptances. A few days later they reported they were unable to place the business at the figures named. Now comes the report that the crop of Paper Whites has been sharply reduced by dry weather and may not exceed fifty to sixty per cent of last year's short crop; that most of the growers have declared they will not

SEED TRADE PROBLEMS.

Steckler Seeks Solutions.

In his address as president of the Southern Seedsmen's Association, at the convention at New Orleans this week, Joseph Steckler touched on some of the leading problems of seedsmen at the present time. Regarding them he said:

"I dare say there is not one of us in this room who has not at some time or other (and particularly within the last few years) been called upon to face financial difficulties, poor collections, heavy obligations and all the attending difficulties of financing a business. What have our losses been in worthless checks, uncollectible accounts, long-standing accounts, collection fees, bookkeeping entries repeated and repeated, stamps and stationery? Each one in itself not large, but in the aggregate an astounding figure.

"Cannot some plan be evolved by which the sad experience of one may be the safeguard of the other? Is it possible that all or many must fall ere the others be warned? I would suggest that discussion be had on this subject and that, if found desirable, a committee be appointed to study the matter and determine upon some plan to be followed.

"At one of our former conventions an effort was made to bring about some plan by which the surplus stock of one might be the means of aiding another short on that particular stock—a relief to both; a loss prevented on one side, a satisfied customer on the other. I earnestly believe that more attention should be given to this question than has been given it in the past and that if the idea be developed to its fullest, we shall be greatly surprised at the results, not to say extremely benefited.

Advertising.

"During the conduct of the war, our business was given a boost, the like of which no other business has ever received. On all sides, from north to south, from east to west, the cries went up, 'Plant more seeds,' 'Home gardens,' 'Raise your own vegetables and help feed yourself.' All over the country, we were advertised, broadcasted, proclaimed as the center of all gravitation; the proverbial end of the rainbow from which flowed the boundless stream of wealth. What have we done to retain the advantages gained by all of this? What have we done to sustain ourselves upon the high pedestal to which we were raised? The national garden bureau, I believe it safe to say, has to the satisfaction of all carried the burden it undertook, but we can do our individual share and thereby supplement and support the work which the bureau is doing. I believe we should undertake to educate, and inculcate in the minds of our people the real significance of plant life, plant cultivation, vegetable and flower. No one will deny the conduciveness of beautiful flowers and fine shrubbery to good health, clean life and fine morals. Yet our cities are literally covered with thousands upon thousands of homes in which the slightest vestige of a growing flower plant cannot be found. Our children are born and grow to manhood and womanhood and have, if anything, only the most meager knowledge of plant life. Ask any child you meet if it has ever planted a seed of any kind, or has ever seen potatoes grow. What a field, then, for cuss this subject, but will touch upon it briefly in order to stress its vital importance to our business. While it is the fact that the consumer, and not the shipper, bears the transportation charges, we seldom hear of anyone except the shipper attacking a freight rate as too high, unduly prejudicial, or otherwise unlawful. The reason is not a mystery. The consumer does not pay the freight charges as such. They are hidden from his view in the retail prices, just as are the indirect taxes and duties levied upon articles of commerce. On the other hand, the freight rate is in clear view of the shipper. He pays the freight charges in the first instance, and even though he passes them along later in the price of his goods, he still is interested in their measure, since such charges constitute an expense that enlarges the ultimate selling price. And the enlargement of the ultimate selling price spells the lessening of the number of sales and of the sizes of the sales. Certainly, this is a matter which calls for our best thought and most serious attention.

Overhead.

"Overhead is, I believe, one subject which cannot be discussed too frequently. It is a matter of most vital importance in the life of any business, and particularly ours, and I fear that a good many of us do not give it the attention it deserves. We all know that nearly every commodity in our line is being sold today at or below pre-war prices, while nearly all the expenses of handling, selling and turning over our goods are at or not much below war figures. With such being the fact, I believe it behooves us all the more to consider carefully the matter of price-making. A few cents added to or subtracted from the sale price will be no added or lessened burden to the purchaser, yet these same few cents multiplied by the volume of purchasers will spell success or failure to the seedsman.

"It is needless and perhaps painful to dwell upon the conditions which have existed generally in the immediate past, but while the course has been stormy and strewn with dangers and pitfalls, I believe that the clouds of difficulty and disaster are beginning to vanish and that the sun of prosperity will soon cast its rays upon us in full beauty and radiance, and so, having tasted the bitter, we may be better able to appreciate the sweet."

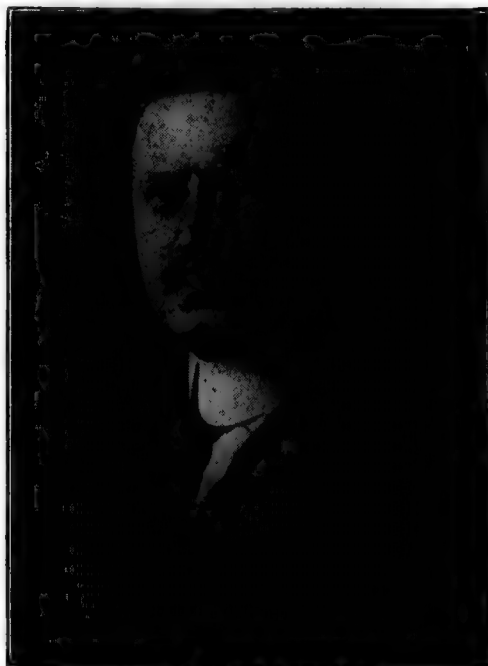

CALIFORNIA SEED OUTLOOK.

Under date of May 24, John Bodger & Sons Co., Los Angeles, Cal., report on seed crops as follows:

"Referring to the prospects for California seed crops, we would state that John Bodger, Sr., advised us last summer that the drought in Europe would have a bad effect upon the perennial crops and we made a special effort to increase our planting of such perennials as we could grow successfully in California. For instance, we have increased our planting of varieties of delphiniums, dahlias, anchusas, carnations, single Gypsophila paniculata, hollyhocks in varieties, scabiosa and wallflowers.

"Prospects today are good, although we are heavily booked on a large number of the above varieties and expect to be sold out long before the harvest is over.

"There seems to be a considerable demand for all kinds of flower and vegetable seeds at this time, and we are oversold practically on all vegetable seeds and on many flower seeds. There seems to be an unusual demand for grandiflora mixed sweet peas, owing to an apparent overproduction during the past year. All the growers reduced their acreage and it was doubtful whether there would be enough seed to go around at delivery time. We have a liberal acreage planted, but our second planting was late, and it will depend upon climatic conditions as to whether we shall raise a large crop. The early-flowering sweet peas are now coming into full bloom and, notwithstanding the cold spring and the two severe frosts in April, they are making a good showing and there will be a fair crop harvested and probably enough to go around, although we are selling closely on some of these varieties. On late-flowering Spencers in named varieties the prospects are good and there will be ample to take care of all our business, but we think there will be no great surplus of mixed Spencer this year. The green aphid has made its appearance quite noticeably, but we have been successful in fighting it by spraying, and we hope to get through without any serious damage.

"We have perfect stands of asters and zinnias and on all kinds of annual flower seeds. Prospects, generally speaking, are of the finest."

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

PETERSON NURSERY, Chicago, has ambitious advertising plans, and to insure their successful execution, they have been placed in the hands of Frank B. White, Chicago, whose agricultural advertisers' service is well known in the trade. The Peterson peonies and irises will be advertised in magazines and by direct mail, a catalogue in colors being in preparation.

JOHN WATSON, who terminated his service as executive secretary of the American Association of Nurserymen just about twelve months ago, is now secretary of the Du Bois Press, Rochester, N. Y., printing department. The high-quality color work of the Du Bois Press and Mr. Watson's thorough knowledge of nurserymen's advertising will form a combination of much value to members of the trade.

NURSERYMEN TO CONVENE.

At Detroit, June 28 to 30.

The American Association of Nurserymen will convene at Detroit, Mich., June 28 to 30. The "Baby Rambler" program committee, consisting of William F. Flemer, Jr., Princeton, N. J., chairman; Horton Bowden, Geneva, N. Y., Paul V. Fortmiller, Newark, N. Y., William H. Masten, Newark, N. Y., and Albert F. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., has issued the program for the forty-seventh annual convention of that association.

The committee has given the matter of selecting a program considerable time, and, judging from the result, the meeting should be well worth the attending. In formulating the program the Baby Rambler committee has consulted with the executive committee and a number of large firms throughout the country.

and the program can be called a synopsis of all the resulting suggestions.

The program, as can be seen upon reading, is full of numbers of educational and social value. For instance, the addresses by the Hon. Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, should be well worth the hearing, as well as that by Gifford Pinchot, nominee for the governorship of Pennsylvania. It should be added here that, although the Baby Rambler committee has been trying hard all along, with the coöperation of the executive committee, to get Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Wallace, their appearance is not definitely assured. But a rousing "get-together" banquet, a visit to Henry Ford's establishment, and other pleasurable attractions.

PRIMULAS

As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

This illustration shows a plant in a basket

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

The Strain that Leads has proven its quality; there are none better. Prompt shipment now from 2-inch pots, $7.50 per 100 in any quantity and any color of the grandiflora or gigantea.

PRIMULAS

As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

This illustration shows a plant in a basket

Get your plants now from December-sown stock, grow them on in pots or, better, plant them out; the results will surprise you, they will average just double as much.

TORONTO, ONT.

There has been a good demand for flowers during the last week. The college convocations call for a great many bouquets, as do also the hospitals. The closing exercises have started and will continue at different hospitals and colleges for the next two weeks. The following extract from one of the local papers regarding one of the college convocations illustrates the demand for flowers there is from this source: "Banks of flowers, surmounted by fresh young faces, contrasted with the somber academic garb." It is customary at graduation for friends to remember the fortunate young ladies with flowers.

The demand for design work has been heavy. May 23, preceding the holiday May 24, is listed as Empire day in the schools, and the monuments all over the cities were draped with designs of all kinds by the children of the schools. On the afternoon of May 23 there was a parade by the cadets and girl guides, the other pupils forming an interested crowd of spectators. This year the designs were many and beautiful and ranged from small sprays and pretty baskets to large and imposing wreaths and other designs.

Miller Bros. are progressing with their greenhouses and the benches are in the first of the ten houses. Planting will start immediately.

Dealers in bedding plants are having a big season this year. There is a growing interest in flowers and the people of Toronto as well as throughout the province are being educated to decorate their property with flowering shrubs, plants of all kinds and small trees. The people are getting the habit of having flowers on the table, and when there are none in the garden it isn't far to the nearest florist, who benefits by the increasing love of flowers. J. J. H.

Greenhouse Heating

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

FOR HIGH-PRESSURE STEAM.

We are completing a greenhouse, 20x350 feet, with solid benches for carnations. The heating system will consist of a high-pressure steam boiler, centrally located. What size of flow and return pipes and how many will be needed? The minimum temperature to be maintained will be 60 degrees in a climate similar to that of Chicago and vicinity. B. F. L.—Can.

For a house 20x350 feet it would be advisable to use one 3-inch main flow pipe. From the description, it is understood that the boiler will be located opposite the middle of the house. The main flow pipe should be divided at that point and a 2½-inch flow pipe carried in each direction to the ends of the house, where they should be connected with the coils. The coils should be located on the sides of the walls. If more convenient, two 2-inch flows may be substituted for each of the 2½-inch flows. These may be carried either on the side wall plates or on the purlin posts. The pipes for the coils should be 1¼-inch, and the number will depend upon the amount of glass in the walls and the construction of the house. A well built house without glass in the walls will require three pipes in each coil, but for two and one half or three feet of glass in each end wall an additional return pipe will be required on each wall. If the end of the house is much exposed it will be advisable to start the coils on the end of the house five or six feet from each corner. R.

HEATING TWO HOUSES.

We have erected two connecting greenhouses 15½x100 feet and will use a Lord & Burnham soft coal boiler with a fire box 24x38 inches. We are getting 3,000 feet of 2-inch, 400 feet of 3-inch and 5-inch pipe for flows and returns. What is the proper way to arrange these pipes in order to secure the best results? T. B. G.—Pa.

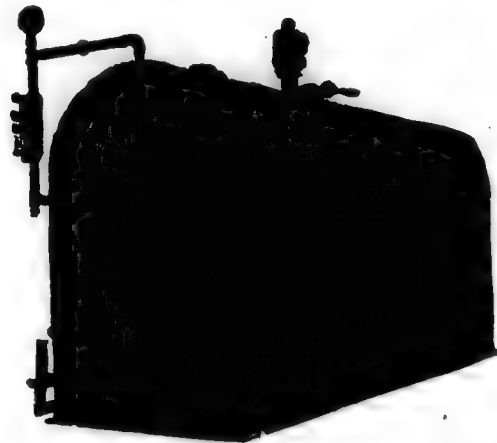

The sketch shows that each of the houses has one side wall exposed, containing thirty inches of glass and thirty inches of concrete. The temperature desired is 55 to 60 degrees. Each house has two side benches, with a solid bed in the center.

From the size of pipe ordered, it is inferred that the idea is to use 3-inch flows and 2-inch returns, which will be all right.

For each house it will be advisable to use two 3-inch flow pipes, placing them on the side wall plates and giving them a slight downward slope. At the farther end of the houses connect each flow pipe with a coil of five 2-inch returns on the outside walls and four returns on the inside walls.

This will only require about 1,800 feet of 2-inch pipes, and good results can be obtained with 1,600 linear feet. If 55 degrees will suffice, when the temperature is 10 below zero, the number of return pipes in each house can be reduced to seven, which would require only 1,400 feet of 2-inch pipe.

The boiler is amply large to heat the two houses. R.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Flowers for Memorial day were plentiful. Feverfew, candytuft, daisies, delphinium, sweet williams, gaillardias, pyrethrums, some peonies and irises composed the garden stock offered. Outdoor roses have been good this year, but the majority are gone. Peonies, too, have been exceptionally lovely, but the local crop is practically gone.

Roses, carnations, lilies, snapdragons, stocks and calendulas were the finer flowers offered for the holiday. Prices increased little. Indications pointed to a heavy demand, and it appeared that all available stock would be utilized.

Bedding stock has been in such unusual demand that orders can hardly be filled. No blooming geraniums are to be had at present; all stock showing color is sold immediately.

The landscape architects have been busy making many homes attractive. The city is overdoing itself in beautifying. It is now showing the effects of the national flower show.

Various Notes.

The Lowry Nursery Co. has just received a large landscape order from the Ball brothers, at Muncie, Ind., to landscape the new college campus.

Len Elder has just returned from Chicago, where he spent a few days.

Temperley's have been cutting some exceptionally good delphinium.

Otto Rieman is going to the hospital to undergo an operation. His wife recently fractured her spine in a fall.

USE LESS FUEL

You can do it, while at the same time producing more power, if your boiler settings—arches, side and bridge walls, and baffles—are made of

FURNACE LINING

There is no chance for air or gas leaks through a PLIBRICO setting, therefore less fuel is needed to obtain the objective desired—the production of steam.

Not only does PLIBRICO permit the production of more steam at less cost, but it forms boiler settings that last from two to four times as long as laid-up fire brick, and that are impervious to heat up to 3100° F. A complete PLIBRICO setting is a paying investment.

Our booklet D68, on "Modern Furnace Building," gives full information. Ask for it, and ask also to have our nearest representative call.

Multiplies Man Power

and LAWN MOWER TRACTOR is a motorized wheel hoe. The patented arched axle works astride plants fourteen to twenty inches high. The tool control permits close cultivation in twelve inch rows and wider (the picture shows cultivation of asters planted thirty inches apart). A differential drive enables the operator to turn about face at the ends of rows. The BOLENS is practical in small as well as large fields.

All attachments for seeding, cultivating or lawn mowing have snap hitches and can be changed instantly without the use of a wrench.

The BOLENS multiplies your man power when you are most crowded with work. It pays for itself in a short time.

CROWN-GALL, OR PLANT CANCER.

The most interesting bacterial disease of plants is generally conceded to be that known as crown-gall, or plant cancer. It is induced by a tumor-producing organism, Pseudomonas tumefaciens. The attention of medical men has been directed to this plant disease particularly through some striking analogies to human cancer as revealed more especially through the elaborate investigations of Dr. Erwin F. Smith, of the bureau of plant industry, Washington, D. C., says the April bulletin of the Missouri Botanical Garden. Dr. Smith has demonstrated that from the primary tumors produced by the bacteria, there originate certain infection strands, and these are pictured as growing through the tissues of the host, inducing secondary tumor formation at greater or less distances from the primary infection. It is also believed that in a case where the primary infection is that of a stem and the invading strand enters a leaf, stem tissue will be produced in this secondary area. The causal bacterium is able to infect a great variety of host plants and frequently produces on apples, grapes, raspberries and a variety of other cultivated plants certain characteristic swellings, usually at the base of the stem on the so-called crown; hence the name, crown-gall. The inoculations on Paris daisy, geranium and tobacco will show, however, as is now well known, that aerial tumors are readily produced.

The Market.

Business last week in this market was much the same as the week previous. Stock is plentiful and the demand is small save for roses, for which there is a strong call. The general run of business seems to be slow, and were it not for our old friend, funeral work, we might think it the middle of summer.

Roses are now in good condition and move well, considering the time of the year. Carnations are in little demand, but find a fair market at that; they bring $3 to $4 per hundred. Lilies, both calla and Easter, show the effects of the summer sun and arrive in an inferior condition. Outdoor flowers, such as Shasta daisies, peonies, cornflowers and sweet peas, are now arriving in large numbers and move readily.

Various Notes.

Districts 42 and 45, which include southern Ohio and Indiana, of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association will hold a joint conference here June 12 at the Hotel Gibson. Many important matters concerning future efficiency are slated to be talked over, and all F. T. D. members, especially those of districts 42 and 45, are earnestly requested to be present. H. W. Sheppard, vice-president for southern Ohio, reports that everything has been arranged for a large gathering.

C. E. Critchell's condition is about the same as at last writing, but he has hopes of being back on the job soon. Sales have been quite brisk at this establishment lately, in chiffons and green goods especially.

Julius Baer reports a good week in general sales of flowers.

The William Murphy Co. is receiving some good outdoor sweet peas, the first of the season, from C. A. Murphy, of Price Hill.

H. W. Sheppard's shop has been steadily on the jump lately, taking care of wedding orders and funeral work.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange is receiving good America gladioli from Charles Windram, of Cold Spring, Ky.

Peter Weiland's peonies are among the best to be had at this market at present. They are grown at Newcastle, Ind.

William Gear was seen on the market quite frequently last week, a good sign that upper Vine street is busy.

E. G. Gillett is getting regular ship-

Market conditions have been good. Mothers' day business was a record-breaker. The volume of business far exceeded that of other years. While stock was plentiful, there still was not enough to supply the demand. Everyone cleaned up well. For a few days following Mothers' day business seemed rather slack, but picked up later. Roses, carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas are in good supply and the quality is fine. The local peony crop was in just right for Memorial day. Saturday, May 27, the market was flooded with peonies, irises and pyrethrums.

The Blossom Floral Co. reports business about normal, following the big rush for Mothers' day. This firm anticipated a large amount of trade for Memorial day. It was said that Mr. Blossom would take advantage of the excursion Sunday, May 28, to visit some of the Chicago florists.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a fine lot of Cattleia Mossiae and C. gigas.

Lloyd Bunch of Fredonia, Kansas, finds Cannas a profitable crop when Skinner System Watered.

Making Money With Cannas

Cannas behave pretty much the same whether grown in Tennessee or Vermont, because a canna is a canna. But Floyd Bralliar, of Madison, Tenn., in an article in the Review, tells below how they act when given plenty of water:

"Cannas thrive best where they can secure a large supply of water. In fact, they will grow in the edges of swamps and rejoice in the opportunity. I placed a few plants, of the high-priced novelties, where we could irrigate them thoroughly with a Skinner overhead sprinkling system and watered them every day, and on hot days sprinkled the foliage thoroughly about noon besides. We got an average of fifty good eyes for each plant set, to pay us for our trouble. These results are given, not because they are of great practical value to the commercial grower, but just to show what water will; do if you'll only let it do it."

Cannas are over 85% water when grown right. If they don't get that 85% you don't get the cannas you ought to get.

And what it will do for cannas it will do for carnations, asters, gladioli and dahlias.

A 100-foot portable sectional line costs complete only $39.75. Waters 5000 square feet without moving.

The Last Full Iron Frame House of Mr. Didato, devoted entirely to growing Sweet Peas

Jimmy Didato Is Still Going Strong

Jimmy's friends have stopped shaking their heads.

Years ago they decided he would kill himself if he kept on working the way he was. But he kept right on, and kept right on making money, and kept right on building bigger and bigger houses.

Jimmy is into everything—himself.

He says, "That's how I get everything there is in everything."

He also says: "Some day, after I get my range built as I have planned to do, then I'll do some sitting back and see to it that the other fellow works."

Of course, Jimmy thinks he will sit back. But he won't.

Furthermore, when he gets the range completed that he has planned for, he will go right on building just the same.

His last house is one of our top-notch Full Iron Framers, 66 feet wide and 170 feet long, built especially for sweet peas.

So satisfied has he been with everything we have built for him, that when his neighbor, Henry Schnitzpahn, thought of building, Jimmy saw to it personally that he came to the right firm.

As a result, we are just completing two houses, each 46 feet by 207 feet, for the neighbor.

We'll soon show you photos of them, and tell you all about it.

Steel is higher.

And going higher.

Good time to build. Won't be any cheaper.

Paint

What an endless source of worry and bother a poor paint job is!

As a rule the biggest expense in painting work is the labor of applying.

Then why buy a cheap, inferior paint only to have it peel off or discolor or wash off like chalk? You will have to admit THAT is poor economy.

Moninger paint is made only of the highest grade materials, carefully and thoroughly mixed, after a formula worked out years ago by government chemists as being best suited for cypress wood and for greenhouse work generally.

Better send in your order, so that you will have the paint handy when you need it.

No—You Are Wrong

That is to say you are wrong if you think our No. 2 Construction is just the same as the No. 1, only made lighter in widths up to 40 feet, for which it is used.

Of course, it's plain that the wider the house the more staunch the framing must be.

But the No. 2 has features absolutely differing from the other.

The post detail at the eave, for instance.

And the spacing between rafters and the number of lights of glass.

Of course, both constructions are based on our original iron frame basis of wrought iron posts, and steel rafters and purlins. But you know that all iron frame houses, with the exception of the wrought post, have steel rafters and purlins.

Recent Orders for Houses

No. 1 Construction

Theo. Hengstenberg, Hempstead, L. I.
41 ft. x 125 ft.

No. 2 Construction

Snell & Bronner, Mohawk, N. Y.
40 ft. x 150 ft.

It's not so much what you use, as how you use it. Not so much how much iron and steel there is in the frame, as is it rightly placed?

Is there more than necessary, or less than safety demands?

To know what is right, we have the right to know. But it wasn't picked up in a year, or in five years.

It's the result of years and years of experience. Half a century in fact.

So far as we know, no greenhouse concern has been gathering experience as long as we have.

It's a thing to bear in mind before you sign a contract, just because the price may on the surface look less.

Those who buy solely on price, generally pay dearly for what they thought was buying cheaply.

Our Semi-Iron House has a Wrought Iron Post and the galvanized angle eave plate with roof bar clasps. But it has no iron rafters. The roof bars with the purlins and columns have to do all the supporting. That's why so many columns are necessary.

The Number Two Full Iron Frame has in addition to the Wrought Iron Posts; galvanized angle eave plate and roof bar clasps; an iron rafter that extends from the post to the ridge. It is fastened to the post by a double iron gusset plate. So strong is this construction that in some of the widths, even including the 40-foot one, it is not necessary to use more than two columns.

The post and rafter of the Number One Construction differ from the Number Two, only in the gusset plate being larger, and of steel, to take care of the added strain on the wider houses, with their necessity of trussings.

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY "PRIVATE STOCK" MIXTURE

Realizing the importance of the Pansy to many growers both as cut flowers and for bedding plant sales, and the fact that FANCY PANSIES are hard sold when offered to the public, we have combined a mixture which we believe will create a sensation because of the many new and odd shades it contains, many of which have originated with various growers who are in charge of large private estates throughout the country, particularly the so-called "Henna" types. In short, an experience of over thirty years both as seedsman and grower, is back of our "PRIVATE STOCK"

Cyclamen Seed

From the World's Foremost Grower, Ferd Fischer, of Wiesbader.

TO MY CUSTOMERS IN AMERICA:

Those who are in the market for high grade Cyclamen Seed, I wish to advise you that I have perfected the finest strain of Cyclamen Seed I have ever offered, as for the past five years I have devoted my attention to improving my varieties. Cyclamen offered by me this season are all true to name and selected only from the best and healthy plants, which in turn give very good results.

I have paid strict attention to my Salmon and Red shades particularly for the American trade. My seed will be offered by the American Bulb Co., who are my sole agents, and none is genuine unless purchased through the American Bulb Co. It is with pleasure that I recommend to all florists who are growers of high class plants to try out my seed. I hold recommendations from the best growers in the world.

Yours very truly,

FERD. FISCHER.

FLOWERS IN THE WORLD

RANDOLPH ST.

CHICAGO

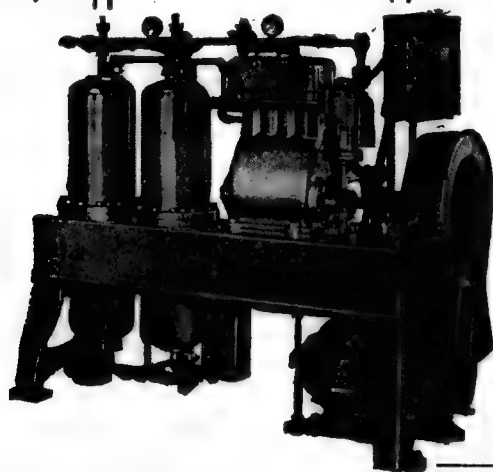

Says Icicle Ike:

It pays for itself!

"Br-r-r. These are cold facts. You can keep your expensive blossoms for weeks longer in Lipmanized cold air. No worry on Sundays and holidays. No ice to pack and muss to clean. A Lipman ends ice bills, stops spoilage and saves labor. Pay for itself? I'll say so—and then some."

No up-to-date florist can afford to waste several hundred dollars a year for ice, when at a mere fraction of this expense, a Lipman provides efficient, automatic refrigeration. Its crisp-cold air keeps flowers fresh almost indefinitely—no spoilage losses. So many savings that a Lipman soon earns its small cost—even pays a 50% profit over the use of ice.

A postcard request brings complete free information. 50 distributing points in the U. S. On request a Lipman Engineer will investigate your refrigerating problems. His advice is free—no obligation. Write today.

DRACAENAS AND THEIR DIFFERENCES

Dracænas are not only beautiful, but exceedingly varied and adaptable; there are many sorts for many situations, indoors and outdoors. Some are demurely graceful; others are brilliant in hue and are especially suitable for such festive occasions as Christmas, when bright colors are in vogue.

PERHAPS it may be well to state at the start, just to avoid being accused of inaccuracy, that many of the plants known in the trade as dracænas are not dracænas at all, but are cordylines. Even the two widely grown favorites which florists call Dracæna indivisa and D. terminalis, with the numerous popular varieties of these two species—all of these are correctly labeled as cordylines, not dracænas. But the two genera, dracæna and cordylina, are so closely allied that the botanical distinctions between them—chiefly with reference to the seed cells—are of little consequence to florists. Therefore, with apologies to the botanists, this article will henceforward shun the name cordylina and use the word dracæna in its trade sense, as comprising both genera.

Native Home and Natural Habit.

The tendency of many dracænas in their native tropical or subtropical environment, especially as they advance in age, is to assume the form of a tall, bare stem, ten to thirty feet or more in height and crowned with a palm-like tuft of leaves. But good greenhouse culture produces compact specimens, with foliage down to the base of the stem. It is for their foliage, of course, that dracænas are grown, not for their flowers. The flowers are inconspicuous, at best, and usually do not appear at all until the plants have attained a good size. But the leaves are so beautiful that there is no need of apology for the deficiency in flowers.

Dracæna Draco, the dragon tree of the Canary islands, is the giant of the genus. It yields a resin called dragon's blood; somebody seems to have known just what dragon's blood looks like. Hence the specific name, Draco, which is Latin for "dragon." Hence, also, the generic name, dracæna, which is derived from a Greek word meaning "she - dragon." There is double reason, then, for the existence of the common name, dragon tree.

With reference to the two groups of dracænas mentioned in the first paragraph of this article—Dracæna indivisa and D. terminalis, with all the derivatives from these two extensively cultivated species—a fact of real importance is that they do not require so high a temperature as do some of the other dracænas, especially those of the fragrans type.

Preferences in Temperature.

The foregoing statement does not mean that indivisa and terminalis could be grown successfully in the same temperature; not by any means. Indivisa, from New Zealand, is a cool-house subject. Terminalis, from the East Indies, requires a warm house, but not quite the warmest house in the dracæna section. The numerous varieties in the terminalis group thrive in a minimum winter temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, while Goldieana and the fragrans group, from tropical Africa, enjoy 10 degrees more heat. It is well to note in this connection that D. fragrans also needs shade throughout the summer, while terminalis and its derivatives require protection from only the brightest sunshine.

There is no wonder, then, that D.

terminalis is among the most popular species, since it is comparatively moderate in its requirements and comprises so many exquisitely handsome varieties. Terminalis itself, when young, is green or occasionally bronze, but it assumes rich shades of crimson or scarlet as it approaches maturity. The following half-dozen kinds, though often regarded as distinct species, are really varieties of terminalis: Amabilis, one of the hardiest of the six, is broad-leaved and glossy green, later becoming spotted and suffused with pink and white; Baptistii has broad leaves, deep green, striped with pink and yellow; Gladstonei's leaves are broad and of a brilliant crimson hue; Lord Wolseley is bright red; metallica is dark purplish bronze; Youngii is broad-leaved and bright green, streaked with deep red. These are just samples; there are many other excellent varieties, including some recently introduced ones which have not yet been fully tested.

Peculiarities of D. Indivisa.

But, as already intimated, it is D. indivisa, with its varieties, that is the real lover of a cool atmosphere. This species will grow satisfactorily in winter in a night temperature of 50 degrees and will even tolerate a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees. Besides being thus easily satisfied while under the grower's care, it is peculiarly tolerant of neglect and abuse as a finished plant. Owing to its ability to endure sunshine and drought, it is much used as an outdoor decorative plant, in cemetery vases, in window boxes, on terraces and in other trying situations, where it not only lives, but even flourishes. D. indivisa is dark green. Among its varieties, atropurpurea has deep reddish brown foliage; aureo-striata is variegated with longitudinal yellow stripes; lineata has much broader leaves than those of the type and is stained with reddish pink; Veitchii is similar to the type, but is suffused with bright crimson at the base of the leaf.

Besides its enjoyment of a cool atmosphere, D. indivisa has another outstanding peculiarity. Unlike most of the other dracænas, it can be easily and quickly grown from seeds. It is principally from seeds, therefore, that it is propagated. The seeds germinate most freely if sown in late winter or early spring, in flats of sandy soil, and placed in a house where a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is maintained. During the first year the seedlings usually are grown along in small pots under glass. The second spring they are planted out in the open, in light, rich soil, where by fall they develop into good plants for 4-inch to 6-inch pots. If sown sufficiently early in the spring, however, and grown along rapidly in pots, they may be prepared for 6-inch pots by the end of the following September, and thus may be grown from seed to marketable size in one season.

Among a few hundred indivisa seedlings a considerable variation of character may be observed. A few of the seedlings, perhaps, may have reddish bronze leaves and may be so choice as to be worthy of special care. If seed is not obtainable, D. indivisa may be propagated by means of canes, as are most of the other dracænas.

Propagating from Canes.

This brings us to the propagation of dracænas from canes—the ripened stems, from which all the leaves have been removed. Propagation by this method may be accomplished at any season when bottom heat is at command. The undivided canes, in their entire length, may be laid in the propagating bed, but it is more customary to cut the canes into pieces from two to four inches long and lay these in the propagating material, which may be sand or fiber or extremely light soil. A mixture sometimes recommended for the purpose consists of equal parts of coarse sand and chopped sphagnum. In this material the pieces of stem are laid in a flat position and are covered about as slightly as possible or are left just even with the surface of the bed. If kept constantly moist, over a bottom heat of 75 to 80 degrees, these pieces of mature wood soon send out a shoot at almost every eye. When the shoots are two or three inches long, they are cut off with a small heel and are placed again in the propagating bed, where they quickly form roots and are ready for small pots of light soil. Or, when severed from the fragment of stem, the shoots may be placed directly in small pots.

The Young Plants.

The little plants need a somewhat close atmosphere until established and are moved to larger pots when well rooted. The growth of young dracænas should not be checked by lack of prompt repotting. A suitable potting compost may be formed of three parts of good fibrous loam and one part of well decayed cow manure, with a small quantity of sharp sand and perhaps a sprinkling of bone dust. Leaf-mold is sometimes substituted for the manure. The pots should be well drained.

In some instances, if no canes are obtainable and if the plants in stock are small, the plants may be topped and thus induced to produce numerous side shoots, which may be used for propagation. Some varieties, including the variegated forms of D. fragrans, are frequently propagated in this manner.

Atmospheric Moisture.

A moist atmosphere is essential in the growing of dracænas. The atmospheric moisture serves two purposes—the control of pests and the promotion of the growth of the plants. Fortunately, in this case the conditions that are most pleasant and wholesome to the plants themselves are most disagreeable and deadly to the plants' worst enemies, thrips and red spider. It is well, therefore, in clear weather, to syringe the under side of the leaves thoroughly every day. On cloudy mid-winter days the syringing must be less liberal, or water may lodge in the axils of the leaves and prove injurious. On the other hand, in hot, dry midsummer weather, two daily syringings may be beneficial.

It is just possible, however, to provide an excessively hot, moist, close atmosphere and thus to induce a tender growth of the leaves. To avoid such a result, it is necessary to admit a little air on all warm, fine days, meantime being careful not to expose the plants to cold drafts. Another necessity, when such frequent syringing is practiced, is that the soil shall be sufficiently porous to permit the surplus water to pass through freely.

The Heat-loving Varieties.

In some of the preceding paragraphs, suggestions have already been offered in regard to the proper temperatures for dracænas. As has been stated, D. indivisa is a cool-house plant, thriving in an exceptionally low temperature, while a considerably warmer house suits the terminalis group. But many of the most popular, most gorgeously handsome dracænas, principally natives of tropical Africa, are at home in the warmest available house, with a night temperature of 65 to 70 degrees, according to the season and the stage of growth. Among the most familiarly known of these heat-lovers are these four species: D. Goldieana, with glossy green leaves, conspicuously barred and spotted with white or silvery gray; D. Godseffiana, bright green, thickly spotted with white or creamy yellow; D. Sanderiana, with narrow, bright green leaves, striped and margined with white; D. fragrans, with broad, substantial, glossy green foliage.

Fragrans and Its Varieties.

D. fragrans and two of its varieties, or variegated forms, Massangeana and Lindenii, are shown in the illustrations which accompany this article. Massangeana is similar in habit to its parent, but its leaves have a broad, cream-colored or yellow stripe or band along the center. Lindenii resembles Massangeana both in type and coloring, with this distinct difference, that the creamy white, yellow or gold of the Lindenii leaves is on each margin instead of in the center. On account of the heavy texture of their foliage, D. fragrans and its varieties are peculiarly well fitted to endure the dry atmosphere of residences. D. Sanderiana and D. amabilis are also among the varieties that are well adapted for the private home and similar situations.

Though a warm, moist atmosphere, with shade, is essential to the vigorous growth of many varieties of dracænas, yet in the early autumn—or whenever the plants are to be put in a finished, hardened condition, fit for the market and for their future trying environment—they must be gradually exposed to full sunshine, with a comparatively dry atmosphere. Sunshine is indispensable to the satisfactory development of the colors.

KANSAS CITY CONVENTION.

Trade Exhibition.

The success of the trade exhibition is now practically assured. All the available space in the oval is taken up, and reservations of space in the two arcades are being made at this time in number sufficient to indicate that the whole of the exhibition space in the big building will be taken up long in advance of the convention. In spite of the many announcements made through the trade press and in other ways, prospective exhibitors are still making applications for space in the oval. It may be said now, every foot of space in the oval is taken up. Plenty of opportunity was given from the time of the distribution of the plans for early reservations in this section of the exhibition, and locations were booked as the applications came in, each as nearly as possible to choice. If this oval had been three times as big, there would have been no difficulty in disposing of all the space; in fact, some of the groupings as originally planned have been departed from, in order to maintain the policy always adopted in regard to sale of space in the trade exhibition—first come, first served. There can, under the circumstances, be no reflection on the value of the spaces in the arcades, which are not at any disadvantage in comparison with the oval spaces. It will be a well arranged exhibition, and every exhibit will attract equal attention. Prospective exhibitors are urged to make their applications for space without delay, so that, at least in the matter of choice, there may be still a little advantage, if it can be so considered. The exhibition will be a record-breaker, both in scope and attendance.

The following exhibitors are in addition to the list previously reported:

Pinehurst Floral Co., Pleasant Hill, Mo.
Nebel Mfg. Co., Cleveland, O.
Robert Craig Co., Norwood Station, Pa.
Orchard Paper Co., St. Louis, Mo.
Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote, Pa.
Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.
George Wittbold Co., Chicago.
Jos. G. Neidinger Co., Philadelphia.
W. M. Woodruff's Son & Co., Lowgap, N. C.
Morehead Mfg. Co., Detroit, Mich.

Convention Program.

President Pennock and the secretary are now giving their attention to the preparation of the program for the big gathering. Prominent in the program will, of course, be a place for discussion of the national publicity campaign, and arrangements are being made for prominent speakers. The report of the national flower show committee and a discussion on it will also be featured. A meeting of the state vice-presidents will find a place, as also will a meeting of the Florists' Hail Association. Other features of special importance are also planned. President Pennock is particularly anxious to include discussions of many problems in these days of interest to florists and worthy of the attention of the society. He invites suggestions from members as to topics believed important enough to be brought before the convention and assures those sending these suggestions that they will have most careful consideration. Such suggestions should be presented as early as possible to the secretary.

Information as to hotel accommodations and other matters tending to the comfort and convenience of visitors will shortly be forthcoming through the local committees. John Young, Sec'y.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

From the secretary's office this week is being mailed to all members of the society and subscribers to the campaign proofs of the series of advertisements to appear in the national magazines during June, July and August. These advertisements are in column form, and will appear in the Red Book for July; McLean's Magazine (Canada), June 15 and August 15; Life, June 15, July 20 and August 17; Collier's, June 3 and August 5; Outlook, July 19 and August 16; Vanity Fair, July; Atlantic Monthly, July; World's Work, July; American Magazine, July; Literary Digest, June 10 and August 12; Century, August; Scribner's, July; House Beautiful, June; Sunset, July; Independent, June 10; Harper's Magazine, August, and Review of Reviews, August. It might be well for those interested to procure copies of these magazine numbers, so as to see how well the advertisements look and are placed.

Since the publication of the three previous advertisements our wonderful slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has been appreciably referred to, cartooned and exploited in a great number of publications and in other ways, showing that our campaign loses through a temporary cessation of our publicity work. During the period when scarcity of funds, mainly through neglect on the part of many of our subscribers to make good their pledges, made advertising expenditures impossible, our slogan seemed to vanish from sight, with all outside reference to it lost. A resumption of our publicity has again brought it to the front, and we are enjoying a tremendous amount of prestige, which costs the campaign nothing at all. Could better argument be advanced as to the worth of our campaign to our industry?

If our delinquent subscribers would make good their pledges, much more publicity could be provided, and it is sorely needed. Bills are now going out to all in arrears on their pledges, and immediate remittances are urged, so that the publicity committee may be able to place advertising contracts for the fall season. As it is expected that there will be great pressure upon magazine advertising forms in the fall, contracts ought to be placed two or three months ahead, so that the best magazines may be open for our use. GORLY CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY.

Vincent J. Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, Mo., celebrated his forty-fifth birthday June 3 with a reception at the Hotel Statler, at which 150 of his friends attended. The reception was featured by dancing, following a buffet luncheon.

Congratulatory telegrams from various parts of the country were read during the luncheon and displayed afterwards on a bulletin board in the lobby of the hotel. Signs in 500 street cars, each decorated with two flowers, read: "This is my birthday—I am not working." All prominent Republican officeholders were present, from Mayor Henry W. Kiel to Nat Goldstein. All enjoyed a most pleasant afternoon. J. J. B.

F. T. D. MEMBERS AT ATLANTA.

Thursday afternoon, June 1, a conference of members of the F. T. D. in the southeastern states was held in the Piedmont hotel, Atlanta, Ga., under the leadership of J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill. Irving Gresham, of Atlanta, acted as secretary, and E. M. Eichling, of New Orleans, as chairman of the conference.

Despite the prevailing rainy weather, there were thirty-one present, representing eight states, including J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; L. Jack Spence, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Miss Edith Goetz, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Karl P. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.; John J. Haurly and H. H. Rinehart, Nashville, Tenn.; Winoham Lyon, Mobile, Ala.; T. H. Joy, Nashville, Tenn.; Jerry Ellis and F. M.

Ellis, Griffin, Ga.; Carl H. Oelschig, Savannah, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. G. Leslie Whipp, Jacksonville, Fla.; Wallace Patterson, Montgomery, Ala.; E. M. Eichling, New Orleans, La.; Chas. A. Moss, Spartanburg, S. C.; Robert Lockerbie and Miss Jean Lockerbie, Greenville, S. C.; Otto Busack, Asheville, N. C.; Hilmer V. Swenson, Chicago; O. F. Shellnutt, Columbus, Ga.; J. T. Keheley, Newnan, Ga., and Miss Carrie Chance, A. W. Cline, M. W. Stallings, Ellis G. Carswell, C. J. Harrison, L. D. Thomson, Ralph Deans, F. V. Jacobs and Jacob Weinstock, Atlanta.

From 8 to 11 in the evening the visitors were the guests of members of the newly organized Atlanta Florists' and Horticulturists' Club at the Daffodil, where a bounteous repast was served, seventy-nine partaking.

At the conclusion of the dinner Mr. Ammann gave a splendid talk, picturing the florist of the past, with his great handicaps and discouragements, and the florist of the present day, with his facilities and opportunities, and he gave a vision of the florist of the future, with coöperation and brotherly love as the watchword. Mr. Ammann startled his audience when he said that he is operating his range at Edwardsville on an 8-hour shift and has been doing so for some time with great success. Following Mr. Ammann's speech, short talks were made by many of the visiting florists.

Ralph Deans, secretary of the Atlanta Florists' and Horticulturists' Club, who had the entertainment in charge, was complimented on the way he handled the situation on such short notice.

The out-of-town visitors spent the following day with the growers at their various establishments.

HAIL AT GREELEY, COLO.

A terrific hail storm passed over Greeley, Colo., and neighboring towns May 29. It was by far the worst experienced by the florists there, lasting nearly an hour and totally wrecking the various greenhouse establishments, besides ruining farm crops valued at half a million dollars. Many of the hailstones, it is asserted, measured three to four inches in diameter and struck with such force that even heavy plate glass shop windows were shattered.

The loss of Hansen's Greenhouse is partly covered by insurance, but the Dunham Floral Co. carried none. The exact amount of the loss is hard to determine, but the various places no doubt were damaged to the extent of $20,000. While present crops are ruined, the young plants of mums and carnations came through surprisingly well at Hansen's Greenhouse and they will be planted as fast as the wreckage is cleared away and new glass put in.

In spite of the storm, Hansen's Greenhouse was able to fill all orders for Memorial day, as Fred C. Meyer, of Denver, obligingly made the 60-mile run by automobile in response to a telephone call, when there were no trains running.

NEWPORT, R. I.

For June Exhibition.

With a larger schedule of premiums and a broader field of classes in view, the executive committee of the Newport Horticultural Society held a meeting May 31, at the greenhouses on the estate of Henry A. C. Taylor, and decided upon final plans and arrangements for the June exhibition, which will be principally devoted to roses, peonies, strawberries and potted plants.

It was decided to hold the exhibition in the school rooms of the First Presbyterian church, June 27 and 28, conducting it for two days this year, instead of one, as was the case last year. President Andrew L. Doorwood presided at the meeting. After the dates and place had been decided upon, considerable time was spent in a general discussion of plans for the event. The show, it is expected, will be considerably larger than it has been for several seasons.

Various Notes.

Robert Clifford, manager for Leiken's, arrived last week and began preparations for opening the firm's store on Bellevue avenue. Expecting the Newport season to be an early one this year, the firm is opening much sooner than usual.

H. J. Hass, 61 Almy street, reports an unusually brisk demand for house and porch boxes this season.

Smith reports a heavy run on cut flowers for homes, while funeral work has held up well. W. H. M.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"The largest stock and the best sales ever experienced," observed Fred Goldring, Slingerlands, N. Y., referring to their Memorial day business, adding that gloom was cast upon the establishment by the death of Robert Oliver, who had charge of the fern growing of the firm for thirty years. He was held in high esteem by all who knew him. His death was caused by an accident. While riding his motorcycle he crashed into the rear end of a truck, which was running at night without a tail light.

Alfred Goldring, Cobleskill, N. Y., had a record-breaking business Memorial day, limited only by the inability to furnish more stock.

The Hatcher Flower Shops, at Amsterdam, N. Y., and Schenectady, N. Y., cleaned out the large supply at the greenhouses at Hoffmans, N. Y., at Memorial day. It has been followed by wedding work, in which Asparagus Hatcheri is freely used.

A. J. Hilton, Amsterdam, N. Y., is well pleased with the entire season's business.

The Hotaling Flower Shop, Amsterdam, N. Y., had what was termed a clean-up sale with satisfactory prices at Memorial day.

"No kick coming," observed Joseph Traudt, Canajoharie, N. Y., when quizzed regarding his Memorial day business. That day's business absorbed all of the fine stock usually grown here.

Members of the Rosendale Flower Shop, Schenectady, N. Y., were of the opinion that the close proximity of Mothers' day to Memorial day affected the sale of cut flowers Memorial day, but the sale of plants came fully up to expectations.

"Best ever," commented George Matthews, of the Mohawk Greenhouses, Schenectady, N. Y. "We had nothing salable left, and we are now engaged in planting our ferns, which are a leader with us," continued Mr. Matthews.

E. V. B. Felthousen, Schenectady, N. Y., who has held a position at the local post office for twenty-five years, took a vacation to help out at the greenhouses during the Memorial day rush. A fine lot of chrysanthemums, Sun Gold and Richmond, are going out here. Two promising sons are taking an active interest in this growing range.

W. W. Hannell, Watervliet, N. Y., remarked upon the popularity of the hydrangea for Memorial day. He said that this popularity was presumably owing to the scarcity of geraniums, and that the plants were in the pink of condition.

J. G. Barrett, a leading Trojan craftsman, voiced the sentiment of the trade by saying that Memorial day found them sold out of blooming plants. They also had a good sale on cut flowers. Contracts for planting out were fully up to the usual high mark.

Samuel Hanson, Lansingburg, N. Y., found his Memorial day cemetery business fully up to its previous high mark.

Sambrook Bros., Troy, N. Y., did a big business in floral wreaths for Memorial day. June weddings will keep all hands at this establishment busy for a while.

Louis Menand, located near the rural cemetery, Troy, N. Y., expressed satisfaction with his Memorial day business, while John Murnane, who is located directly opposite Mr. Menand, echoed the sentiments.

The meeting of the Albany Florists' Club held June 1 was not largely attended, owing, doubtless, to the fact that the members were still engaged in recovering from the rush occasioned by the Memorial day business. This was the opinion of William C. Gloeckner, who added that between local and long-distance orders, all previous records were surpassed.

"Extremely busy," observed George Burgevin, of Valentin Burgevin's Sons, Kingston, N. Y., adding that anything well grown sold at Memorial day.

Henry Hansen, Catskill, N. Y., was to the fore as usual with stock for Memorial day, and the many out-of-town patrons who usually summer here were not disappointed in having their commissions filled. Home customers were also well taken care of. W. M.

CUSTOMERS AT $1.50 EACH

COST OF ADVERTISING.

Told by Head of Pittsburgh House.

Our business is built upon the fundamental idea that advertising is buying customers at so much apiece, and keeping them long enough to make a profit from them. That was the definition used by the founder of our business. And this concern is based entirely on advertising, if ever a concern was.

Of course, we watch all the basic needs of sound business. But if we did not advertise in the way we do, all our pains would probably not have given us a business large enough to support an individual. As it is, I believe I am telling an indisputable fact when I say that we now do a larger business in bulbs than any other retail concern in the world. And, in addition, we sell large quantities of nursery stock—trees and shrubs—growing plants, and seeds.

Ours is entirely a mail-order business. We advertise for sales and inquiries, key the advertisements, keep careful records of the results; the whole business is geared to our advertising. And our advertising divides itself logically into two parts—the magazine advertisements, which start up the business contact between the customer and us, and the direct mail follow-up, upon which we most depend to close the inquiry into a profitable sale and to keep the customer reordering. Some customers are reminded of us by the magazine advertising, of course, and reorder because of it. But in general our periodical space brings us inquiries, and our direct mail work brings in the orders. If, in fact, we can make our first sales at the rate, for magazine space, of $1.50 for each $1 of sales traceable to a magazine inquiry, we are well satisfied. Since from seventy-five to eighty per cent of our customers stay with us more than one year, and since we have over 10,000 names on our live list on plates of an obsolete addressing machine which we ceased using more than five years ago, you can see how this $1.50 figure is reasonable for us. Our sales average about $14 apiece.

Large Space in Few Magazines.

One principle that we have just recently decided applies to our business is that it brings us more profits to advertise in larger space in comparatively few publications than in smaller space and less frequently in a larger number. This year we have increased our advertising appropriation seventy-five per cent; we have decreased the number of mediums from the sixteen we used last year to seven this year. It is simply a question of cost. The advertising dollar that brings us the largest volume of sales brings us twice the number of sales when we double it. And in view of our experience, we cannot afford to spend our appropriation in any except the most profitable places.

Exactly the same principle applies in our mailings. We keep our lists in such a way that we can tell who is ordering and who is not. We have adopted rather arbitrary rules—they are based on a combination of experience and common sense—as to just how long we will send certain kinds of “literature” to certain kinds of customers. And by holding closely to these rules, we keep down our selling expense; our idea is that it is more profitable to spend our money to bring in new, live customers than to spend our money bull-headedly to extract the last possible order from a list that has gone pretty thoroughly dead.

Answering Seedsmen's Ads.

Did you ever answer a seedsman's advertisement along late in the winter, when the urge to plant seems to spring up in almost everyone's breast? Of course you did; I don't believe there is a normal individual who has not, at some time or other, filled his name in on Seldom have the costs of doing a mail order business in horticultural products been so carefully and definitely determined as they have been by Rhea F. Elliott, president of the Elliott Nursery Co., Pittsburgh, in an article entitled, “Buying Customers for $1.50 Each,” recently published in Printers' Ink Monthly, by the courtesy of whose editor it it reprinted in part here. There is much of value in it to the heads of those firms who deal, either by mail or direct, with the public.

the dotted line of the triangular coupon and received within a week or so a large book, beautifully garnished in beets and Golden Bantam sweet corn, in dahlias and zinnias and hollyhocks.

But if you are not an inveterate gardener, perhaps after the first year or so your ardor cooled a little. Or perhaps you decided to move into town and get rid of that daily round-trip in from Westchester; or anyhow, one of the thousand and one things happened that made you no longer a live customer or prospect for garden seeds. Yet I am willing to wager that, year after year, you have been receiving each spring—and perhaps again in the fall—a catalogue which cost the advertiser anywhere from 10 to 40 cents. And the chances are good that the catalogue goes into the waste basket.

Now, the seedsmen know, no doubt, exactly what they are doing. If it did not pay them to keep on sending expensive literature to every name on their lists, they would doubtless discontinue the practice. But there is enough difference, I suppose, between the seed business and the bulb business so that we cannot afford to do this with our customers. As I have said, it pays us better to keep the new names flowing in.

I do not want to give the impression that we chuck away, regardless, the names of people who do not buy for a season, names that cost us at least $1 to get. But we have a well defined method of handling our lists. And it is, I believe, sufficiently different from the ordinary way of handling so that it may be worth describing here.

Customers on Live List.

When some one sends in an inquiry—which means, usually, writes for a catalogue—we send him what he requests and put him on our live list. We carry him on that list all that year and all of the next year, even though he does not buy. For example, if we receive an inquiry in June, 1920 (or in January, 1920, or November, 1920), we carry the inquirer's name during 1920 and 1921. If, by January, 1922, he has not bought, off the live list he goes. That means that no longer does he receive our big catalogues, which cost us anywhere from 10 cents to 30 cents apiece.

Instead, however, of discarding him as worthless, we continue to solicit his business. But we do not use expensive 30-cent catalogues; we use folders that cost us only one-half to one and one-half cents apiece. And these we do not regard as active mail solicitations; rather we consider them as the equivalent of a judicious use of oxygen to revive a moribund prospect.

This folder has a double mission; if it performs either job, we count it successful. What we prefer, of course, is that it will induce the customer to buy. So we devote most of the space to describing the product and giving prices of a few good values. But then, also, we print a coupon on the folder. This coupon requests a bulb catalogue. And if the customer either buys or asks for a catalogue, his plate goes back into the live list for two more years. The special value of these revived names is, of course, that the inquirer is not likely to persist in inquiring year after year unless he is in the market and buying bulbs somewhere. As long as he is a buyer of bulbs, it pays us to keep after him.

Keeping Statistics.

When office help became difficult to obtain, we were forced to discontinue a great many activities that we had regarded as indispensable. There was no other way to keep our office expense down to a reasonable figure. And when we came to this pruning off of a few dollars here and a few dollars there, we had to think all the way down to the bottom of a great many office habits that we had inherited either from our predecessors or from outside influences.

One of the things we found we could pare to the bone was the keeping of statistical matter of many sorts. And one of these was, we decided, keeping the statistics on inquiries from each advertisement and mailing piece. Inquiry figures are among the first things a space salesman talks about. We had always kept them. But we decided, when we investigated, that the only value of the inquiry figures was to show how many extra mailing pieces we had to send out that did not result in orders. Our method of relegating names to the dead list after two inactive years made this question relatively unimportant; in fact, we are willing to take a shot at selling almost anybody for a couple of years. For we can even sell bulbs to apartment dwellers in the fall, and do sell them; they grow small assortments of bulbs in water, or sand and water, for winter house flowers.

Consequently, we discontinued the inquiry statistics. We kept up scrupulously, however, our figures on the cost, per publication, of selling each dollar's worth of product. For that has a direct bearing on our advertising and use of mediums, in accordance with our fundamental policy of considering advertising as buying customers at so much apiece and keeping them long enough to make a profit from them. We have to know what they cost us, in order to ascertain whether we are making a profit from them.

Now that competent office employees may be obtained readily, at a price that is not unreasonable, we are preparing once more to begin keeping statistics of our inquiries from each advertisement. But I shall keep an eye on the expense, and if it is not productive we shall discontinue the inquiry record.

Handling Big Orders.

I have said that we are entirely a mail-order concern. That needs one qualification. For, occasionally, when an inquiry or a tip discloses a big order in the offing, we may follow it up in person. We follow up in person only locally, however; the time and expense involved do not justify traveling any considerable distance.

This is done through the firm of Elliott & Leonard, made up of myself and our vice-president; both of us are graduate landscape architects, and Elliott & Leonard operate in that field. The ethical requirements of the profession do not, as in so many allied lines, allow for active solicitation of business. But within "ethical limits" prospects may be followed up.

We should not, either of us, practice our profession if it were not a practical necessity as a time and expense-saver for the Elliott Nursery Co. But when someone is going to spend several thousands of dollars in beautifying a large estate, he seldom wishes to do it in haphazard fashion. And if we had no way of handling this landscape architecture, we should probably have to turn to as the Elliott Nursery Co. and give it as free service, which in many instances might be a waste of time.

So now the nursery company turns over to the landscape architects any inquiries that involve layout work and the like. The firm of landscape architects makes for its services a charge that covers simply the time and expense it has incurred in handling the job; and the profit comes in the order that the nursery company gets. If, as is unlikely under the circumstances, the order goes elsewhere, at least we have not lost the time we have put into the job and the drafting expense.

Catalogue Mailing.

Our mailing of catalogues and circulars is carefully scheduled both by time and by quantity. We started this year off by mailing 6,000 copies of our seed catalogue January 3. (This mailing will doubtless increase from year to year; our seed business is a new enterprise.) February 1 we mailed 55,000 copies of our general nursery catalogue, and enclosed with it a seed folder that has another use, to another list at the same time; it is the oxygen treatment that we administer to the dead list at this time.

May 1 we mailed 75,000 copies of our bulb catalogue—an expensive and elaborate job of color and special process printing. And along with this bulb catalogue we enclosed a special circular, which "doubles" as an oxygen treatment for the dead list—the second oxygen treatment of the year, and the last for those who do not respond and who have been on it for two years. September 1 we shall mail 75,000 copies of our fall catalogue, which includes some bulbs as well as such plants, trees and shrubs as may with safety be planted in the fall.

Order Forms Are Fool-proof.

I have mentioned that we go over our routine on occasion to see what we can devise in the way of short cuts. One of the plans we use regularly might, I think, be of equal use to a great many mail-order advertisers who do business in a way not at all resembling ours. This is the use of a fool-proof order sheet, which we have devised carefully so that the customer simply cannot fill it in incorrectly. And to insure legibility, we request that the name and address be printed out. As it happens, a large percentage of these order sheets comes back typewritten!

Our order sheet is punched at the side for binding. Almost all our orders come in on our regular order sheet. And if the order comes in any other form, we promptly copy it on an order sheet. For the order sheet, which seventy-five per cent of our customers fill out so carefully, is bound as our individual

PREVENT PANIC

FIXES FAIR COAL PRICES.

Hoover Attempts Regulation.

Maximum prices on bituminous coal at the mine in three districts were fixed May 31 by Secretary of Commerce Herbert C. Hoover. Prices set ranged from $2.20 to $2.60 a ton for the Alabama district; $3.50 a ton for the smokeless coal districts of West Virginia, and $3.50 a ton for the Harlan and Hazard fields of Kentucky and southern Appalachian fields of Tennessee and Kentucky.

The prices apply only to spot coal, with the maximum for the Alabama district 25 cents a ton below the final Garfield war-time scale and the maximums in the other districts somewhat above the Garfield scale.

In explaining the action Secretary Hoover said:

"It should be understood that the whole object of the administration's interest in coal prices is to protect the consumer by indicating the maximum price that would be fair for spot coal during the temporary period of the strike, and by doing so, to protect that great group of operators who do not wish to take advantage of the present situation.

"Out of the 5,000,000 tons weekly production of bituminous coal, probably 3,500,000 tons are under long-term contracts to consumers at prices stipulated in the contracts, and there can be no alteration of these contract prices, which, as a rule, run considerably below prices for spot coal, as they represent a steady business to the mines. The suggestion of a maximum fair price relates solely to spot coal. Many coal dealers enjoy long-time contracts at lower rates, and it would be only fair to the public that, in the resale of this contract coal, these dealers should give the customer the full benefit of their lower prices, and I feel sure from my discussions with them that the majority will do so.

Follow Garfield Scales.

"The maximum price for spot coal is not the minimum price. It is only a general figure that will protect the public from such occasions as the last pinch, when spot coal in many places went to over $10 per ton. In arriving at the figure, the Garfield scales were taken as a basis, as these scales were the result of close investigations during the war, and allowances have been made for increased costs and a general average of the situation taken that would protect the public and maintain production. The maximum price includes customary selling commissions, which were established separately in the Garfield scale, and the operators are recommended to use the usual wholesale agencies, thus promoting direct movement to the consumer.

"What we are endeavoring to prevent is a panic in prices such as took place at the last coal pinch. Every consumer who is interested in knowing that he gets a square deal can easily check the freight rates, can compare them with the maximum price, can inquire from his dealer whether he is buying contract coal and at what rate, and can make proper allowances for retail distribution. If consumers are unwilling to take this degree of interest in negotiating for coal, it is a certainty that no one can help them. The government has no authority in the matter, for this is purely a moral question and one of coöperation. The consumers who are not treated fairly may appeal to this department in Washington and their case will be inquired into."

ROSES AT ARLINGTON

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Members Visit Arlington.

Rain marred the visit of the members of the American Rose Society on the occasion of their annual pilgrimage to the test rose gardens at Arlington Farms, Va., June 2. Most of the roses had long since passed their prime and the heavy rainfall shattered the blooms of those that had been worth looking at a few days before.

Apparently insufficient notice of the meeting had been given, for the attendance of out-of-town members was extremely small and rather discouraging. The local florists turned out in fair numbers, however, swelling the party. Following the inspection trip at Arlington, automobiles conveyed those attending to beautiful Twin Oaks, where the members were guests of Mrs. Charles G. Bell. Despite the rain and the wet, a tour was made of this wonderful estate under the guidance of George E. Anderson, its head gardener, who had some wonderful climbing roses to show.

The Review correspondent had made a trip to the gardens a few days in advance of the visitation, and was able to view the roses when they presented a more attractive appearance. The climbers were good and there were many teas that were well worthy of mention.

The leaders among the climbers, undisputed by those who viewed them, are Dr. W. Van Fleet, white, and Paul's Scarlet Climber. The latter can be seen looming up from all parts of the gardens and it has been much admired. The Van-Fleet rose is one that is beyond description. More time was spent in looking at it than any of the other roses.

There is considerable leaf-spot present in the gardens, and the fear has been expressed that if some of the more heavily infected plants are not removed from their present locations, it will become more prevalent. A great many rose chafers were noticed, and some of the roses had attracted spiders.

Varieties Seen.

American Pillar is one of the best looking climbers in the gardens at this time. The buds that cover it are just about to mature. It seems healthy and doing well. Empress of China was questioned as to name. However, this climber is attractive. It is bushy in appearance and covered with small, white flowers and pink buds just about to mature. Debutante is another good-looking climber, fragrant, with large blooms, which are pink when just opening, bleaching to white, yet at no time unattractive.

Andreas Hofer was full-flowered, but unattractive, as the flowers are not of good color and the foliage is not particularly good. Queen of the Prairies also is of poor color and not particularly desirable when compared with some of the newer varieties.

Many of the roses were long past their peak of beauty, yet giving evidences of having done well earlier in the season.

Leuchtstern is apparently a heavy-flowering variety. Aglaia also showed evidences of being a free bloomer. Miss Helyett is another that had bloomed heavily, but this particular variety spreads out in its growth. It produces flowers of deep pink, shading to a pale, pink at the center.

Ramblers.

Both White Rambler and Climbing Baby Rambler were unattractive by reason of the fact that they are early bloomers and they had long since passed their seasons. Officials at the gardens, however, declared that they had done pretty well a few weeks ago.

Tausendschoen is pretty nearly gone, but there are still plenty of large clusters of good-looking flowers, pink in color and shading to white. Of similar type is Shatemuc, although the flowers are not particularly good. It is doing Milky Way has been declared a good climber. It is a single white and has good foliage. It is doing well in the gardens. Silver Moon is another good one, having fine foliage. Both are free bloomers. Mme. Alfred Carriere, which also has white flowers, is attractive. However, it is not so free a blooming plant as some of the others that have been mentioned, compensating for the lack of mass flowers by blooming all through the summer.

Some Climbers.

Climbing American Beauty is a little off color and is past its time, but still it is rather attractive and has good foliage and fragrant flowers.

The general appearance of Oriole was marred by the hanging on of the dead blooms. The buds are deep yellow and are good. Klondike has cream-like buds and fairly large flowers, but the plant does not make much foliage. Ernest Grandpierre also has yellow buds, the flowers being white and growing in huge clusters, of which there were a great many. It is doing well.

There are a great many attractive salmon-colored climbers in the gardens. Adelaide Moule turns to white in the matured flowers. It is quite prolific and the flowers are double. The foliage is excellent and quite shiny. Electra is also double, with flowers fading to white, and the foliage is good. This is an attractive climber.

Golden Rambler is not particularly hardy, but the flowers are attractive, fading to white at maturity.

Lady Gay is showy and is doing well in the gardens. It has well formed flowers and is a free bloomer. Dorothy Perkins is just coming into bloom and is exceedingly good, with excellent foliage.

The Lovetts were fine this year. Mrs. Lovett is a showy plant, with deep pink blooms and good foliage. Bess Lovett is an excellent red—one of the best in the gardens; and Mary Lovett is a fine white, which has been doing excellently. Alida Lovett, a double pink, is not heavy in foliage, but is good just the same.

Hiawatha is doing well and its flowers are rather attractive, carmine in color with a white center. The flowers of Wichuraiana do not show up well in the great mass of yellow and green foliage. Dundee Rambler is poor, because the dead blooms hang on too long.

Tigira will soon be a thing of great beauty, for it is covered with buds. The foliage is excellent. Baltimore Belle is another of the late bloomers, but is not hardy. Its flowers are blush-tinted. Graf Zeppelin has deep pink flowers. They fade white and remain on the plant too long, making it unattractive.

Lady Godiva will soon be in full bloom, with attractive pink flowers. Flame, the name indicative of the flowers, is attractive. It has a large number of clusters heavy with flowers and it will soon be in full bloom. Its foliage is excellent. Trier, a white, will bloom all summer, although the flowers are not large.

Hugh Dixon is an excellent variety among the crimsons. It has large flow-well in the gardens and has luxuriant foliage.

Favorable comment was given to Rubens, which has an appearance similar to the Scarlet Climber. It was heavy with flowers and the red-tinted foliage was attractive.

Everblooming Crimson Rambler is A-1 as to general appearance, although the leaves were somewhat mildewed. It is growing nicely and was full of buds and blooms. Flower of Fairfield, which stood beside it, is also doing well.

Veilchenblau, as usual, came in for criticism. It is the only blue in the gardens and, strange to say, there were more plants of this variety than of most of the others. However, several of these are being removed. It is an odd-looking climber, showing up well from a distance, but hardly one that would make anyone enthusiastic over it.

Gardenia and Source d'Or make attractive, yellow buds, the latter being the lighter in shade, slightly more double, although not quite so large. Leon-tine Gervais has large salmon flowers and attractive buds. It is fragrant and has good foliage.

ers and good buds, but it is not much as to foliage. Dawson is not good, although free-blooming. Russell's Cottage is not good, because the red flowers turn a sort of purple and are ugly-looking. Anna Maria is also poor as to color.

Climbing Orleans, a deep pink, is a free bloomer and has good foliage. Mrs. Flight, pink to white, is excellent and in its prime. Crimson Rambler is badly mildewed, but it has plenty of leaves and is heavy with blooms. White Dorothy Perkins is just coming in. It is doing nicely, as it is a hardy plant.

The dead blooms of Queen Alexandra, a pink, fail to drop promptly, and the same is true of Birdie Blye, which loses much of its attractiveness because of that condition. Climbing La France, like the bush rose, is good in the gardens.

The rosarians were attracted to Longwood, a vigorous grower, semi-double, with pink and white blossoms having yellow centers. Gruss an Teplitz is nearing the end of its season, but is attractive nevertheless. Another good red is Dazzling Red, and Coronation is worthy of mention.

Many Teas Blasted.

A number of the teas showed signs of blasting. Many of the varieties were quite badly hit by the weather and some few among the many in the gardens are not particularly adapted to this section of the country. Of course, generally speaking, it is too late to judge many of the plants, while others were handicapped by the beating rain, which destroyed so many flowers.

The Killarneys are all doing well in the gardens, proving to be free bloomers and not particularly given to leaf-spot. Ophelia, another favorite in this section as a cut flower, is hardy and makes a good bush and has almost perfect buds. It is considered A-1 among the garden offerings. Wellesley, which has found sale in the local wholesale flower market, is hardy and a free bloomer and makes an attractive pink flower, with foliage free from leaf-spot.

My Maryland is new to the gardens, but the plants look well. Kaiserin Augusta Victoria apparently does not make good foliage and the season for this variety has passed. White Ophelia is a new addition to the gardens and nothing can be said of its performance this year. Lady Hillingdon, a popular yellow rose locally, is doing well, and Irish Fireflame attracts considerable attention and praise.

One of the leaders in the gardens is Red Radiance, which looked as if it might do extra well, for it was heavy with blooms, well formed buds and abundant foliage. A new plant that attracts attention is Red Columbia, from the Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., which has a large flower of attractive shade, slightly larger than pink Columbia; hardy, but does not make much foliage.

Some Favorites.

Frau Karl Drusehki is another favorite. It is doing well and its white flowers are large. This rose always attracts favorable comment.

No visit to the gardens is completed without an inspection of the rose General Jacqueminot, but the alternate hot and wet weather blasted many of the buds. The plant is a hardy one and does well over the winter.

Royalty is represented by Baroness

Rothschild, Duke of Edinburgh, Baron de Bonstetten and Earl of Dufferin. The first-named is affected with leaf-spot and does not do particularly well, although its light pink flowers are good to look at. The Duke of Edinburgh is also badly spotted and its growth is not good. It does not seem to stand the winters well. Like its neighbors, Baron de Bonstetten is spotted and its flowers are not well formed.

Countess of Gosford has fairly good-looking pink flowers, which are fragrant, and the plant is fairly healthy. But Lady Ashtown is not particularly attractive, for it is slightly affected by leaf-spot and does not show up well as to the flower. Archduke Charles is a newcomer to the gardens and nothing can be predicted as to its possibilities.

The Duchesse de Brabant spreads considerably, but the small, pink flower is rather attractive. Lady Ursula also makes a nice flower and is hardy.

Pilgrim a Recent Arrival.

Pilgrim has just been set out. Her Majesty is not hardy and makes a large, but rather unattractive flower. Captain Christy is a good plant. Oakmont is not showy, but it is full of flowers and buds. Frances E. Willard is a free bloomer and not addicted to leaf-spot. Mrs. A. R. Waddell is a good variety, making perfect buds and flowers, and is hardy.

British Queen does not size up well. Lady Alice Stanley is subject to leaf-spot, but is a frequent bloomer. Champion of the World is a good outdoor rose and is quite popular. It blooms early and is hardy. La Tosca is an old friend. Its light pink flower is quite large, and while the plant is inclined to be spready, it is hardy. La France is good as a garden rose.

Mme. Caroline Testout has a light pink flower and nice bud. It is hardy in this climate. Mme. Butterfly does not make much of a show, but its small bud is good to look at. Mme. Cochet is not good from the standpoint of showiness, but it is fragrant. Gustav Grunerwald is a free bloomer and has an attractive pink flower, and good foliage not given to leaf-spot.

Ulrich Brunner is good. Its flowers are fragrant and there are many of them. It is not affected by leaf-spot.

Marshall P. Wilder is good; the flowers are fragrant and the foliage attractive. Jubilee is a good red rose, hardy, with well formed foliage.

Freiherr von Marshall stands the winters well and has fine foliage. It is a free-blooming rose and at the present time is full of buds. White Maman Cochet has passed by. Mrs. Wakefield Christie-Miller is too spreading in its growth. Berthe Fontaine is also spreading and does not make much growth.

Pierre Notting is an excellent cerise. It is fragrant and its hardness commends it. It is a free bloomer and little given to leaf-spot. T. N. S.

IF THIS BE LESE MAJESTE—

Arlington. The national cemetery. Where the Unknown Soldier was lately laid to rest with pomp and ceremony such as did not mark the return of the great Napoleon.

The home of Lee. Next to Mount Vernon, the best known home in America. The Mecca of thousands of pilgrims every year.

I was there May 14 and visited the rose garden. Going from the north, I was surprised to find so many varieties in bloom at that time. It seemed to me that all were out except the ramblers.

But I was surprised at the smallness of the collection, and if it be not lèse majesté to say it, I was surprised at the lack of care and cultivation in the test grounds. The farm—or that part of it—had an appearance of neglect that was a distinct disappointment to find in a show place conducted by the government. Many varieties were growing luxuriantly even in soil not ideal for roses, but neglect of the plants, absence of cultivation and the abundance of weeds made the garden a distinct disappointment. Dreer's rose garden at Riverton, N. J., is better worth a visit both for its collection of varieties and for the intelligent care it has. Or Bobbink & Atkins' superb rose garden at Rutherford, N. J. A trip to either delights the heart of the rose lover.

MINNEAPOLIS AND ST. PAUL.

The Market.

The trade in general reports good business for the month just past, although Mothers' day was handicapped by the poor condition of stock, caused by the exceedingly hot weather a few days before.

Fine sales are reported for Memorial day. Even iris found a fair market. Home-grown peonies appeared in considerable quantities; this seldom happens. The peony season is two weeks ahead of time this year.

Outside planting here is pretty well done with. Frequent rains have made planting easier.

Iris Show Attracts.

The third annual iris show of the Northwestern Peony and Iris Society was held in the showrooms of the Wills-St. Claire Co., St. Paul, June 1 and 2. This was the largest and best show yet held. About 160 varieties were shown, and 800 vases were used to stage the exhibits. A large crowd of visitors passed through the rooms day and night.

Holm & Olson entered only one class, but the firm made a fine display of baskets of iris. W. E. Fryer, of Mantorville, Minn., made a nice showing of seedling iris. His Katherine Fryer was exceptionally good. A. C. Army and the Rainbow Gardens showed exceptionally fine iris.

A. C. Army took sixteen first prizes, Holm & Olson being the only other professional to win first premium. Rainbow Gardens and Riverview Gardens, of St. Paul, and the Forest Heights Gardens, of Minneapolis, were the only other commercial growers to win awards.

Various Notes.

The Minneapolis Florists' Club held its monthly meeting Tuesday, June 6, at the store of Rice Bros. Coöperative advertising on a subscription basis is showing good results, and the club intends to keep up this work. A. S. Rice and R. A. Latham have been successful in collecting funds.

The flower show committees are busy continuing plans for the show to be held in Minneapolis November 11 to 16.

Rice Bros. have a large crop of Lilium longiflorum about ready for market.

Half a Dozen Pots of Kamp & Spinti's New Double Trailing Lobelia.

They are market-gardening approximately sixteen acres of land.

Hans Rosacker is busy remodeling and building new houses.

Gibbs & Nelson and Peter Hermes are adding new houses to their ranges.

Robert Stein is just recovering from an operation made necessary by an ulcerated tooth. He reports a fine spring trade.

Visitors last week were John Briggs and wife, of Moorhead, Minn.; I. Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia; Julius Dill-off, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, and E. Snyder, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago.

William A. Peterson, of the Peterson Nursery, came from Chicago to visit the iris show June 2. L. Roenfield, of the Roenfield Nursery, Des Moines, was also in town June 1 and 2 to see the iris show.

June 13 and 14 the peony and garden flower show will be held in the Pence automobile showrooms, Minneapolis. Indications are that this will be the biggest ever. L. C.

LOBELIA ERINUS GRACILIS.

An excellent plant for lawn vases, baskets and similar uses is Lobelia Erinus gracilis. This plant is known as the half-trailing lobelia and is usually single, though sometimes double. It is among the commonest of edging plants and is particularly well adapted for early season effects. When planted outdoors in the northern states it will bloom until frost comes if it has good soil, plenty of water and an occasional cutting back. In hot climates, however, the plant ceases to bloom in midsummer. The plant can be propagated from seed. Seeds sown in January and February will give blooming plants by April or May of the same year. For flowers alone, rather than for edging, seeds may be sown later, but for definite results in edgings, it is best to start the plants from cuttings. For cuttings, the best plants of a former crop are selected, lifted and placed in pots in the greenhouse in the fall and allowed to grow in this manner through the winter. Cuttings which are taken from these stock plants in January or February should give blooming plants by May of the same year.

An improved strain of Lobelia gracilis, as it is commonly called, has been developed by the Kamp & Spinti Co., North Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Spinti speaks of the plant as follows: "It is a double trailing lobelia. We find it is a profuse bloomer and an improvement over any other trailing lobelia. It has been our experience to witness some of the plants bloom all summer and late into the fall, and they are especially suitable for warm weather. The plant is found to propagate easily and root action is obtainable almost any time during the winter months. We have been able to accumulate considerable stock, and will start propagating in August of this year. This will give us cuttings in September. It is also our desire to have 2-inch and 2½-inch stock for October delivery and throughout the winter."

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Memorial day business was not unusual. In nearly every shop it was ahead of last year. In a few it greatly exceeded all past years. Some of this increase was due to other business that would have come anyway. The favorable spring brought a great supply of flowers. Home gardens supplied a mass of flowers for cemeteries. Peonies seemed to be everywhere. The large and small fields came in at the right time and every grower had peonies to spare. The early varieties were held in iceboxes. Some of these held up well; others did not. There were enough freshly cut to supply what demand there was. Some of the stock was choice. This went well at the last. Carnations were extremely plentiful and good. The cool nights have kept the stock to a rare quality for June. Most of the roses are short, but they are not soft. Gladioli are plentiful. All garden flowers are good. There is the usual variety. The demand was good all last week. School commencements and weddings are using a great many flowers.

Various Notes.

Dorothy and Arthur Noll have returned from a year's stay with an aunt in Michigan, where they attended school. They will spend the summer with their father, T. J. Noll.

The June bride is featured by the Alpha Floral Co. in a beautifully decorated window. A wax figure, gowned in the latest fashion in wedding finery, with veil and wreath and holding a bou-quet of valley, stands in the window. This serves to introduce the floral part of a wedding. On a silken-covered chair is a bridesmaid's bouquet of pink roses. Silk, tulle and smilax are draped about the window, and several large baskets of flowers complete the picture.

Fifty thousand artificial Flanders poppies were received by Frank P. Adams post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, for sale in Kansas City, Kan., for Memorial day. These poppies were made by French peasant women, who will receive half of the proceeds of the sale. The other half will go to disabled veterans in local hospitals.

E. L. Clemens has been busy all spring. Mothers' day and Memorial day cleaned up his plants.

S. Bryson Ayres has bought sixty acres adjoining his farm on Blue Ridge road, near Independence, Mo. He will grow nursery stock and hardy flowers on the new ground. The spring business was the best of any season since the war.

The week beginning May 29 was one of the best in the year for J. E. Murray & Co. In addition to Memorial day work, Miss Murray had the main work for the funeral of a prominent lumberman, Monday, May 29.

Rock's Flower Gardens have 50,000 2-year-old peony plants. Lawrence L. Rock, president of the gardens, is getting up the fall catalogue. Spring business in the seed department was far better than was anticipated for the first year.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edgar, of Pittsburgh, Pa., and I. M. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, were recent visitors.

Aviators took a prominent part in Memorial day services here. Not only were there aerial exhibitions on the program for the day, but formations of planes dropped flowers at the different cemeteries. Since the war few exhibitions of this kind have been given, especially as a part of Memorial day services. This was the first time in Kansas City that aviators have flown on this day. The first naval memorial service ever witnessed here took place in Penn Valley park. About 6,000 persons gathered there to witness the ceremony and take part in the service. Two huge wreaths of flowers were cast into the lake, while a firing squad snapped a salute. The symbolic meaning of the ceremony is that the flowers scattered on the water finally disintegrate and their fragrance is carried by the waves to the dead. The ceremony was conducted principally in honor of the forty sailors and marines of Kansas City who gave their lives in the war. During the entire service flowers were continually cast upon the water. Wreaths and flowers were furnished by the Gold Star League of Jackson County, the local chapter of American War Mothers and the auxiliary to the James Cummings post.

The floral parade committee of "park and plan" week held a luncheon at the Hotel Muehlebach Friday, June 2. This parade will be the main feature of the "park and plan" week, June 12. The parade will be the afternoon of June 16. Sixty-five women, representing the various wards of the city, were guests at the luncheon. They were given the outline of plans for the celebration. An executive committee of five women was chosen to select a queen and her attendants, who will have a conspicuous place in the parade. T. J. Noll, president of the Florists' Club; Glen K. Parker, secretary of the club, and William L. Rock are members of the floral parade committee. Mr. Noll has called a special meeting of the Florists' Club for June 8 to discuss plans for the parade. The Florists' Club has offered a prize of $100 for one class of entries. T. J. Noll left for Chicago June 4 to arrange for artificial decorations for some of the floats.

A. Newell has a new work cabinet, the first of its kind to be seen here. It is of white enamel, covered with battle-ship linoleum. The drawers and trash bin are lined with galvanized tin. A drain along the top keeps the water from running down the sides. The cabinet stands clear of the floor by several inches, making for comfort on the part of workers. J. M. McKeown, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, sold the cabinet. He will have it to show visitors to the S. A. F. convention in August.

Adolph Mohr is recovering slowly from his recent operation. He has nearly 10,000 cyclamens in 3-inch and 4-inch pots and a large number of Cincinnati and Melior begonias for fall.

William Foith has planted 8,000 asters for late blooming. He has bought a piece of land adjoining his range and will grow outdoor stock this summer. His carnations were fine for Memorial day.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Cut roses were in good demand last week because of the large number of schools holding graduation exercises. However, the demand slackened off on Friday and Saturday found sales draggy. The prices on ordinary stock ranged from $4 to $25 per hundred, with as high as $30 for good Hadleys. Funeral work also was heavy and that made good the sale of the shorter grades, and at times it was only possible to get those grades, so heavy had been the call for roses for graduation and corsage bouquets demanding good stock. Some short-stemmed Hadleys were obtainable at as low as $8 per hundred. Columbia and Russell were also popular.

Peonies are the leading flowers and they predominate in all funeral work.

The quality is good and the prices range from $4 to $6 per hundred. Gladioli are coming in more plentifully and good stock sells at about $4 per hundred. The price has been as high as $25, the drop being due to increased offerings in the market.

Cattleyas are scarce and the supply is readily taken up at $12 per dozen. This represents a twenty-five per cent increase. The demand has been made heavy by the number of seminary and college commencements. There is a large quantity of good valley coming here from out-of-town points, which supplements the locally grown valley. The supply is usually well taken up at $6 and $8 per hundred.

Easter lilies are in heavy supply, but there is practically no demand for them even at $8 per hundred, on account of the peonies, which caused the price to drop from $12. This is only a temporary condition, however. The sale of carnations is similarly interfered with, but the flowers are small, showing that the summer season is here in earnest. They are being offered in quantities at $10 per thousand, but even then there are few buyers.

Various Notes.

William F. Gude, head of Gude Bros. Co., accompanied by his daughter, Miss Amelia Gude, participated in the annual outing of Temple-Noyes lodge of Masons. The lodge had chartered the steamer Midland for a cruise down the Potomac to Richmond, the capital of the state of Virginia. Arriving at that place, they were welcomed by officials of the city and taken on an automobile tour of the city.

Grace Bauer, daughter of the manager of the local store of the S. S. Pen-nock Co., has taken a turn for the better and is now on the road to recovery. She was one of about forty who were stricken with typhoid fever, presumably as the result of eating germ-infected food at a church supper. The little girl has had rather a hard time of it, but is said to be doing nicely. T. N. S.

EARLY MUMS.

What are the best early-flowering chrysanthemums to grow?

S. G.—Mich.

The earliest chrysanthemums to grow would be as follows:

PINK.	YELLOW.
Henri Vincent.	Golden Glow.
Pacific Supreme.	Cranfordia.
Unaka.	Yellow Early Frost.
Early Rose.	Yellow Advance.
WHITE.	BRONZE.
Smith's Advance.	A. Barham.
Early Frost.	Bronze Unaka.
Polly Rose.	October Herald.
Oconto.	William H. Walte.

This list will give entire satisfaction. C. H. Totty.

MUMS AND CHERRIES

Would you advise me to grow pompon chrysanthemums and Jerusalem cherries in pots in a shady greenhouse and shift them later into larger pots, or to set them out in the open ground until fall and then take them up? Does cow manure water help the growth of these plants? C. D.—Mo.

You will get the finest Jerusalem cherries if you plant them outdoors in full sunshine, dig them up and pot them in early fall, then shade and spray them until established. Pot-grown plants are always much smaller. If, however, you prefer to grow them in that way, plunge the pots to their brims outdoors and be sure to have water convenient.

The pompon chrysanthemums would give best returns if planted in the benches, but do not need shade except, possibly, when the flowers are opening, in order to prevent burning. C. W.

COLUMBUS, O.

Thousands of people thronged the Archeological museum at Ohio State University Saturday afternoon and evening, May 27, to view the display at the fifth annual rose show of the Columbus Horticultural Society. It was pronounced the most successful show ever held by the society, with a greater number of flowers on display than in any previous show and a larger number of exhibitors represented. The fine quality of the roses was particularly noticeable this year, as compared with the 1921 show, when blooms were not up to standard, because of damage due to late frosts. The show was open all day Sunday, May 28, from morning to night.

McKellar's Flower Shop has a new Dodge truck, which proves a great help. This company now has two Dodge machines for delivery purposes. James McKellar motored to Chillicothe, Mo., Memorial day. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of the same company, motored to Marion, O., the same day.

Rudolph Zisch has withdrawn from the firm of Zisch & Dozer. J. Dozer is now running the place by himself.

Memorial day business was good here, but so far no large weddings have been announced for June. J. W. T.

Philip Pflasterer.

Funeral services for Philip Pflasterer, prominent florist of Winchester, Ind., who died May 13, after a lingering illness, were conducted at his late home, on East Washington street, May 16. Burial was made in Fountain Park cemetery.

Mr. Pflasterer was born in Germany and came to the United States when a boy 10 years old. He was 81 at his death. Besides the widow he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Emma Pflfer, and two sons, William and Henry Pflasterer, all of Winchester, Ind.

William H. Hilton.

William H. Hilton, for many years in the retail florists' business on the south side in Chicago, died June 6 at his home, 5319 Blackstone avenue in that city, from cancer of the stomach. Mr. Hilton, who was about 55 years of age, opened his first store on Fifty-third street in 1892. Later he operated two flower and candy stores on Sixty-third street, but after fourteen years at 1320 East Sixty-third street he found it desirable to sell his lease there and centralize his activities on East Fifty-third street near Jefferson avenue. This was in 1912. About two years ago he sold out and went to Florida to deal in land. Failing strength sent him back to Chicago about three weeks ago and he entered Mercy hospital for treatment. Mr. Hilton leaves a widow and a daughter. The funeral was held Thursday, June 8. Burial was at Forest Home.

HERBACEOUS PERENNIALS.

June, the Month of Glory.

June is the month of glory in the hardy flower garden. A wealth of beautiful perennials are always in bloom at this season, such as delphiniums, aquilegias, lupinus, dictamnus, dianthus, peonies, heucheras, violas, campanulas, spiræas, gypsophilas, linums, irises, potentillas, hemerocallis, digitalis, anchusas, armerias, coreopsis, geums, dicentras, œnotheras, erigerons, pentstemons, polemoniums, stokesias and centaureas.

There is opportunity for much greater culture of the class of plants known best as hardy border flowers. These can be started in coldframes, the more tender ones wintered in them, and the great majority grown in the open field all the time. In well drained land few will winter-kill, especially if a mulch of some kind is applied after the ground freezes. It is well to warn against heavy winter coverings; all that is needed is merely sufficient to cover the plants, to keep frost in and prevent the soil from heaving in later winter.

Culture of Perennials.

There could be no better time than the present for the average country florist to sow the more popular, showy and useful varieties of herbaceous perennials. A coldframe with some light soil, preferably one containing considerable leaf-mold, is the ideal place to start these seeds. It is best to sow in rows rather than broadcast. These rows need not be over six inches apart and the seeds must be covered lightly. With fine seeds a little dusting of fine sand is all that is needed. Make a nice, smooth surface, and water through a fine rose to prevent any danger of washing. Use some cheesecloth over the sashes or, better still, lath shades, until the seeds germinate; then the sashes can be removed. As soon as the seedlings start to grow, scratch between the rows and pull out the weeds carefully. Some perennials will germinate within a week, others not for two or three months.

Transplanting Seedlings.

With the large proportion of perennial seedlings it is a much safer plan to transplant into frames when they are of sufficient size to handle and, if they are kept carefully watered, few will fail to grow. A little later, when the ground is in a suitable condition, these can be transplanted to the field with a minimum of loss. If taken from the seed rows and put directly outdoors, the chances are against many of the seedlings growing unless we chance to get cool, cloudy and showery conditions to give them a good start.

Delphiniums.

Delphiniums always rank deservedly high among perennials. Their stately habit, glorious range of colors and comparative ease of culture, to say nothing of their long flowering season, are all strong points in their favor. D. Belladonna is unquestionably the king of the family. The prevailing color is sky blue, but a few will come of a darker shade. The flowers are more thinly scattered on the stalks than those of the formosum type and are more branched, giving them a much more airy and graceful appearance. Until a few years ago propagation of D. Belladonna was by root division only. Seeds have been offered, however, which come true to type. There is no hardy perennial in the whole calendar so valuable to the florist for cutting as this beautiful larkspur.

There are many other handsome delphiniums, such as formosum, deep blue; formosum celestinum, pale blue; Moerheimii, pure white; King of Delphiniums, gentian blue, and Queen Wil- helmina, soft blue. A splendid selection may, however, be had by sowing a mixed packet of hybrid delphiniums. Many of the seedlings will be equal in quality to the best named hybrids. It is worthy of note that delphiniums are adaptable to gentle forcing and bring satisfactory market prices when flowered a few weeks in advance of the outdoor crop. A convenient way to handle these is to dig up field clumps in late fall, plant in boxes, leave outdoors until they have had one or two moderate freezings, keep them in coldframes until the end of February and then place them in a temperature of 45 degrees at night.

Digitalis.

There is no more stately border flower in June than the foxglove, or digitalis, and this is a reminder that no time must be lost in sowing seeds, if plants of blooming size for next year are wanted. Ivory's spotted and gloxiniæflora are the best varieties to sow. The seed is fine, germinates and grows rapidly and care should be taken to sow thinly. Protect from heavy rains while the seedlings are small, in order to prevent damping off. The foxgloves are effective in solid beds, but look specially well in masses in the herbaceous border and are at their best just in front of a belt of shrubbery. They enjoy partial shade, and in their wild state are found growing in woodlands.

BACKFIRE

HOT SHOTS FROM MISS JARVIS.

Able propagandist as she is, Miss Anna Jarvis was tardy in her rebuttal of florists' publicity for this Mothers' day, for not until May 27 did the letter quoted below appear in the Chicago Daily News. It was then tucked away on an inside page in a column of readers' views and aroused no interest save from florists who chanced to read it.

Miss Jarvis is too extravagant in her statements to gain much attention from newspaper editors today. They can see too well that Mothers' day is larger than the association bearing its name, that the day now belongs to mothers everywhere and not to Miss Jarvis.

Florists are willing to let her talk, for much publicity is gained for the day thereby. And publicity is publicity, as the eminent public man knew who said, "I don't care what the newspapers say about me, so long as they say something." And if, as Miss Jarvis says, Mothers' day business is on the slump, florists would like some other occasions to go on a similar slump, so that they might do business in the proportions they did May 14. "The handwriting on the wall for the last three years," concerning which Miss Jarvis speaks, must have been in Latin, reading, "Veni, vidi, vici!" and not the Hebrew that she thought, "Mene, mene, tekel, upharsin!"

Here is Miss Jarvis's letter to the Chicago Daily News:

MOTHERS' DAY AND FLORISTS.

In the Daily News of May 13, page 3, there appears a "Mothers' day" article. One of the subheadings of this article says: "No special flower needed."

The white carnation is the only emblematic design ever used for Mothers' day. This flower was chosen as the Mothers' day flower and emblem for many reasons and only after thoughtful consideration.

Many attempts have been made by some tradesmen to change the Mothers' day emblem for their trade advantage. It is felt such attempts should not have the support of the press or public, as in no way have these profiteers any right to name a Mothers' day emblem or any other feature of Mothers' day work.

An especially designed button-badge has been adopted by Mothers' day leaders of the Mothers' Day International Association of Philadelphia for use on Mothers' day. This badge has the association's name, that of its founder, and the white carnation on it. It is now the only thing worn on Mothers' day by its friends and none other should be used.

The necessity for discussion as to scarcity of flowers, or use of "any flower," or the puerile slogan of florists of "a red flower for the living and a white flower for the dead," is past, if it ever existed. Flowers are dropped entirely for Mothers' day, and in the future their wearing has not any significance as to this celebration. Wherever the official Mothers' day badge has been used it has been appreciated and liked. Further, commercialism has been cut out and flowers are normal in price, if not a drug on the market.

Never in the history of their business did florists spend so much money and do so much planning as they did to keep their grip on the Mothers' day just passed. For months in advance of Mothers' day they held meetings here and there in different cities, but Mothers' day business for them is on the slump. They have seen the handwriting on the wall for the last three years.

The poster got out in the name of the American Legion and auxiliary, with their insignia on it, and having all of the appearance of an official affair issuing from the American Legion headquarters, was the result of an agreement between these organizations and the Chicago representative of the Society of American Florists.

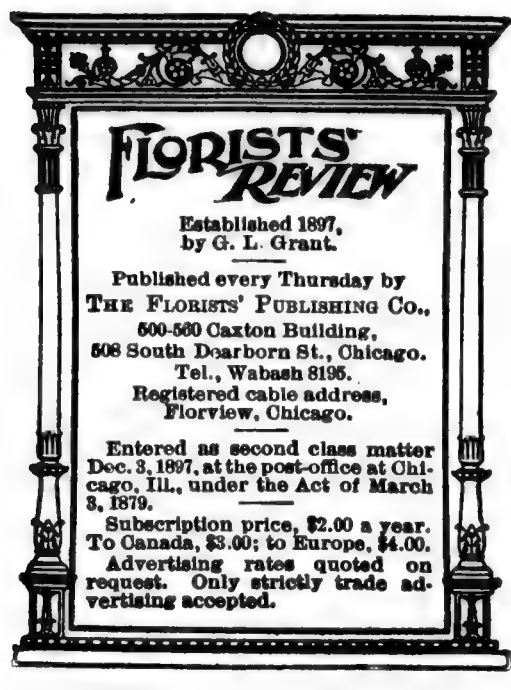

The poster was not a legion poster, but an advertisement, camouflaged through the legion's name. The poster was put in papers as an advertisement and paid for by florists.

When any facts about Mothers' day are desired they may be had of the founder of Mothers' day, Miss Anna Jarvis, Philadelphia, or other Mothers' day leaders.

The white carnation only is the Mothers' day emblem.

The Mothers' day official badge is the only badge now worn by Mothers' day friends.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

THE second installment of your income tax is due next week, June 15.

HAVE you seen the S. A. F. publicity committee's advertisements in the current magazines?

JUNE brides of former years celebrate their wedding anniversaries this month. Therein lies a large potential demand for flowers.

"THE passage of the tariff bill is in sight," says a Washington dispatch, "being only two months away." Congress will have to hurry to catch the autumn bulb shipments.

THE cost of growing flowers has decreased less than manufacturing expense in most other lines. Any means of more economical production or any means of increasing production without adding to expense will be welcomed in view of the public's demand for lower prices.

DIGESTS of conditions in various trades contain many indications of business acceleration. Not much momentum will be gathered before the hot weather, but autumn should bring a more favorable situation for the florists as a whole than they have had for eighteen months.

Do you try to sell your customers seeds and plants for their home grounds at this season? There are two profits for you in such business; first, when the sale is made, and second, when the customer, used to flowers at home all summer, buys them from you to brighten the house in winter.

FOLLOWING the example, within the last year, of the American Gladiolus Society and the F. T. D., the American Peony Society will cross the northern border to hold its annual meeting this month. It will be held at London, Ont., June 16 and 17, and preparations are being made for a splendid show and gathering.

TIMES favor the opening of new retail stores: Vacant stores are sufficiently numerous so that concessions in rent are made; help is easily obtained and at low wages, and persons previously engaged in other occupations are now casting about for means to a livelihood. It is again possible for persons of small capital to embark in the retail flower business—and many are doing so.

WE thought the war was over! But instead of Garfield's fuel administration we have Hoover's fair prices—another change of party without change of policy.

HAVE you noted how florists are purchasing land adjoining their greenhouses in order to grow outdoor flowers? They add variety to the offerings in summer, which is ceasing to be an unprofitable season for the trade.

ALREADY the Kansas City convention of the S. A. F., August 15 to 17, promises to be a record-breaker. Those who exhibit at such gatherings are anxious to show their wares to the trade west of the Mississippi, who are planning to attend in large numbers.

TIMES have changed; credit must be refused where payment no longer is prompt. The florist who permits his accounts receivable to run up faster than his sales increase is courting disaster. Success lies not in making sales, but in collecting for them.

THE increase of apartment house and hotel dwellers in the larger cities and the inclusion of areas where the wild flowers bloom in forest preserves and parks are two of the factors which are making the urban florists' summer business larger each year.

AUSTRALIA now prohibits, under quarantine, certain plants and seeds, principally among them pear pips from this country, on account of pear blight. On the other hand, quarantine 37 killed Australia's growing export trade to the United States in palm seeds.

COMMENCEMENTS still afford much business for florists. Even in Chicago, where the public schools have ruled against graduation bouquets, the Allied Florists' Association finds it profitable to advertise this feature of June business, as may be seen in the retail store department of this issue, on page 68.

WHEN a telegraph order is received from a florist in another city, send him a post card acknowledging it. Such a card serves two purposes: It assures the sender that the order has reached you, and, if the order is described on your card, it enables him to check against possibility of an error in transmission.

WHY a man should "get mad" when he is asked to pay what he owes is more than anybody can tell. It is one of those unexplainable vagaries that are described as "human nature." But one could not long remain in business if he made no effort at collecting his bills, even at the risk of provoking unrighteous indignation.

COLLECTIONS seldom are good in the summer. The florist who does not get after his money in June probably will have to wait until autumn before he can collect a good many of his accounts. There are lots of people who will use their ready cash for summer pleasures and let the florist wait for the pay for flowers long since dead and gone.

WHEN a man sends an order, especially if it is accompanied by cash, he wants something to happen right away, either immediate shipment or an acknowledgment of receipt. And if stock is sold out he wants his money back without delay. If he has occasion to send a letter of inquiry about the order, he expects an answer soon. Some sellers think this strange, not to say unreasonable, but these are the ones who gradually eliminate themselves from the trade.

To avoid a dull summer, florists must begin to push business and keep it up until autumn.

HELP THEM HELP US.

A communication from Erwin F. Smith, pathologist in charge, at the laboratory of plant pathology of the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., reads:

"It might interest your readers to know that we are working on delphinium leaf-spot and should be glad to receive material of it from any part of the country. Fresh specimens, addressed to this laboratory, should be sent dry, wrapped in newspaper."

ROSE SOCIETY MEETING.

The annual meeting of the American Rose Society will be held Thursday, June 15, at Syracuse, N. Y. The national association will be the guest of the Syracuse Rose Society.

It is expected that there will be staged one of the most noteworthy shows in the history of Syracuse; there will be rose garden inspections and afternoon festivities on Lake Skaneateles, with an evening meeting to be addressed by some of the most noted rosarians of the country, states President Robert Pyle.

PEONY SOCIETY MEETING.

The annual meeting and show of the American Peony Society will be held at the Armouries at London, Ont., Friday and Saturday, June 16 and 17, the annual meeting taking place Friday evening.

Headquarters will be at the Tecumseh House, where a parlor will be reserved as headquarters for ladies, and there will be another meeting room for men if desired.

The exhibits should be in place, as far as possible, by 1 p. m., Friday, June 16, as the judging will be done Friday afternoon.

Local enthusiasm is running high and it is expected that not only will the show itself establish a new high plane for the society, but an attendance of visitors is expected that will make many new enthusiasts in peony culture. Those in charge of the local arrangements are: W. E. Saunders, general secretary; Gordon Philip, secretary of the advertising committee; K. Casselman, chairman of the reception committee; J. C. Middleton, chairman of the show room committee.

WHY NOT BUILD ANOTHER HOUSE?

The Review does a great many things, all as a part of the day's work, to encourage the building of greenhouses. This is one of the ways:

The only kick about advertising in The Review is that my place is not large enough to grow all the stock I need to fill orders; they come too fast.—Milford Greenhouse, Milford, Ill., May 26, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

J. W., Ia.—The plant is Trollius europæus, or European globe flower.

S. G., Ore.—Cantaloupes are not grown under glass commercially.

H. C. G., Ind.—Syringa Josikæa, or Hungarian lilac.

PITTSBURGH, PA.The Market.

Business after Memorial day suffered a slump. Although toward the latter part of last week the demand revived, the supply has been so heavy that it leaves an abundance of all kinds of flowers after each day's business is over.

The usual demand for peonies Memorial day was taken care of. Shipped peonies arrived in poor condition. Home-grown peonies came into the market in time for the latter part of the Memorial day business; so there were plenty of peonies for the demand at reasonable prices.

The crop of American Beauties has been coming along nicely and has been moving out fairly well. There have been a few weddings and commencements that required Beauties. The supply, however, has far exceeded the demand. The rose cut in general has been heavy and the demand is hardly large enough to take care of the daily production. Plenty of roses in all of the following varieties are to be had: Columbia, Ophelia, White Ophelia and Ward. The stock has been exceptionally fine.

Carnations are nearing the end. The demand at Memorial day practically cleaned up the supply. Some good Easter lilies are still coming into the market and are cleaned up fairly well. Calla lilies are near their end; the ones that were in the market were cleaned up at a fair price. There are some good indoor gladioli being received, which bring a good price. There have also been some outdoor gladioli in the last week and they have moved fairly well.

Sweet peas have been exceptionally poor; at least one-half of the supply has been unfit for sale. There are also plenty of yellow daisies on the market, as well as Darwin tulips, Narcissus poeticus and valley. The demand, however, for these flowers is limited. Garden flowers, such as sweet william and delphinium, are now crowding the market. The demand for these flowers is small.

Various Notes.

W. A. Clarke, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., returned during the last week from his trip through the Canal Zone. Mr. Clarke has many interesting tales with reference to the people, their customs and the conditions in general in that vicinity.

John Weiland, of Allison Park, Pa., a grower of fancy carnations and plants, celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday anniversary May 22. A few of his personal friends and relatives called during the day to visit him and to wish him many happy returns. His many friends in the trade take the opportunity of extending him congratulations and best wishes. Mr. Weiland is still active in his work.

Fred Koehler, Jr., will be serving on the jury during the next two weeks.
H. J. H.

One of the first weddings of the season took place at the Hotel Chatham, when James D. Grafiadis, owner of the Liberty Florists, and Miss Stella Autouopolis were married June 1. The ball room was most beautifully decorated with vases and baskets of American Beauty and Ophelia roses, together with white peonies. The bridal table centerpiece was of Dresden effect and was decorated with orchids, Ophelia roses, larkspurs and appropriate rainbow chiffon. The bride wore a creation of white satin overdressed with Valenciennes lace, while a hand-embroidered court train hung from the shoulders. Her veil of old Greek lace was held in place with orange blossoms. The bride's bouquet was exceedingly attractive, being made of orchids and valley. After an eastern trip, Mr. and Mrs. Grafiadis will occupy their new home at 631 Gettysburg street.

NEW YORK.The Market.

The market last week was well supplied with flowers; in fact, after the holiday requirements were met clearances were difficult. The Memorial day business was about the same as usual for this holiday and confined to the usual items. Peonies were plentiful and sold at anywhere from $2 to $12 per hundred. Roses sold at the quotations of last week, and there was practically no advance in the prices of other staples.

Everything in the market Monday, June 5, seemed to be dominated by the supply of peonies, which was large. A wet and dull spell the preceding Friday and Saturday spoiled open flowers somewhat, and a temperature of 80 degrees Sunday, with bright sunshine, brought along stock to an extent which has kept the market filled. Still, the gluts of former years have not been much in evidence.

Roses of all kinds are plentiful, but the quality is of the summer sort. American Beauty is abundant and rather hard to move, within a price range of $15 to $40 per hundred. Hybrid teas are rather too plentiful for the demand and prices have declined to a summer level, with open stock clearing at prices below the quoted range. From $1 to $8 per hundred is about the range for stock of good quality, with one or two varieties bringing a little more for the better grades.

There is a good supply of carnations, but the quality cannot be boasted of, few really good flowers being seen. From $1 to $3 per hundred is about the range, selected flowers bringing occasionally a dollar more.

Cattleyas are in fair supply, and subject to severe grading. The price range is $35 to $75 per hundred for ordinary stock, the finest gigas and hybrids bringing $100 to $125.

White lilies are in moderate supply and meet a fair demand at $10 to $15 per hundred. The supply of lilies of the valley continues large, but with a little better demand prices have moved up a bit.

Sweet peas are plentiful, but poor in quality, inferior grades being most in evidence and moving at 25 to 75 cents per hundred, with top grades at $1. Peonies from local fields are bringing $2 to $10 per hundred. Sweet williams are in large supply at 20 to 25 cents per bunch, and delphiniums at 50 to 75 cents per bunch. Other herbaceous flowers are in summer supply and move slowly at prices hardly quotable. There are stocks, pansies, calendulas, cornflowers, centaureas, snapdragons, callas, gaillardias, pyrethrums, daisies, mignonette, myosotis, gladioli, Tausendschoen and early outdoor roses, candytuft and lupines.

Various Notes.

S. S. Pennock, president of the S. A. F., was a visitor last week, and was in conference with Secretary Young particularly in regard to the program for the Kansas City convention.

Herman Seommodean, for many years with A. L. Young, the wholesale florist at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, has taken over the business, Mr. Young retiring to care for his other business interests.

Wesley B. Leach, park department forester and a member of the New York Florists' Club, is making a trip to the west in search of true specimens for park requirements and stock, local sources of supply being said to be somewhat limited.

At the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, Monday, June 12, S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, will lecture on his recent visit to Germany as representative of the Friends' Relief and on his visits to several horticultural establishments in Europe. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides. The meeting, which will be the last before the summer recess, will be held, as usual, in the Engineering Societies' building, 25 West Thirty-ninth street.

The Henshaw Floral Co. is occupying temporarily the quarters in the Eighteenth street market vacated by Clarence Slinn, using the store to relieve the pressure on the supply department.

The quarters in the market formerly occupied by Polykranas are being used by the Trepel Florist, Inc., Brooklyn, as a receiving depot.
J. H. P.

Harry Bayersdorfer refused to sell a large basket at retail recently. The would-be purchaser was obliged to buy the basket through a florist. Mr. Bayersdorfer says if he wanted to retail he would open a shop on Fifth avenue.

CHICAGO.The Market.

The high temperature June 6 has again crowded the market with low-grade stock. It has rushed in the local peonies and other garden flowers and has forced the roses and carnations, while it has done much to finish off the sweet peas and snapdragons. Heat is to be expected at this season, but it has been particularly unfortunate this week, because of absence of any special demand to consume the great quantities of stock which always come with the first hot days of summer.

Business since Memorial day has not been all one might ask, but large quantities of stock have been moved. Most of the wholesale houses report that they have written a greater number of sales tickets in May, and thus far in June, than they ever did in the same period of any other year, but they admit their sales totals are not up to last year. The reason lies in the fact that retailers are buying more cautiously and that prices average lower. Even with a reduction in sales, it is felt that business is good; the public is buying steadily increasing quantities of flowers and florists' sales, in money total, probably are less reduced from the peak than is the case with most other lines.

Last week was marked by continued large supplies of stock, but brought signs that a change is imminent. Roses will not be in heavy supply much longer. Indeed, white roses are almost out of the market at present, yellows are scarce and red is in such wide demand in comparison with the limited supply that it commands a premium. Crusader is much better liked than Milady and brings more money than Premier or Russell. Pink has been too plentiful when there were not enough red, white or yellow to fill all orders. But replanting and resting now are the order of the day with the rose growers and the general supply is on the rapid down grade.

It seems that this has been a poor season from start to finish for carnations. Getting a bad start as the result of last summer's heat and drought, the plants have produced neither the accustomed quantity nor quality. And now it appears that they are running out earlier than usual. The supply surely is on the down grade, both as to quantity and quality. Last week carnations sold for 6 cents each, for 10 cents a bunch and for about all prices between those extremes.

The local peonies are in. With the exception of a few late varieties, the flowers are cut or in full bloom. Much of the crop has been sold as it came in, fresh from the fields, and has brought fair prices, all things considered. Stock in condition to hold has been sent to the cold storage warehouse, where the quantity now awaiting a call is not excessive. Those who have good peonies in storage are confident they will have good business in the next two or three weeks.

Sweet peas are abundant, but much shorter in stem; the end of their season seems near. New crops of lilies are in. Valley is in such request that the price has stiffened. Gladioli are more plentiful and are selling slowly. Larkspur is here and sells well. Daisies are having their inning, especially the yellows, for weddings. Orchids are not plentiful, but some of them are exceptionally fine. Garden flowers are arriving in increasing quantity, as it has been an exceptionally favorable growing season for them.

New ferns have not yet begun to arrive in quantity and the old stock is about gone; so there has been a scarcity.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. plans to occupy its new home early in July, or as soon as the present tenants vacate and the new and up-to-date equipment can be installed. The building is five floors and basement, each floor about 40x95. The probability is that first floor and basement will be used for the cut flower department and the second floor for supplies salesroom, the tenants on the upper floors not being disturbed for the present, as the Poehlmann supplies factory and warehouse now is comfortably located on River street. Eventually, however, the entire building will be occupied and used for cut flowers and supplies. It seems an ideal location as long as the trade remains centered in the present district. Also, the action of Poehlmann Bros. Co., in making a 15-year lease, seems likely to be a large influence in keeping the market where it is for some time to come.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. recently shipped a carload of palms from Morton Grove to Klugman & Schneirow, of Flatbush, Brooklyn, N. Y., invoice value approximately $8,000. August Poehlmann says they have word that the plants unpacked at destination in perfect condition.

Mr. and Mrs. McCauley have two fine children, a boy and a girl. The son, Edward, is just being set up by his father in a new place only a few minutes' walk from Riverbank, where Mr. McCauley has been in charge since the family removed here from Washington. Two houses, 36x250 and 40x250, have been built this spring and already have been planted with Premier roses.

the summer, as no meetings are planned for July, August and September.

Various Notes.

H. B. Kennicott has a fine crop of freesia bulbs at his nursery in Florida. He has tried Paper White narcissi to see if a new industry can be developed there, with the result that splendid, large bulbs are obtained, but they do not force. The failure to flower satisfactorily under glass is attributable to something in the method of handling and experiments now are in progress to discover the reason for failure. Mr. Kennicott has high hopes that Florida may some day produce the millions of Paper Whites now purchased annually from France. Calla bulbs grow strongly at Clearwater, but are difficult to cure because of the heavy rains which usually come at about the lifting season.

C. J. Michelsen says that although Crusader has done well all season, now comes the time of year it gives the best account of itself. Wendland & Keimel Co., at Elmhurst, doubled their planting of it on the strength of last season's showing.

The Rainbow Flower Shop has been opened at 4749 North Clark street, by Paul Pora and Miss Carrie Koeble. They have a complete equipment of Randall fixtures.

Because there seemed to be no one else to do it, the Allied Florists' Association decorated the graves of twenty-four unknown dead from the world's war at Mount Carmel cemetery and the daily newspapers printed large illustrations showing the ceremony, giving the florists credit. It was part of the publicity work of the association.

at Budlong Gardens, or, as he now calls them, the Chicago Rose Gardens, although they are in Evanston. The Key rose is popular in the east, but has not done so well for western growers. Mr. Budlong thinks he has found the way to handle it and has planted two of his houses with it. Early this week he had a display of Key and Dunlop roses arranged for effect in the store of the A. L. Indoor stock has maintained its quality well hitherto, but now, owing to much warmer weather, much of it has a faded appearance. Roses are arriving in unwieldy numbers. American Beauty sold at from $10 to $30 per hundred for the best stock. With the exception of some special Hadley, which make $16 per hundred, the general run of other roses arriving sell at from $2 to $12 per hundred and in the case of some shipments lower prices than these have to be accepted. In one case last week 750 of 18-inch-stemmed stock sold for $7 per hundred. Cases such as this, however, are exceptional. Carnations are not abundant, due to the fact that growers are now throwing out their crops. About $3 per hundred is a fair price for good blooms, but many are sold lower. Sweet peas are deteriorating in quality, but their numbers are simply legion and only the best stock reaches $2 per hundred. Yellow marguerites are less in evidence than they were a few weeks ago, and snapdragons were evidently pretty well cleaned out for Memorial day, as they are now less in evidence.

Local peonies began to appear June 1, when some of the old officinalis and singles appeared. A few doubles came in June 3, but June 5 large numbers were offered of good quality and these sold well. The end of the present week will see the local crop almost at its height, if the present warm weather continues. There are good supplies of calendulas, bachelor's buttons and callas; the last-named do not sell well. Indoor delphiniums are rapidly passing, but already some of the outdoor stock is in bloom. Gladioli are now of fine quality, the best making $2 per dozen, but too many are coming in. Limited supplies of such outdoor flowers as aquilegias, dictamnus, hemerocallis, pyrethrums and various irises are seen.

The supply of outdoor lily of the valley has passed and there is a good call for the forced article. Small lots of white bouvardia are offered. Cattleyas, such as gigas, Mossiæ, Gaskelliana and some hybrids, are to be had, as well as lœlias, miltonias and odontoglossums.

Growers of bedding plants continue to do an active trade and all report the best business they ever had. Scarlet geraniums seem to be cleaned out and the demand for these and begonias has been phenomenal. Petunias, heliotropes, verbenas, salvias and other bedding plants have also been in great demand, as have hydrangeas and other flowering plants.

Show at Horticultural Hall.

An interesting exhibition filled the lecture hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society June 3 and 4, rhododendrons, hardy azaleas and irises being the leading features. For a decorative display of rhododendrons covering seventy-two square feet, T. C. Thurlow's Sons Co. was an excellent first; some medium-sized plants in tubs were used as a background. For twelve varieties of hardy rhododen-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

It has been a hard week in the cut flower market. The supply continued to exceed the demand. Many flowers were sold for Memorial day and not a few since, but prices are low and the market is demoralized.

The advent of June has brought a demand for wedding flowers, white roses, valley, orchids, delphiniums, Easter lilies, white peonies and sweet peas, but outside of these there are too many flowers for business to make an impression upon them.

Coreopsis has come with summer. Cornflowers and gladioli are more plentiful.

The height of the peony crop has passed and the receipts of fresh stock are diminishing. There are plenty of flowers in cold storage—enough, if they carry well, to satisfy the demand throughout June.

The wholesalers are divided in their view of Memorial day business. The majority feel that there were something like twice as many carnations and peonies and roses as usual; that prices were far lower than usual; that the volume of business was smaller than usual. A strong minority agree on the first and second points, but dissent on the third point. They think that the volume of business was larger than ever before, despite the low prices.

The Plant Market.

Memorial day saved the plant market. Up to that time there had been grave doubt as to whether it would be a good season. When Memorial day passed, there was no doubt. It had been a splendid season. The demand from the cemeteries set in early and continued strong until the holiday passed. It is customary for the cemetery florists, those whose places are adjacent to the burying grounds, to say that everything with a bloom on it sold. This year it was literally true. Not

Club Meeting.

There was a fair-sized gathering of members and their friends at the closing meeting of the Florists' Club season, held at the Hotel Adelphia the evening of June 6.

A hearing in the police raid on the gamblers prevented the mayor from being present.

Edward Reid reported for the Mothers' results obtained and showing funds in satisfactory shape.

Plans for the club's future usefulness were discussed.

It was a notable exhibition that brought out keen competition from a big list of entries. The judges were Mrs. Glendinning, Mrs. Drew-Baer, Alexander B. Scott, Arthur H. Scott, Thomas Long, A. B. Cartledge, Dr. Robert G. Huey and M. Campbell.

In the Family Circle.

She—Why don't you change your commission man?

He—Why should I?

She—He always is bothering about something—either the flowers are too open or they are not open enough, or you have to ship after hours or before hours or on Sundays. He is a regular nuisance.

He—But, my dear, he gets us good money.

Various Notes.

William J. Baker delivered an address on "Our Flag" before the school children on Memorial day that will sow the seed of patriotism in many a youthful breast.

Robert Craig, who has been ill since his return from Porto Rico, is a little better. His friends hope he will soon be entirely well again.

It was J. F. Neidinger, not Joseph G. Neidinger, who sailed on the Orduna May 27 on a business trip abroad.

Mrs. A. W. Doemling sailed for the British Isles May 20. Mr. Doemling went over to New York to see her off.

Leo Niessen hopes that the Memorial day returns have not been spent in advance.

C. F. Doucelre, of Doylestown, Pa., represents the Department of Agriculture in that district for dislodging greenhouse pests.

Edward Reid believes that the market is greatly broadened by moderate prices at Memorial day.

The Germantown Horticultural Society advanced the rose meeting one week to June 5, on account of the forward season. Vernon Park library saw a fine exhibition and a large audience.

Sturtevant was second. For six vases of irises Mr. Jenkins and Miss Sturtevant were first and second respectively.

A bronze medal of the American Iris Society for the most comprehensive display of irises in any or all classes went to A. J. Jenkins. He also captured the Hillcrest Gardens silver cup for the best display of irises from an amateur. This cup must be won by the same exhibitor three times.

George T. Stewart, superintendent for Arthur I. Lyman, had a fine display of rhododendrons and azaleas. F. O. Hatfield, superintendent to the Walter Hunnewell estate, had a fine table of rhododendron trusses. He also showed Kolkwitzia amabilis, awarded a first-class certificate. This is an excellent flowering deciduous shrub, with delicate pink flowers, produced in great abundance, like small diervillas. He also showed Spiraea Henryi and other deciduous shrubs.

F. F. Donabell and Miss Grace Sturtevant each showed seedling single peonies. Cherry Hill Nurseries had a display of Leucothoe Catasbaei. Henry Stewart had a fine flowering plant of Dendrobium thyrsiflorum, carrying forty racemes, as well as a fine plant of Metrosideros floribunda. Mrs. C. W. Willis had a fine display of German irises.

In connection with the exhibition, William H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum, lectured each afternoon before large, interested audiences on hardy rhododendrons. He gave their history, methods of propagation and cultural needs, and answered many questions regarding them.

Various Notes.

While public announcement has not yet been made by the directors of the wholesale flower markets of their selection of a site for a new market, it is generally understood that the most favored location is close to the Hotel Touraine and that the cost of the site will be $350,000. Some growers have expressed fears about the financing of the enterprise, but the committee in charge of the selection has no fears on this score.

The annual peony show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will occur June 17 and 18. From present indications, a week earlier would have been a better date, but it is always difficult to select dates for these summer exhibitions months in advance. A big show is looked for June 24 and 25, when the annual rose, strawberry, sweet pea and late peony show will be held. In

The Houghton-Gorney Co. reports an unusual number of June wedding orders—more than this firm has ever booked before—and a number calling for extensive decorations.

E. J. Steele and wife, of Steele's Pansy Gardens, Portland, Ore., were visitors at Boston last week and were shown many places of horticultural interest.

A visit made to several of the leading cemeteries in Boston and Brookline Memorial day proved interesting. A tremendous number of bouquets of natural flowers and potted plants were noted, but the great feature was the immense display of prepared artificial wreaths, crosses and sprays. Wax designs seemed to be the most favored. While a few were in fairly good taste, the majority were simply harrowing. On speaking to a friend who had just placed a large artificial wreath on his mother's grave, he apologized for doing so, but added, "Flowers are expensive and if I bring a wreath or bouquet here today, it will be completely withered tomorrow, whereas one of these wreaths can be depended upon to remain fresh for at least a few days. I love flowers as much as anyone, but for Memorial day the demand is so great and increases so much each year that three-fourths of the graves would be without tokens unless artificial material was used." It is true that in New England at least the supply of natural flowers for Memorial day remains about normal, while orders for that day have a tremendous increase. It seems probable that the use of artificial material, regrettable as it may be, has come to stay for some years at least.

Those who are interested in orchids and like to see a really fine display should visit J. T. Butterworth, of Framingham, Mass., and see his hundreds of beautifully flowered Miltonia vexillaria. C. Zandbergen, Oyster Bay, L. I., the Stevenson, Wash.—W. T. Jackson died a few weeks ago and the business is being carried on by his widow, Mrs. Carrie Jackson, pending the appearance of a purchaser. The greenhouses have been established fifteen years, the only concern of the kind in Skamania county.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The Memorial day business here was by no means good. Looking around the retail stores after the big day, it was evident that many florists had overbought or, at least, had not had a good turnover. In some cases this might have been due to the asking of too high prices or an oversupplied market; it may be that, with the many calls on the purse, people were not spending much money on flowers. But, in any case, the day was a disappointment to the better class of retailers. Those florists near the principal cemeteries and the stand holders appeared to be doing a big business, but the season has been cool and moist and the great quantities of flowers in the yards and gardens took away the usual demand for the florists' stock.

The days following Memorial day were dull, indeed. Large quantities of gladioli in great variety were on the market, but retailers and wholesalers alike passed them up. Outdoor stock of all kinds was a drug on the market. Indoor roses cleaned up well and valley, orchids, gardenias and choice stock generally found a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Fraser & Son, Pasadena, Cal., have purchased the corner on Catalina and Colorado streets, a large and valuable piece of property. They will erect a fine two-story building there immediately. The building is to be of the Scotch type and will contain, in addition to the office and seed department, a retail store devoted to seeds, nursery stock and a general florists' business. The firm is pushing the landscape business strongly now, and E. W. Davis, a Cornell graduate, is associated with the Frasers, father and son. Douglas Fraser runs the seed department personally.

F. M. Uyematsu, proprietor of the Star Nursery, Montebello, left last week for an extended trip to Japan. He intends to return sometime near Thanksgiving day. Mr. Uyematsu has worked up a fine business here and has increased his glass area considerably this year.

Fred H. Howard and Mrs. Howard made a trip to San Francisco last week.

Adrian J. Schoorl, wholesale bulb man of San Francisco, called on the trade here last week.

Driving through Santa Ana recently a call was made on our old friend, Henry N. Turner, who was found busily engaged in preparing for Memorial day. In addition to a flourishing flower business, Mr. Turner has put in a large and varied collection of fine art pottery, which is most attractive. Some choice and valuable pieces are seen here, and evidently a large business is being done in this class of stock.

Among the radio fans in Los Angeles none is more enthusiastic than the staff of George J. Hall & Co. A wireless concert can be heard here whenever the two Eds, George or Gus are not "listening in," which is not often, but a phonograph attachment is soon to be installed and then everybody can hear.

The Alexandria Florist reports a fine Memorial day business.

At the store of Walter Armacost & Co. shipping business was well up to the mark for Memorial day, but the local business of this firm was not quite as good as usual, doubtless owing to the large amount of cheap and showy stock on the market.

Paul Eecke says that stock plants of poinsettias have sold particularly well this season and, although the late frost damaged the plants somewhat, there are large quantities of soft-wood cuttings ready.

Everyone at the store of S. Murata & Co. said that business was good in all departments for Memorial day.

Herbert Bateman, Inc., reports its first Memorial day trade as satisfactory.

Large shipments of everlasting of all kinds left the store of the E. C. Amling Co. before the big holiday and everyone was kept busy at this place preparing for the big day. H. R. R.

phinius, snapdragons, sweet peas, poppies, pansies, marigolds and other summer flowers are plentiful. Baby and moss roses are becoming more plentiful. There is no shortage of valley or gardenias, but orchids are fairly scarce. The crop of carnations is good, but there were not enough of these to fill all shipping orders before Memorial day. The only noticeable shortage May 30 seems to have been in forget-me-nots, which were retarded by the cold weather earlier in the year. There are, however, some forget-me-nots in the market. In spite of the fact that there was such a flood of stock, everything was well cleaned up Memorial day. The San Francisco Coöperative Market sold everything. Many growers are now cutting their crops of strawflowers.

Various Notes.

R. E. and Mrs. Darbee, accompanied by their son, Andrew, planned to leave for New York, June 6. They expect to sail for Europe on the Olympic, June 24.

"There were more flowers sold Memorial day this year than probably ever before in the history of the business in this city," declared J. A. Axell, who added that his firm was cleaned out on May 29. "Stock was cheap and good," added Mr. Axell. "Owing to the fact that Memorial day came on a Tuesday, the retail florists had their orders coming in from Saturday on. A good many people went out and decorated their graves on Sunday and Monday, as well as on Tuesday. Of course, many people in this city make a practice of buying their stock from the peddlers at the gates of the cemeteries, but the retail florists had a good share of the trade."

"Memorial day business was even better than we had expected, both locally and for shipping," stated G. W. McLellan, of the E. W. McLellan Co. "There was a greater variety of stock this year, owing to the lateness of the season," added Mr. McLellan.

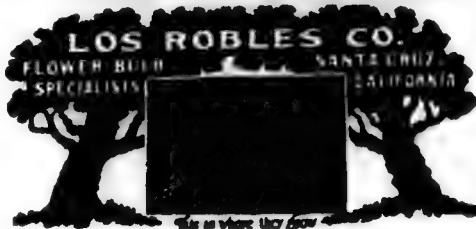

Fred Bertrand, who is still considering various new enterprises, will devote the next few weeks largely to the Shriners, who are arriving for their national convention. He is a Shriner and is working with the local organiza-large business in dahlia tubers, as planting is now in progress. This firm made some attractive Memorial day wreaths, which sold well.

Frank D. Pelicano has just bought a handsome pleasure car, but he was not able to enjoy a ride in it until after Memorial day, for the rush of Memorial day orders kept all hands at the store of Pelicano, Rossi & Co. on the jump. "The best Memorial day I have known for a long time," said Mr. Pelicano.

Shellgrain & Ritter were the first local florists to put up their Shriner decorations. San Franciscans are busy these days, welcoming the coming and speeding the parting of convention guests. Like the other florists, they are gratified at the extent of their Memorial day work.

F. C. Jaeger & Son had a Memorial day window which attracted attention even from people passing in street cars. There was a large display of wreaths, etc. F. C. Jaeger, Jr., stated that the Memorial day business was the best ever.

Joseph's had the decorations, May 30, for the reception to the real estate men, who are holding their national convention here. It was at the Palace hotel, where the corridor leading to the rose room was transformed into an avenue of rose trees in full bloom. The ballroom had its walls covered with bamboo and foliage, and the huge mantel was banked with roses and delphiniums. The interior of the Civic Auditorium, where the realtors are meeting, has been transformed by the city into a redwood

OAKLAND, CAL.The Market.

Local florists are unanimous in their opinion that never before have flowers been so plentiful, of such good quality and such wide variety. Flowers moved freely throughout May, while Mothers' day proved the biggest event in florists' circles for a long time. Memorial day was injured to a certain extent by the late spring, as the private gardens were still filled with flowers.

Gladioli are about two weeks late in getting into the market strongly. Growers of the small, white gladioli, that are so popular for Memorial day here, are liable to undergo considerable loss, as few of these flowers were in the market in time for this purpose. White marguerites and peonies are also late. Carnations are a little short, but roses are plentiful. There was plenty of gypsophila for Memorial day. The best carnations and roses are still coming from under glass, as are most of the snapdragons and larkspur. Iris of all varieties is almost completely out of the market. Marigolds and strawflowers have been plentiful, while the market has been flooded with sweet peas. Florists declare that never before have there been such quantities of these flowers, nor has the color or size been better.

Various Notes.

The funeral of J. A. Hill, public administrator, was one of the largest in Oakland for some time. Practically all of the florists received large orders for this funeral.

Thomas & Harris report an excellent Memorial day business. A number of weddings of note are scheduled for the current month. The Schleuter wedding, held the last part of May, was one of the largest of the season thus far. The decorations were furnished by Thomas & Harris. This firm also furnished the bouquets for the graduating exercises at two of the fashionable girls' schools at Oakland. A snow plant from the private grounds of the Hotel Wawona, in the Sierras, is being displayed in the windows of Thomas & Harris and is attracting a great deal of attention. These plants are rare, and anyone removing them from a national forest is subject to a heavy penalty. P. C. Harris is looking forward to a month's vacation, which he will spend in southern Seulberger's store was closed Memorial day, in accordance with the established custom of the business. The shipping business May 28 was good, however. Business through the month of May was entirely satisfactory. Funeral work played a large part in keeping the stock moving.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. reports a good month. According to W. S. Harmon, the shipping business for Memorial day was less than for some time. Mr. Harmon states that the retail shipping business has been falling off steadily for several years, owing to the establishment of florists' shops in the many small towns throughout California and Nevada. The establishment of several large florists' stores at Reno, Nev., has been largely responsible for the loss of the Nevada trade. These stores keep agents in all the small Nevada towns where there are no florists established, and the shipping business on special

W. S. Clarke reports a good retail shipping business for Memorial day.

The Flower Shop sold more potted plants for the two special days in May than were ever sold before. Hitherto Mothers' day and Memorial day have been considered almost entirely as opportunities for cut flowers. There is considerable evidence, however, that the public also could be induced to use a great many potted plants for these days. Mrs. A. H. Gregory believes that the Shriners' convention in the middle of June will add considerably to the florists' business. The Berkeley headquarters for the Shriners is just across the street from the Flower Shop. As many Shriners will stay in Berkeley. Mrs. Gregory believes that the flower shop will get a good share of whatever business the Shriners may bring.

The Varsity Gardens had a most successful month. Mothers' day is rapidly becoming one of the biggest days in the florists' calendar, in the opinion of Curtis D. Schoemaker, manager. Mr. Schoemaker says that it took five men working all Saturday night to get out the Mothers' day orders on time. The new store of the Varsity Gardens is proving immensely popular. M. M.

The Market.

Memorial day proved a profitable holiday for dealers who handled medium-priced offerings. The smaller sizes of magnolia wreaths, with small bunches of living flowers attached, or potted plants, with the wreaths surrounding the plant, proved the best sellers. Among the latter, small Dorothy Perkins roses in bloom and combination assortments of geraniums, marguerites and other seasonable flowers were in good demand.

Among the new offerings last week were rhododendrons and columbines, the former coming mainly from out-of-town florists. Peonies were in heavier supply, and some highly colored anemones proved popular with buyers. The weather has been extremely hot, and this has served to bring all outdoor offerings along at a fast rate. Sweet peas are common, but the coloring and size of blooms have led to an easy clean-up of this offering.

Roses are making a good showing, especially as to color, with Premier about the fanciest. Houses handling the potted Dorothy Perkins report a good demand. The supply of carnations, while heavy, barely served to fill the demand for the holiday.

There is still a good sale of bedding stock, and the call for fuchsias has been extra good. Martha Washington geraniums were another item that met with a good demand, especially in the smaller sizes. Potted mignonette, in 3-inch pots, has been a good seller for shops handy to the offices.

Various Notes.

Large shipments were required by the B. E. Hammond Co. to care for the nearby florists' needs on Memorial day, and the volume of business has so far been holding up better than was to be expected for the summer months.

Rosaia Bros. report an increase in the cut of outdoor flowers at their greenhouses. The firm has been using these to good advantage in a group of topical window displays. There has been an increase in the number of small social decorations, and several good-sized weddings have been handled.

Stuber & Richardson are pretty well through with all but potted plants for the summer months, but have a large number of mums propagated for the fall business. The total is about the same as that of last year, but a greater percentage is devoted to standards.

The Art Floral Co. enjoyed an especially good Memorial day trade, the demand being about equally divided between cut flowers and potted offerings. Some changes are being made in the arrangements of this shop.

Transient business for the holiday exceeded all expectations for Morgan's Flower Shop, and this establishment disposed of a large number of potted Dorothy Perkins roses for use in cemetery decorations.

The Hollywood Gardens developed a most unusual Memorial day window, in which simplicity was the keynote. General activity in the way of social decorations has been heavier of late.

A nice run of shipping business is reported for the Seattle Fern & Moss Co., and judicious use of trade advertising is constantly extending the clientele of this house.

Several attractive theater decorations have been developed for the Winter Garden theater by Melby's Flower Shop, the occasion of one of these being the initial bill presented under new management for this house.

Felix Rosaia has been featuring popular cut items in his windows of late, with good results. He has been moving a large amount of stock. There has been a continued call for potted geraniums for resetting also.

McCoy's window for Memorial day was rendered effective through the use morial day trade, and there has been a nice gain in transient business.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop used relics of the recent war, old-fashioned hand cannons of the Spanish-American war and paraphernalia used in the Civil war as foreground ornaments in the most elaborate holiday window developed locally, while the center was given over to a huge magnolia leaf wreath before a large American flag and backed by a curtain of the same shade as the magnolia leaves. The size of this window, and the use of red, white and blue lights all combined to create a great deal of local comment concerning it.

Kenney's reports a brisk funeral trade for the last week, and a big increase in business for the Memorial day activities.

William S. Goldsbery, Pacific coast representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, has been temporarily making his headquarters at the wholesale house during his stay at home.

The Bon Marche Flower Shop has developed a steady increase in business as the summer goes on, and Irving Harris attributes this to proper choice of merchandise, so that prices appealing to department store buyers can be successfully charged.

General trade has been increasing with the Orpheum Floral Co., although business has been "streaked" of late, in that one or two days will bring a good share of the week's total business.

Ralph Richardson has completed the basement of a fine new 8-room residence he is erecting at Bryn Mawr. This will cost in the neighborhood of $5,500.

Members of the bowling team of the Seattle Florists' Association are in active training for the coming trip to Portland for the Portland-Tacoma-Seattle meet and, from the scores rolled in practice, they are going to make a good showing when this event is held.

The City Flower Shop has been active lately in moving medium-sized potted offerings, and the fine way these have been displayed in the windows has been a big factor in this success. H. M.

FLOWERS FOR GRADUATES.

Common Sense Says So.

A good quarterback on a football team watches for the weak points in the opposing line and, when he has found a point of vantage, his team smashes through. It does not require a great stretch of imagination to view the many activities of the florists' trade as so many different football games, with lines to be broken through, yards to be gained and goals to be made. And in these games it is always good generalship and clear thinking that counts.

One of these "games" is the flowers-for-commencement combat. And misguided public opinion has made the opposing line here a difficult one to break down. Time was when a graduation exercise, whether in grammar school, high school or college, without flowers "was not." But in some way or another some people developed the idea that flowers at a commencement—especially at high school or grammar school—showed favoritism for some and rather slighted others. These same people even went so far as to think that all the girls on the programs should wear uniform dress. But these ideas, cutting out the spirit of individuality and competition so characteristic of the American school girl, can not last long.

Whose Business Is It?

It is the florists' business to see that his produce is not black-balled at any commencement exercise. The public can be taught how to congratulate the girl graduate with flowers. How can it be done?

When a girl graduates, there are several parties most keenly interested: Her father, her mother, her sister, her brother, her aunts, her cousins, her uncles, her circle of friends and her sweetheart, or "goof," as the up-to-date flapper calls him. All these are prospective customers and good ones. By obtaining the list of prospective graduates, the florist can mail out specially written postcards suggesting the appropriateness of sending flowers to the exercises for the girl to be graduated. These cards would, of course, be addressed to the parents or, if any of the relatives are known, a card in their mail boxes in good time might mean an order. And if the girl's sweetheart—every high school girl thinks she has a sweetheart—can be placed, he will respond to the idea of flowers with a vim. Then, too, the whole mailing list can be profitably circularized, with the idea in mind that each regular customer may have a friend about to graduate.

It is a wise idea to keep in mind that the telephone is not only a receiving instrument. A number quickly found in the telephone book can be phoned and an order may be landed right there. Other business men are using the telephone to make many of their sales. And a tradesman who takes enough interest to let his customers know when there is something "special" on hand, is going a long way in building up his trade. For commencement business the telephone should prove invaluable.

Aiming for Results.

Every successful florist knows the pulling power of the local paper. How much value the space taken in the paper will bear depends to a great extent on the way the copy for the advertisement is written. A well worded advertisement, topped, perhaps, by a advertisement here shown was run by the Allied Florists' Association of Chicago. It is quite neat, and, as can be seen, includes a suggestion advocating flowers for birthdays. It is often easy to kill a couple of birds with one stone, but the particular occasion, successful advertisers find, should always be prominently featured. Most people can think actively of only one thing at one time.

The attraction of the display window, rightly directed, is found invaluable in selling flowers for the graduates. For the outfitting of the windows there are many known ideas and many that can be originated by the individual, such as miniature girls in caps and gowns bearing corsages; life-sized figures with life-sized corsages amid a profusion of pennants and class colors; well-worded placards explaining the appropriateness of flowers for the occasion. These and many others search out the desires of the passer-by.

Why not make this a commencement for the flowers?

AN AD ON WHEELS.

Commonplaceness quickly develops in the streets of the busy metropolis, where every person, actively bent on a particular duty, finds but little time to let his mind wander to the many side issues that are presented daily. Innovations seem to age rapidly and a new building, a new store, a new pavement, a new style of wearing apparel—all these and many others are briefly noted and just as quickly forgotten. To the keen advertising mind of the humming city comes inevitably the problem of getting an idea that will make the public "sit up and take notice."

The Louise Flower Shop, of Washington, D. C., has an advertising idea that goes right out into the public and gets its applause. A negro midget, uniformed, with brass buttons and high silk hat, drives a tiny automobile, brightly colored, about the streets. On either side of the car is the name of the shop. This spectacular novelty, scurrying up the streets and down, presents such a curiosity that it has become the talk of many adults and the delight of the children, who, as it is well known, are most influential in making their parents "look."

By such means the name of the Louise Flower Shop is constantly presented to the public in many places and makes many acquaintances and new customers, the conclusion being that a shop so wide-awake must be a good place to get the "latest in flowers."

INTRODUCING THE SEASON.

For every season of the year there is a characteristic atmosphere. In this sense advertising should be "seasonal." A cozy fireplace on a spring advertisement, a field of flowers on a Christmas advertisement and other such picture of a girl graduate bearing a bouquet, will have its appeal to readers, while a poorly made up space will tend to drive customers away.

Coöperative advertising, becoming so popular at all the big flower days of the year, has tremendous power in developing this commencement business, and in many cities not a June passes but what some advertisements, similar to the one shown on this page, are run. By coöperating, the cost to the individual is comparatively small and the results to all generally prove large. The incongruities would rather irritate than appeal to prospective customers.

Clody's Flower Shop, of 3912 North Clark street, Chicago, knows how to introduce the proper atmosphere. The firm's ability is demonstrated in a folder issued to incite customers to spring planting. This folder is of soft, light green color. On the cover is a picture, done in dainty yellow, of a mother in a garden setting, standing over a porch box speaking to a young daughter. Above the illustration appears "The Year's in the Spring," in type of the same yellow tint. It is an advertisement of pulling appeal, because the point of view is courteously suggestive, as can be seen by the following paragraphs, which occupy the third page of the folder:

It is the season when thoughts turn to the great out-of-doors, the laying out of garden shrubbery and lawn, the refurbishing for summer of window boxes, hanging baskets, jardinières, porch stands and urns.

With large conservatories stocked with flowering and foliage plants and an expert staff of workmen available for every requirement of artistic and expert gardening, we shall be pleased to render you service and to furnish plans and estimates.

Equipped with every facility for spring planting.

Such a folder is pleasing to look at and, since it gives the suggestion of an

Are You Spending Ten Cents To Do A Two Cent Job?

Some concerns buy results.

Others produce results.

Sometimes it pays for a limited time to buy results.

But always it pays to produce them.

For example, I know of a woman who was given a Christmas present of some colored stationery with which the color of a two cent stamp didn't harmonize; so she used the 10 cent one that did.

She bought results, but her letter didn't accomplish any more because of the extra 8 cents.

Sometimes I think we doll our plants and flowers up too much. We put on 8 cents' worth of trimmings to send a 2 cent letter.

Sometimes we contribute freely to so-called society events thinking it is going to buy us results.

Am wondering if just quality and service would not better produce them.

Leastwise that's my notion of how you and I can best do the best for the F. T. D. business.

INDIANAPOLIS BANK'S SHOW.

At the time of the national flower show, the Bankers' Trust Co., of Indianapolis, announced that it would hold an amateur flower show during the summer to encourage the culture of flowers by individual householders in that city. The florists, nurserymen and seedsmen of the city were asked for coöperation and assistance. So much enthusiasm did the project arouse and so strong was the support of it that a series of exhibitions will be held by the bank during the summer. The first was the iris display May 18 to 20, when forty-two amateurs showed thirty-six varieties of that flower. A rose exhibition will be held this month; sweet peas will be exhibited in July, gladioli and zinnias in August, and dahlias, cosmos, celosias and other outdoor flowers in September.

The Lowry Seed Co. has offered a silver loving cup to the exhibitor receiving the highest total score in the series of displays, and other prizes have been contributed.

The judges at the iris show were Irwin Bertermann, Dr. E. A. Willis and Jean H. Nicolas.

ledger account of the whole transaction. It serves as the record of sales, of payment, as well as shipment, and carries such other information as the credit reference and who checked the order. Consequently, whether we want an accounting record or whether we must look up the facts surrounding one individual transaction, we have it all in one place. And most of the record has been made out for us, at no cost to us, by the customer. That comes rather close to my idea of a good office record plan!

Forty Per Cent Send Cash.

We do not ask for cash with the order. We simply ask the customer for a credit reference, which we then check up carefully. No one has authority to ship, or to refuse to ship, without a reference; whenever this request is made, it must be brought to me for decision. Usually it arises out of someone's wanting to get something and I have said that we do not ask for cash with the order. Yet about forty per cent of our orders (and this figures out almost exactly forty per cent of our sales in dollars and cents also) come in accompanied by checks and money orders. The natural assumption might be that these would be the smaller orders; as the figures show, they run exactly the average. The largest cash order I recall ever seeing had with it a check for $650. But that is about forty times as large as our average order.

Credit Losses Extremely Small.

Our credit losses are, I believe, smaller than those of any concern in the same field with which we have compared figures. For one thing, we are extremely careful about billing our customers promptly. Billing and statements are two things about which we tolerate no slackness. Our invoice goes out on the same day as the shipment; that means, usually, that it arrives ahead of the shipment. And fifty per cent of our customers pay us before the first of the next month, at which time we send out statements stamped, "Please remit." It makes no difference that the customer received his invoice only a day or two before. We simply send statements to every customer who has been shipped any goods since the first of last month and who has not paid.

We have discovered that the amount of our accounts receivable incurred in any one month just about halves in each succeeding month. About fifty per cent of our invoices are not paid before we send out the first statement. That month twenty-five per cent comes in, leaving twenty-five per cent still outstanding to receive our next statement, to which we attach a sticker reading, "Please give this account your immediate attention. It is long past due and settlement must be made without further delay."

The result is the collection of one-half of the outstandings, leaving twelve and one-half per cent to receive at the end of the month another statement with a sticker attached, "Every cour-

Once more the amount outstanding is halved, and the balance owing us is about six and one-quarter per cent. We draw, at one day's sight, on this residue. About three and one-quarter per cent pay then, leaving three per cent to turn over to a collection agency. The final total credit loss, including the percentage that the collection agency gets for its services, is less than one per cent. Last year it ran below one-half of one per cent.

in late. This involves our buying a few thousand bulbs beyond our needs as shown by our advance orders. Last year we had approximately $1,000 tied up in this extra stock, all of which we liquidated.

But right there is the only possibility of our taking a loss on goods that we do not sell. For we buy practically all of our bulbs in Holland; we send our order to Holland July 5; that is, four days after we have closed our orders with our customers. Usually a member of the firm takes this order over and places it with the bulb wholesalers, his going being largely for moral effect.

The bulbs reach us about September 15 or 20. By September 25 they have been unpacked and we are beginning to ship out our orders to customers. The bills go out on the same day as the shipments.

Our active selling season on our main line, bulbs, thus comes to an abrupt end July 1. The routine of tabulating the orders and so on is finished right after July 4. And the other odds and ends of dealing with the customer and acknowledging the last orders are wound up within another week. We thus come to what might ordinarily become an exceedingly slack season. But we swing right into the next phase of the job without delay.

How Shipping Is Expedited.

Because we sell the bulbs and then buy them to fill our orders, we do not have them on hand. We have, however, printed slips, each bearing the name of the variety of bulb it represents and the stock number of that bulb; "Number 10," for example, is "Select Named Crocus, King of the Blues"; "Number 11" is "Select Named Crocus, King of the Whites."

The employees go over the orders, which bear serial numbers. And each order has an envelope number to correspond. The employee selects the appropriate variety slips, marks on each the quantity required and stuffs it into the envelope. Thus an envelope may contain one slip Number 11, bearing the quantity mark "2 doz.," one slip Number 27 marked "18," and so on.

Then the shipping label is made out, with the mode of shipment as shown on the order sheet. This shipping label also goes into the envelope.

When the bulbs come in from Holland the envelopes go out to the storehouses in lots sorted according to territory. The Canadian orders, for instance, are filled first and shipped first, because the bulbs must be got into the ground early; and so on, all over the continent and to foreign countries. All that remains to be done when the bulbs arrive is to fill the orders, wrap them and paste on the label.

After the slips and shipping labels have been made out, the office force swings into the job of making out all the invoices; these are then placed in window envelopes, stamped and held for mailing on the day of shipment. This is, of course, all a part of our plan of transacting the largest possible business with the smallest and most economical force, employed steadily throughout the year, even though ours is essentially a seasonal business.

Last year was the largest year we ever had, and far and away the most profitable. We have every reason to

So perhaps it is no wonder that we are counting on buying during 1922 half again as much space as last year. We simply could not afford not to!

ROWE'S RAMBLES.

Memorial Day Market.

Central Pennsylvania, like many sections of this broad country, has some customs that are peculiarly its own. Every city—and some of the small towns—has a public market house where on certain fixed days the housewife secures her supply of green vegetables, fruit and other farm produce.

At Easter the market houses are well filled with flowers and plants from the florists' shops, but the day preceding Memorial day the managers of a number of the houses open the buildings to all comers who have flowers to sell.

In Harrisburg this year the Monday "flower market" opened before day-break with a large and varied assortment of wild and cultivated flowers. The bloom which appeared to be in greatest abundance was the wild mountain laurel, with peonies, daisies and mock oranges running a close second in point of quantity. Many roses and irises were also offered, as were bunches of wild ferns, potted geraniums, calendulas, cinerarias, petunias and other plants.

The early morning market was brisk, but after 9 a. m. the buying fell off considerably and prices generally tumbled to figures that have doubtless been unknown in local flower markets for many years. Bunches of laurel flowers that earlier in the morning had sold at 15 to as low as two bunches for a nickel.

 Fine peonies that had brought 5 cents each could be had for a cent each soon after 10 a. m. Large bunches of roses were sold at 5 cents each, while daisies and kindred blooms were selling at 2 cents per bunch.

First Peony Show.

Some of the finest amateur collections of peonies and irises can be found in central Pennsylvania, particularly in the Susquehanna and Cumberland valleys. Lancaster, Carlisle, Reading and Harrisburg boast of a number of peony "fans" and for some seasons past shows have been held in the three first-named cities. Harrisburg, however, put on its first show on Monday, May 29, under the guidance of the Natural History Society. The assembly room of the public library looked like an S. A. F. exhibit, with white, pink and red blooms in profusion. Nor were the blooms those of the common "garden" variety of olden times. One could readily find festiva maxima, of course, but later sorts were shown, including Baroness Schroeder, George Hollis, Karl Rosenfield, and other high-brows in the peony family.

Weather conditions have brought peonies into bloom with unusual rapidity. Ordinarily the blooms are at their best the first week in June, but this year they are a week or ten days earlier.

The Way of Remembrance.

More than 1,500 shade trees, set during the spring months, border the Lincoln highway for some twenty miles across York county, Pa. On Memorial day these trees, with an appropriate market at the ends of the route, were dedicated as a "Way of Remembrance" to the men of Pennsylvania who died in the recent war. As the trees grow into sturdy specimens, they may be said to symbolize the character of the men whose memory they will perpetuate.

The Market.

 The Memorial day trade was exceptionally good this year; from all accounts, the best ever. The supply was large in all stock and prices were low on all grades, except prime stock. Peonies were never so plentiful as they are this year and at Memorial day plenty of cold storage stock found its way to the dump pile.

 The heavy influx of roses was a disturbing factor all last week; the mar-item on the list of seasonable flowers. Prime stock held up well in price, but in other grades large lots had to be jobbed off at low prices.

Carnations were plentiful and the demand was quite brisk, but stock was not of the usual high quality. However, the demand brought satisfactory results. Cape jasmynes were a big factor, with the supply equal to all demands.

Sweet peas are again in full supply, but the quality is not so good at present. Most of them have short stems and do not realize much.

There are plenty of Easter lilies, but extra fine valley and orchids are scarce. All miscellaneous stock demanded much attention for Memorial day. Delphiniums, cornflowers, coreopsis, snapdragons, daisies and calendulas sold well. Gladiolus spikes have not as yet been in oversupply and they clean out fairly well each day.

All greens had a big week in demand and the market was equal to that demand in all varieties.

Club's Officers Meet.

The meeting of the officers of the Florists' Club was held at the home of Trustee Gumz, on Botanical avenue. At this time there was arranged an interesting program, with business and social features, for the club's thirty-sixth anniversary meeting, held Thursday, June 8, at Kirkwood, Mo.

Mrs. Henry G. Berning will entertain the Lady Florists' Home Circle June 14, at her home on McPherson avenue.

Frank A. Windler, head of the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., was thankful last week for the return of his private automobile, which was stolen the week previous. Street car riding is too slow for Mr. Windler.

John Kern, for the last few years with F. H. Weber, has resigned his position. He has not made known his plans for the future, but rumor has it that he will open a flower store of his own in the near future.

F. J. Fillmore, who celebrates his wedding anniversary each year, celebrated this year May 6. This was his forty-second. Mr. Fillmore is more than three score years of age, is in good health and is still exceedingly active in business and social affairs.

As usual, F. H. Meinhardt, Koenig the Florist, John Nyfiot, Shields the Florist and Ben H. Schloemer, opposite the big cemeteries on Florissant avenue, report a great Memorial day business in plants and cut flowers. H. L. Eirich and Jenne the Florist also had a big cemetery trade on that day.

The opening of the New Melbourne hotel May 30 was delightful. The place looked like a flower show. In every available place in the hotel and roof garden were baskets and vases of flowers and decorative plants sent by friends. H. S. Louscher, of the Melbourne Floral Co., supervised the decorations for the opening.

Walter Young, manager for Young the Florist, reports a great day's business for Memorial day, on both local and shipping orders. An elaborate display of blooming plants and cut stock attracted the public.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The way business has kept up so far has been surprising to most florists here. Each day finds the demand good and there is no surplus. The outdoor season is at least two weeks later than usual, and the hardy stock, which is usually plentiful at this time, has only just made its appearance. Memorial day business was exceptionally good, but the outdoor stock, which plays an important part in the day's proceedings, was not at all plentiful. Many thousands of potted plants were used in the annual parade, and eventually were placed on the graves of the veterans in the various cemeteries.

Cut stock now arriving in the market is good and comprises large shipments of roses. These include Pilgrim, Ward, Ophelia, Butterfly, Premier, Killarney and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Carnations are becoming small and the demand is not large. There is a good supply of sweet peas reaching us, and the quality is fair.

Easter lilies are in excellent shape and are plentiful. Callas are slowing up somewhat. Hardy delphiniums are making an appearance and move well. Some good peonies are seen, but only in small quantities. Baby's breath is plentiful and sells well. Large quantities of bachelor's buttons are seen and move fairly well. Spanish iris is in demand. Mignonette, mysotis, white and yellow daisies, lupines, hardy irises and snapdragons are all in good supply and meet all demands. Green goods are not overplentiful, but the demand keeps up well.

Various Notes.

H. C. Salmon, of Mount Hope avenue, recently purchased a new Dodge delivery car, of which the firm is quite proud, Herman Zahn, of H. E. Wilson's force, met with a painful accident while starting out for work a few days ago. He was knocked down by an automobile that was being driven towards the city. He is suffering with two or three broken ribs, but is coming along in pretty good shape.

Cecil A. Lester, of George B. Hart's, is away on a two or three weeks' business trip through Pennsylvania, making it by automobile.

Edwin P. and Mrs. Wilson and Elmer H. and Mrs. Taillie returned Memorial day evening from an automobile trip to Dalton, Pa., covering a period of four days.

F. Schlegel's Sons report excellent business of late, there being quite a heavy demand for funeral work, which included several large designs. Their sales on bedding stock have also been exceptionally good.

Joseph H. Werdein helped out at George B. Hart's supply department during the rush for Memorial day wreaths. H. J. H.

NEWARK, N. J.

Outside of funeral and wedding work, business is a bit quiet here just now. Some inquiries are beginning to come in regarding flowers for graduations. Of recent years this trade, however, has been limited to private and parochial schools, largely because of the ban on the public presentation of flowers at graduation exercises in the public schools. Prices on cut flowers have come down a bit since Easter. Fancy Premier roses are selling from $2.50 to $8 per dozen, retail. Valley is of fine quality and brings from $7 to $10 per hundred. Carnations are plentiful. There are some fine orchids in the market.

The Sunshine Flower Shop is the trade name that has been filed for the florists' business conducted at 76 Main street, East Orange, by A. J. Norman, who resides at 138 South Grove street. Frank Philips, of Philips Bros., is CINCINNATI, O.

The Market.

The market conditions that existed here last week still hold. Plenty of stock is on hand and it is hard to move.

Roses find the best market and hold their own as to price and quality. The varieties arriving include Premier, Columbia, Madame Butterfly and some exceptional Kaiserin Augusta Victoria. Peonies are now a back number, save for a large, late red variety, for which there is a fair demand. Gladioli are gradually coming into their own and are moving well, considering the abundance of other stock.

Delphiniums are arriving in large shipments and are moving well, because of limited supply.

Calla and Harrisii lilies are showing the effects of the hot sun and are getting smaller all the time.

Miscellaneous stock, including gailardias, coreopsis, cornflowers and gypsophila, find a fair market.

Various Notes.

The trade extends its sympathy to Joseph Imholte, secretary of the local growers' association and prominent grower, on the death of his brother, who died by an accident on the railroad, Sunday, May 28.

H. W. Sheppard last week gave over half of his store to the use of the Shut-In Society. This organization takes care of the "shut-ins," who are kept occupied by making fancy boxes, such as hat boxes, handkerchief boxes and the like. Some of these were sold at Mr. Sheppard's store and the proceeds go to keep up the institution which is run by the local society people. This assistance on the part of Mr. Sheppard is greatly appreciated by the society and the local charity workers.

C. E. Critchell reports a good week in the sale of common ferns.

of the interiors of shops here. Although the buying point has touched zero, the growers are not overloaded with stock. And, with weddings and graduation exercises, the trade anticipates good business.

Peonies are looking fine at the Auburn Flower Gardens, and Ernest Adshhead, Sr., expects to stage a comeback with exhibition flowers.

The weather has been dry for a week or more and a few showers would help seedlings considerably.

George Norton, the superintendent of the Fisk Nurseries, reports the busiest of seasons.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Business for Memorial day was unusually heavy. Memorial day is more observed in a great many of the smaller towns than in the cities; therefore, shipping business from here was unusually heavy. There was a big supply of stock in the market to take care of the demand and the weather was favorable for a good supply, as well as for the quality of the stock. Carnations were in fine condition for shipping and there was a heavy crop of them, as well as of roses. On roses the demand was principally for short and medium grades. There was a big supply of gladioli, feverfew and snapdragons on the market. These helped out considerably in filling orders. There was a good supply of sweet peas, but the quality is now somewhat on the wane, due to warm weather. All the wholesale houses were obliged to put in all day Sunday preceding Memorial day, which was a heavy shipping day, and the forces surely were busy.

The demand for bedding stock this season was steady through last month and at the present writing there is little stock left in the greenhouses. Geraniums in bloom are scarce now. Vincas and salvias cleaned up entirely. In general, there was a satisfactory business for the growers of bedding stock. The month of May, including Mothers' day and Memorial day, is one of the big months of the year for the trade.

P.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

The market Memorial day week started out with a shortage of peonies and local stock did not appear in quantity until a few days after. Although it came in abundantly, still the market is not flooded this year and there are few peonies in storage; so far, the price has not gone lower than $4 per hundred.

Roses are arriving plentifully, but mostly in the shorter grades, with the exception of whites, which are fine. Some excellent home-grown valley is arriving and will probably continue through June.

Carnations are piling up and are getting smaller and shorter-stemmed, while the price is declining slightly. Some exceptional water lilies are arriving in fancy varieties and so far have been moving nicely.

Calendulas, coral-bells, larkspur, delphiniums, lupines, etc., are coming in fairly regularly.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held June 5, with a large attendance. Several important questions were up for discussion.

A. Wilhelmy has just purchased a new Peerless sedan.

T. W. Lisy has retired from active service in the florists' business and has turned over his greenhouses to his three sons, Frank, Emil and William, who will continue to conduct the business.

William Ostrode, with the Monarch Florists' Co., has returned from a short vacation.

HARDENING PLANTS.

Every grower follows the time-honored practice of hardening plants, though probably not many understand the reasons for which they do so. Every one knows that to transfer plants in early spring directly from the warm atmosphere in which they are grown to the varying temperatures outdoors is to risk loss. It is well known, too, that the hardening process is slow and that one or two days in a coldframe is not sufficient to harden young plants. In a recent issue of the Journal of Agricultural Research, a scientific writer explains experiments with this process, which showed that although hardening begins as soon as the plants are transferred from greenhouse to coldframe and the plants acquire an increasing measure of resistance to cold in one day, at least five days are required before the plants become really hard. Cabbage plants, after five days' exposure to a coldframe temperature of 3 degrees above freezing, were able to resist thirty minutes' exposure to 3 degrees below freezing, although the temperature froze them stiff and killed outright unhardened plants. It was also shown that hardened plants lose their hardiness under warm conditions in about the same time as they acquire it. Thus, if hardened plants are put out in the open in a spell of warm weather which lasts long enough to make them soft again, they are almost as liable to injury from frost as they would have been if they had not been hardened at all.

Expert growers can tell by the appearance and "feel" of a plant whether it has been well hardened. This is because during the hardening process growth is checked and the leaves and soft stems, instead of appearing sappy, seem stiff and are springy and elastic. They are small and thicker than are those of unhardened plants of the same age. Experiment has shown that hardening may be assisted by watering plants with solutions which check growth, such as weak solutions of common salt or washing soda, at the rate of about two ounces to the gallon. Withholding water is, of course, another means of aiding the hardening process.

Among the numerous hypotheses as to the actual cause of plants' death from freezing, the most probable is that, as water escapes from the cells, the proteins on which cell vitality depends are salted out, or precipitated, and that when this process has been set up, recovery is impossible because the vital mechanism has been destroyed. On this hypothesis hardening is due to change in the composition of the proteins of the cell during the process of hardening. These substances give rise to other proteins of simpler construction, which are less apt to be salted out; that is, thrown out of the vital mechanism.

A common practice is to spray plants which have been subjected to frost, but how it benefits is not clear. It was thought at one time that it caused a slower thaw and gave time for the cells which had lost water to recover it. Experiment indicates that spraying hastens the thawing process and that more probably its good effect is due to the transpiration being checked.

at a new low price. The last printing was sold out at $48.00 the set of 6 volumes—a very reasonable price considering war-time costs of printing. Now a new printing has been made and the publishers authorize The Review to give its readers the benefit of the saving made in present competitive conditions in the book-making trades in the East. This means a new price of $40.00 per set for the CYCLOPEDIA—a saving of $8.00 per set.

REMEMBER—BAILEY'S STANDARD CYCLOPEDIA OF HORTICULTURE is in 6 large volumes, over 3,000 pages. It is authority in all matters of plant names and spellings. Besides the purely botanical matter one would expect to find in such a work, there are many hundreds of cultural articles, chapters on insects, diseases, remedies, etc.—a veritable horticultural library, all carefully and completely indexed.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.
President, L. L. Olds, Madison, Wis.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

J. E. CURREY, Washington state seed inspector, advises that much seed, failing to comply with the state regulations, has been seized and ordered destroyed in eight cities within the last two weeks. Most of the trouble concerned red clover, alsike and Kentucky blue grass.

SOUTHERN SEEDSMEN MEET.

At New Orleans.

Four years of organization have worked wonders for the Southern Seedsmen's Association, and when the fourth annual convention of the association wound up May 31, at New Orleans, La., there was not a home-bound member but who felt seriously that, as President Steckler said in the opening address, "team work counts." From New York to the opposite coast the seedsmen came to find the elixir of success and they found it in the addresses made in convention. They also found that the southerners are justifiably noted for their sincere "handclasp," because when something educational was not on the boards, something entertaining and social was. Headquarters was at the St. Charles hotel.

It can well be said that the keynote of the convention was "publicity." This seemed to be the consensus of all the addresses. As Fred I. Meyer, of New Orleans, said, appropriately, "advertising is the very life blood of the mail order business. The value of advertising is shown when you think of the number of companies you can name off hand. Those you can think of first are the best-advertised companies. One man in a town of 917 inhabitants sold $700,000 worth of goods last year by advertising. Seedsmen looking for more sales will spend every cent they can on advertising."

Opening Session.

The convention opened Monday, May 29, when Mayor McShane welcomed the visitors and D. R. Mayo, of Knoxville, gave a rousing response. President Joseph Steckler delivered his informative address, which was printed in last week's Review.

F. S. Love, secretary and treasurer, delivered his report and it satisfied everyone there. Immediately following Mr. Love's statements, everybody introduced everybody else and some made addresses in jocular and serious vein. Monday afternoon the members took the Mississippi trip on the Sampson and participated in the other pleasures.

Tuesday, May 30, H. D. Wilson discussed the "Resources of Louisiana and the Value of Good Seed from the Farmer's Standpoint." Mr. Wilson showed that he deserves his post as commissioner of agriculture. The talk given by James L. Burgess on "The Relation of Seed Laboratory to the Seedsmen" will appear in a future issue of The Review. Tuesday H. G. Hastings, of Atlanta, Ga., discussed "The Essentials in Building a Mail-order Business." His address is printed on another page of this issue.

BUSINESS BUILDING.

Applied to Mail-Order Seeds.

There are no hard and fast rules to be followed in building a mail-order seed business and each newcomer in the business must work out his own salvation according to his finances, the clientele he expects to serve, and the particular phase of the business that he intends to emphasize or feature. But despite the impossibility of laying down any hard and fast rules as to mail-order seed business building, there are a few fundamental essentials that must be recognized. These essentials are willingness to start small, patience, character, individuality, capital, sense of responsibility, location, advertising instinct, and last, but not least, willingness to be a follower of the Golden Rule. To these might well be added love of plant life in all its phases, the useful as exemplified by the vegetable and farm crops, the beautiful as shown on every side by the flowers. A love for these things, with a reasonably active imagination that visualizes the inert stock of the seedsman in the growing garden

GENTLEMEN:—

We beg to inform you that our BRANCH OFFICE HAS REMOVED from 18 Broadway to 29 BROADWAY, NEW YORK, N. Y.

Ask for our very reasonable prices on DUTCH, FRENCH and JAPANESE bulbs.

Be sure to get the most for your money.

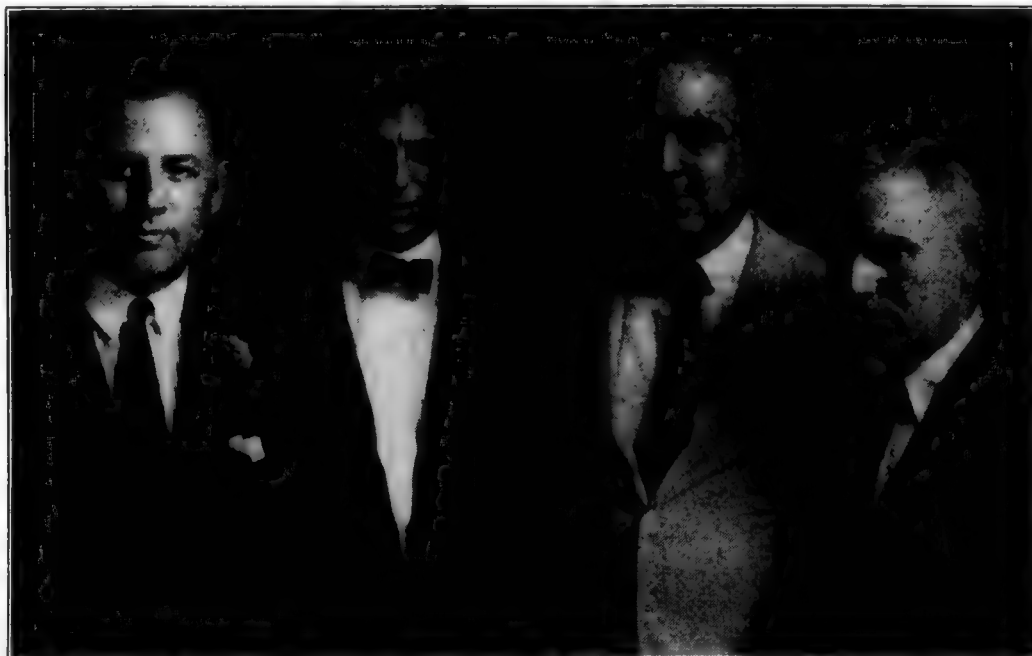

AGE AND REPUTATION ARE TWO FACTORS WORTH CONSIDERATION of his customer and passes on that vision to the customer through the catalogue pages, is wonderfully helpful.

There are no get-rich-quick opportunities in the mail-order seed business. Exactly the contrary is true. Confidence in a seedsman grows slowly. A greater or less distance separates the seller and the buyer and most people are cautious about passing along the cash to an unknown man or firm.

Our own observation confirms fully a remark made some twenty-five years ago by that seed trade veteran, Jerome B. Rice, to the effect that he had never seen anyone start big in the seed business who did not fail. Volume of seed business, especially in the mail-order phase, is based above all else on the confidence placed in the seller by the buyer. Confidence is a plant of slow growth. It must be tended carefully, cultivated, fertilized and given every inducement to grow steadily and sturdily.

Along with the willingness to start in a modest way must be patience, enough patience plus capital to cover the necessary intervening years between the start and the point where the break-even or small profit making begins. The generality of mail-order seed experience is that no considerable profits need be looked for before the end of five years. Often seven years is nearer of his customer and passes on that vision to the customer through the catalogue pages, is wonderfully helpful.

There are no get-rich-quick opportunities in the mail-order seed business. Exactly the contrary is true. Confidence in a seedsman grows slowly. A greater or less distance separates the seller and the buyer and most people are cautious about passing along the cash to an unknown man or firm.

Our own observation confirms fully a remark made some twenty-five years ago by that seed trade veteran, Jerome B. Rice, to the effect that he had never seen anyone start big in the seed business who did not fail. Volume of seed business, especially in the mail order phase, is based above all else on the confidence placed in the seller by the buyer. Confidence is a plant of slow growth. It must be tended carefully, cultivated, fertilized and given every inducement to grow steadily and sturdily.

Along with the willingness to start in a modest way must be patience, enough patience plus capital to cover the necessary intervening years between the start and the point where the break even or small profit making begins. The generality of mail-order seed experience is that no considerable profits need be looked for before the end of five years. Often seven years is nearer the mark. Where there is a mail-order and local seed business combined in a good territory some profit may be made from the local, or over-the-counter, end of the business.

Character and sense of responsibility to the seed buyer go together. Without right character there will be no proper sense of responsibility and without the proper sense of responsibility will come carelessness as to seed stocks obtained and passed on to the planter. Too many of us forget that we are dealing in the forces of nature instead of pounds or bushels of a commodity. While the seed business, mail-order or other form, is merchandising, the right sort of seed business is far more than merchandising. It must be a profession as well, if full measure of success is to be attained.

It is perfectly natural and human nature to want to buy as low as possible. It is also apparent to even the most casual thinker that first-class seeds cannot be produced as cheaply as an inferior grade can be produced. The seed business builder who purchases or grows his stock in trade on low cost or price basis is undermining the foundation of his own structure, insuring its fall. The planter cannot tell. The seedsman, so far as humanly possible, must know what he is passing on and what he passes on must be of the best if he is to gain and retain the confidence of the planter.

Only men of character will have this essential sense of responsibility toward their planter customers. No seed business ever has been built and maintained for any length of time without character, in which this sense of responsibility is an essential part.

Individuality Required.

Individuality of the mail-order seed business making its appeal to the public through the catalogue is distinctly an essential. Each of us as a human being is more or less distinctive in appearance and manner. If we attempt to make a sale to a customer face to face, we act in our perfectly natural, personal manner. In going to the prospective customer via the catalogue route we should, so far as possible, be just as natural as if we were face to face.

We are not making an appeal for freak catalogues or for overdoing the personality stuff. This extreme personality game is dangerous. Not one man in a million can get away with it successfully while he lives and as a rule he has no successor. A business built strictly on a strong personality can only last as long as the personality lasts.

Yet the catalogues representing the different mail-order houses must each have distinct house individuality. No two seed catalogues should be alike except in general features. Any attempt to copy or imitate the printed representative of a successful mail-order house already established is folly of the rankest kind. Imitators or copyists rarely, if ever, succeed. The business world pays no tribute to the imitator. It does pay tribute to those who, having the necessary business virtues incident to all kinds of business, add to them originality or distinctiveness.

This point is especially important. It is almost inevitable that the newcomer in the field feels impelled to follow the lead of someone else that he has looked up to. This must be guarded against. Take the catalogues

NEWS OF THE NURSERY TRADE

ON the agricultural committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce are William A. Peterson, head of the Peterson Nursery, and Leonard H. Vaughan. The chairman is Frank B. White, who performs advertising service for some in the trade.

WINTER and spring scouting by the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture and state entomological forces shows that the gypsy moth is established over the entire central part of Connecticut. The new territory is as large as all the known infested area in the state up to this time. The area affected is that through which the main railroad lines run from New England into New York city, and the spread of the pest toward the great port is closely watched. It has now reached the New York state line in northwestern Connecticut.

What is good to keep mildew off rambler roses? C. E. H.—Ill.

Spray your roses with a good fungicide or blow sulphur on them with a powder bellows in the morning while the plants are damp with dew. Continue this treatment to keep the mildew in check. C. W.

PEONIES ROTTING.

I have mailed you a peony root which is infected with a disease. Will you kindly examine the root and determine if possible what the disease is and how to combat it? The plants started well in the spring, but later the sprouts rotted beneath the surface of the earth. Will the disease spread? P. V.—N. D.

If the plants were set out last fall they were probably set too deep and in soil which was too wet. The rot should also have been removed before planting.

If the plants are old stock, they should be dug up and divided in September. The disease is not contagious, but it is unwise to replant under existing conditions. W. A. Peterson.

NURSERY STOCK AT QUEENS.

"The key to success is often unconsciously handed to the successful operator," observed Manager R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y., referring to the recent meeting at Washington, D. C., where quarantine 37 received the closest attention from its friends and foes. Here it has acted as a stimulus to produce what was hitherto considered impossible, or, to say the least, improbable and unprofitable. With natural conditions aided by careful planning to make the elements as near perfection as possible, the result is seen in the wonderful quantity, quality and variety of ericaceous plants, while conifers, with but one exception, the blue spruce, challenge the cream of European-grown stock in rapidity of growth. A grand crop of rhododendrons, growing on hillsides and fully exposed, explodes the theory that protection and shade are necessary to the successful propagation of these plants. Some 50,000 futures are ready to plant out, together with the same number of Azalea Kurume and Andromeda floribunda. Among the gems in conifers are seen Biota aurea nana, Juniferus stricta and Taxus cuspidata.

The trade is largely catering to the rapidly changing conditions, brought about by intelligent publicity obtained in magazines and the leading dailies. The embellishment of the small country home is a big feature and really the salvation of the nursery business at a time when the planting on large estates has been curtailed.

Of the original fine range of glass only one house is now devoted to Matchless carnations. The remaining space, some 25,000 square feet of glass, is used entirely for propagating and preparing nursery stock for the adjoining frames and beds, where, by the aid of the movable Skinner irrigation sprinkling system, ideal conditions exist. Manager R. T. Brown is especially proud of a group of Picea albertiana conica from originals obtained from the Arnold Arboretum, stating that during his visit of observation to Holland and Belgium he saw nothing to compare with it in distinctness of character and elegance. W. M.

large enough to be dangerous to those who eat them. The United States Department of Agriculture has just recently published the findings in experiments to determine whether there is actually or not danger of an eater's being poisoned in consequence of such spraying. In the bulletin which gives the results of these experiments numerous authorities are quoted as to their opinions in regard to the possibility of such poisoning. The question arose years ago, soon after the introduction of arsenic as a spray, in 1860. As long ago as 1891 the board of health of New York city seized a quantity of grapes, some of which had been heavily sprayed with Bordeaux mixture. The board reported that "the results obtained from estimating by chemical analysis the amount of copper on grapes which were selected as being the worst sprayed that could be found seemed to justify the assertion that it is simply an absolute impossibility for a person to get enough copper from eating grapes to exert upon the health any injurious effect whatever."

ment of Agriculture published a statement which contained the assertion, "For five years the copper compounds have been used by hundreds and thousands of growers in every part of the United States, yet in all that time not a single authenticated case of poisoning, so far as we are aware, has been brought to light."

There have been many experiments conducted in wine producing countries, the results of which showed that one who drank wine from grapes sprayed with lead arsenate would not be in danger of poisoning.

There seems, however, greater possibility of danger if spraying is late or overdone, since in such cases comparatively large quantities of residues of arsenic, lead or copper were found. Such spray residues were found to be materially reduced by washing and wiping the fruit and vegetables, in the Department of Agriculture's experiments. It was found that when peeled, sprayed fruits and vegetables contained essentially the same amount of arsenic, lead and copper as the unsprayed products, indicating that practically all of the sprayed residues can be removed by peeling.

Conclusion of the government's experimenters was that if fruits and vegetables are sprayed in accordance with the schedule recommended by the bureaus of entomology and plant industry—in other words, if spraying is not overdone or too late—little of the material used remains on the fruit or vegetables at harvest time.

line of talk that he would use to the customer, face to face, the printer accustomed to turning out seed or nursery catalogue work can whip the amateur copy into presentable shape. We stress this especially because it is of prime importance. Be yourself, instead of trying to be somebody else, and other things being right, success will come.

Location is important. This will depend upon the territory sought to be served. This territory once chosen, the location should be fairly central, in some town or city having the best of transportation facilities. Quick service pleases the customer and without central location this is almost impossible. Further, the larger towns or cities usually afford the extra labor necessary during the rush periods of the year.

We speak from experience on this matter of location. Our first ten years were spent in a small town in Florida with relatively poor transportation facilities. We made little headway until, after a careful study of the location phase, we moved to Atlanta, which is the hub of the major part of the territory our business serves.

Capital Necessary.

Capital has been mentioned. The amount necessary is dependent on the scale attempted. It is not well to have too much to start with. Too much available at the start will usually encourage waste. Not a great deal needs to be spent for seed stock the first year or two, for the quantities sold will be relatively small. If an exclusively mail-order business is contemplated, location in a city or town can be in a low-rent district. If local business is sought, over-the-counter trade in combination with mail-order, a more expensive location must be had. We doubt the general wisdom of trying to combine mail-order and local business, although we do it ourselves. We do, however, handle the local business as a separate department with its own manager.

It is almost inevitable that the personal attention the new seedsman thinks he must give the local customers will swamp his mail-order aspirations. Our Philadelphia friends, Burpee and Maule, are far removed from the retail centers and pay little or no attention to the local phase. The great general mail-order houses of Chicago have, until recently at least, ignored the local business phase. The two phases, unless handled as distinct and separate departments, are decidedly liable to be antagonistic, because they represent distinct phases of merchandising.

If it can be so arranged, it is far better to have a store of capital available to be drawn on from year to year until the break-even or profit point is reached with good luck and good management in about five years from the start. This loss period is almost inevitable; so it would best be counted on in the beginning.

We mentioned "advertising instinct" as one of the essentials. The necessity for convincing advertising in the catalogue and in the public press is an absolute essential. Some men are born advertisers. They have the faculty of projecting their business into the eyes and minds of the public in a way that carries conviction. In reality, however, the best advertisement the

PRIMULAS As Cut Flowers

By using our December-sown stock, you can have the Primula Obconica commence blooming in September, and in full bloom by November, which the later sown stock will not do, as they are not old enough. A half dozen more flowers per plant, used as cut flowers, just adds that much more profit and still leaves a salable plant and they are a cut flower that lasts.

mail-order house can have is the pleased and satisfied customer who passes words of commendation of your house along to his neighbor.

The Golden Rule.

The prospective mail-order seedsman can follow no better general rule than "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." In the conception of business fifty years ago or more the accepted version was, "Do unto others as they would do you and do them first." Happily that conception of business has passed away, never to return. Its passing represents a long step upward in our civilization.

We have observed many going into the mail-order seed business who make one fatal mistake. Viewing the field and seeing so many of us already established, one meets the question of what special appeal to the prospective customer can be made. Usually price-cutting is first thought of and acted on. The large gross margins in the vegetable and flower seed phases are naturally deceiving to the beginner. Small net margin, if any at all, is the reality and experience of the older ones in the trade.

The newcomer in the trade reasons: "I will cut prices and get trade away from the established houses and then raise my price level to a profit point after they come to me." Foolish amateur! The seed buyer who will leave an established house to go to a newcomer for cut-price reasons will just as quickly leave the newcomer to go to the next price-cutter for cut-price reasons.

Frankly, we believe it poor business policy to try to build a new business on trade taken from some other house. While in our own experience we have undoubtedly annexed some customers from other mail-order houses, it was not by deliberate intent. The best part of our business today is business that we have, in measure, created; that is, it has grown out of the campaign for more and better gardens and farm crops that we have persistently pushed almost from the start of our business in 1889.

RAIN WHEN YOU WANT IT

Made One Portable Line Do the Work of Five

Those of you who know I. L. Cady of Fairview Gardens, Fox Lake, Wisconsin, know that he knows what he is talking about; or he doesn't talk.

Last June about this time he wrote us:
"My Portable Sectional Watering line of 156 feet is these days doing the work of five stationary ones."

As my different plots are different sizes, the Sectional line in its 18-foot lengths makes it possible to fit any of them.

I really don't know how to begin to tell you the many ways the Skinner System of watering excels.

It works equally well on all classes of plants. Must duplicate my last order for next season."

To which let us add that a 100-foot Portable Sectional line costs but $39.75 complete.

Took 20 Years to Make It

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the editor of this department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. When information is desired regarding the capacity of boilers, or the amount of radiation required for a greenhouse, the needed temperatures should be stated in the inquiry, as well as the amount of glass in the side walls, and the dimensions and general arrangement of the greenhouses. It is often helpful, also, to have a sketch showing the location of the houses.

COAL PRODUCTION SPURRED.

Non-Union Output Increased.

Spurred to increased activity by the necessity of keeping the fast-dwindling reserve stocks of bituminous coal from reaching the danger mark of 25,000,000 tons, the non-union soft coal mines produced 5,000,000 tons in the week ended May 27, the eighth week of the strike. This is an increase of more than 500,000 tons over the preceding week. Anthracite output remains practically zero.

The increased production of the last few weeks is a clear indication that the coal operators are awake to the fact that unless the steady consumption of reserve stocks is curtailed, the danger mark will be reached in less than four weeks. Officials estimate the consumers' reserve stocks have dwindled to not more than 37,000,000 tons, and that these stocks are being further decreased at a rate of not less than 4,000,000 tons per week. It is necessary, officials point out, that a reserve of at least 25,000,000 be maintained by consumers in order to assure continuity of full-time production in the different industries. Such a reserve is essential because the mills, factories, railroads, public utilities and other consumers must not be dependent on their daily orders to keep their wheels moving. Such a condition would mean intermittency in industrial activity.

Ample Car Facilities.

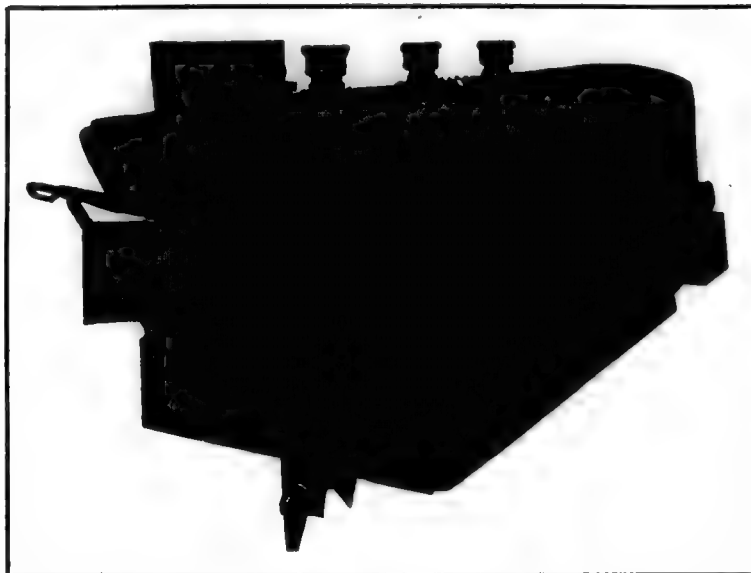

For the first time since the strike started, the operators have ample car facilities with which promptly to move their output, and this is undoubtedly one of the reasons why they have been enabled to increase their production so heavily. At the beginning of the strike 30,730 loaded coal cars were on the tracks. These have now dwindled to 9,000, the others being unloaded and the empties utilized for moving the fresh-mined coal.

Administration officials are withholding comment on the increasing seriousness of the situation, because they are trying to avoid buyers' panics, but it is generally recognized in Washington that sooner or later the condition will be such that, unless the unexpected happens, outside influence must be exerted in an effort to effect an end of the strike.

It is known that the economic loss in the strike is practically nil. The miners are not suffering and can maintain themselves indefinitely, because nearly all of them have obtained employment either on public works or on farms. In fact, as pointed out by one official, the miners will benefit by the strike. They are making more money now than they

"The Boiler of Unequaled Fuel Economy"

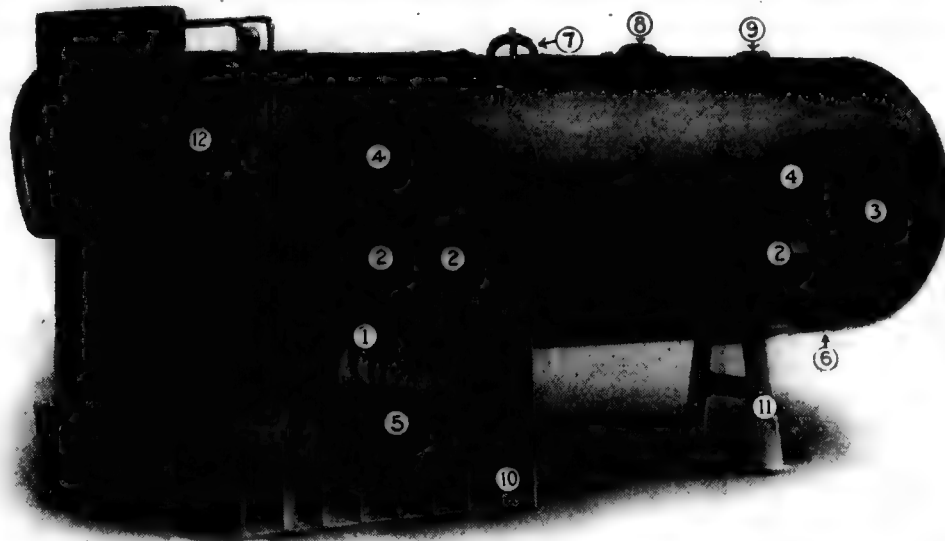

Hundreds of florists are using the Kroeschell Boiler and mighty is their praise. The past year has brought an enormous number of new customers who have seen our boiler in operation at other places. We attribute the large sales of the 1921-1922 season to the good work the Kroeschell Boiler is doing everywhere. With our policy—"the customer's interest first, perfection of construction, factory-to-user prices, honest and 'true blue' boiler ratings"—you simply cannot lose.

This big-tubed-tubular Burnham certainly has made good. Within twenty-five miles of each other, have just sold five of them to five different Long Island carnation growers. Curt Thimm, of Roslyn, says he gets more heat and less ashes than from any boiler he ever had.

NOW! What Do We Do Next?

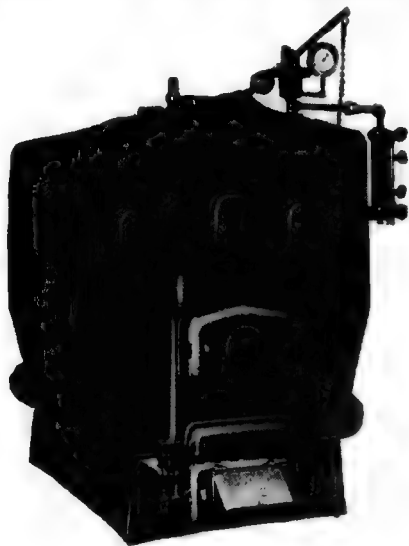

Well, what should we do next? Is there anything better to do next than to look after your heating equipment? Is there any other part or department of the greenhouse plant so costly, or so important?

Boilers should be cleaned out NOW; ashes should not be allowed to remain until next fall. Clean the boilers inside, clean off doors and ash pit doors on the inside, take down smoke pipes, remove all the soot. Open cellar windows. Leave all boiler doors wide open so air can circulate and keep dry, preventing rusting.

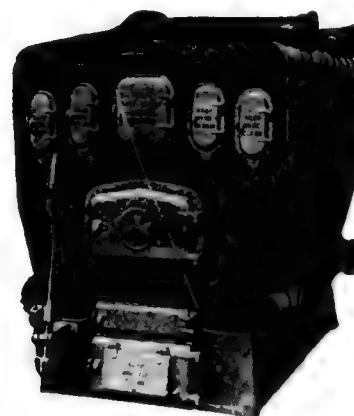

NOW is the time to correct faults, to replace boiler sections and boilers, and to make changes and additions to heating systems.

Prices rise with demand, and the demand is heavier later in the year than it is now. Have your heating work ordered or contracted for AT ONCE. You will get better service, better prices, and more peace of mind.

We offer you our service—no charge for estimates.

For your auxiliary steam boiler you can't beat the Burnham. It's a quick steamer. It holds its steam steady, which is a mighty important thing.

The Burnham water boiler is acknowledged to be in use by more florists than any other cast iron boiler.

were before the strike started, and when the controversy is over they will make full time at the mines, on account of the necessarily increased production to build up again the reserves. On the other hand, the operators are merely losing the cost of properly protecting their mines during idleness.

COAL OR OIL?

With coal as high as it is and a shortage at hand, I should like to get some information as to the burning of oil. Would oil be just as expensive as coal? Can you tell me what kind of coal is the most reasonable and best?

C. W. W.—Neb.

It is not possible to give definite answers to the above questions without knowing something of the relative cost of coal and fuel oil in Nebraska. In many greenhouses in the central west a fair grade of run-of-mine bituminous coal is used and, as a rule, it is found to be a cheaper fuel than oil, even when the extra cost of labor is considered.

Considering the high freight on coal, it would be advisable to use coal mined west of the Mississippi river.

HEATING ADDITIONAL HOUSE.

I have a 7-section Moninger-Furman steam boiler in a basement, 14x14, heating a greenhouse, 40x105. This house has 6-foot side walls, containing three feet of glass. There is a 30-foot circular smokestack of brick, with a diameter of twenty-two inches. Would it be advisable to build another house and try to heat all the space with the same boiler?

C. W. W.—Neb.

The writer has had no practical experience with Moninger-Furman steam boilers and does not know their exact ratings. The temperatures desired in the houses are not stated. Provided 60 degrees will suffice for one house, and 55 degrees for the other, when it is 15 to 20 degrees below zero, if the boiler has a grate with an area of sixteen square feet, it will suffice. With a fair grade of run-of-mine coal, frequent stoking will be required, making a night fireman necessary.

Saginaw, Mich.—C. A. Granse, who has been with the Wm. Roethke Co., is preparing to make a start for himself, as a retailer, and has ordered a complete outfit of store fixtures from the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. He expects to open in July.

One or Many?

Which will give better service—a furnace lining made up of many bricks bonded together, or one of a refractory material that is molded into shape when plastic, forming a one-piece, jointless lining?

The latter, most certainly, everywhere known as PLIBRICO is easily applied; it has no joints where disintegration may start; it is unaffected by heat up to 3100° F.; it outlasts laid-up fire brick from two to four times; it permits the production of more power at less fuel expense; it lessens labor expense. In a word, PLIBRICO meets the present-day need for a furnace lining that endures.

Don't you want to know more about PLIBRICO? Send for our book, D-67, on "Modern Furnace Building," and ask to have our nearest representative call.

The Market.

Memorial day added another bumper occasion to the already unusually good season for the florists, and everyone is ready for the summer respite, well satisfied with the general conditions. There is a continued good demand, on account of a large number of weddings, but the end of the season is rapidly approaching. Notwithstanding the addition of three or four new retailers in the downtown section, it is conceded that the season now closing has been the best in several years.

Profiting from experiences of this season, it is believed that there will be more coöperative spirit on the part of the dealers tow one another and a more united, aggressive attitude toward the public in the future. There are also indications of a growing sentiment against price inflation and in favor of a closer margin of profit, whereby the public may be educated into a more general use of flowers in the homes.

Horticultural Show.

The June exhibition of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held June 23 in the ballroom of the Narragansett hotel. Many contestants are expected to enter plants and flowers in the first show of the season, as the premium lists for this as well as the other shows of the year are the largest ever offered by the society. Flowers and plants that are not claimed by contestants will be sent to the hospitals.

Other shows and exhibitions will be held at the state armory, on Cranston street, September 14 and 15 and November 17 to 20. The latter will be held in conjunction with other societies. The exhibition committee consists of Cornelius Hartstra, of Providence, chairman; Arthur Sellev, of Providence; Alexander Macrae, of Providence; Stuart Pratt, of Longmeadow, and John Marshal, of North Providence.

Florists' Pots YORK, PA.

TORONTO, ONT.

The bedding stock trade here has been good, though perhaps a little shorter than in previous years. If anything, there has, however, been a considerable increase in the number of plants sold. From the viewpoint of the florists who handle bedding stock, the one thorn in the flesh is the presence of those who set up a sales place on vacant corners opposite or alongside the regular florist. It is realized that it would be practically impossible to prevent the fruit man from putting in a few plants, but it seems out of place to see the "1-day stands," paying no business tax, competing with those business men who do.

There are plenty of flowers, with a considerable demand for design work.

Horace J. Head, of Rochester, and Harry Brant were two recent callers on the trade in Toronto.

The Toronto Retail Florists' Club will hold the annual picnic at Exhibition park July 5. All florists are invited.

The month of June has brought a big demand for wedding decorations, and the displays at some of the larger weddings are gorgeous. This year lilac is being used to a large extent, wedding bouquets being made up of lily of the valley, with maidenhair fern, roses, French lilac or combinations. The effects are pleasing, both to wearer and florist.

Montreal florists have organized for the coming florists' and gardeners' "Jubilee" convention, at Montreal in August. President W. E. Groves will find in Montreal a valuable corps of assistants who will contribute greatly to the success of the convention. Toronto florists want their good friend, W. C. Hall, to know that they are coming in full force and, as chairman of the entertainment committee, he will have a large number of his friends from the Queen City to look after. E. J. Hayward is president of the committee; A. C. Wiltshire, chairman of the reception committee; James McKenna, of the publicity; R. Burrows and C. A. Smith, of the trade exhibits. H. J. Eddy is secretary and, as he is also secretary of the Canadian Florists' and Gardeners' Association, he has an assistant, T. Hill. The Montreal florists have a strong committee and we visitors know we are going to be well looked after by these leaders in the florists' trade. J. J. H.

A wise business man figures costs by the year, right down the line, and especially so if his business has to do with greenhouses. He knows, either by experience or from a close study of the subject, that the only businesslike method of determining material costs in greenhouse building is by the year—first cost and up-keep cost.

CYPRESS, "the wood eternal" for greenhouse construction, is positively the cheapest wood to use, figured by its years on the job, without repairs or replacements.

All good constructors in these days are insisting on genuine "Tide-Water" Cypress, "The Wood Eternal"—every board and bundle bearing the famous Cypress Trade-mark.

Vol. 8, CYPRESS Pocket Library, is a little book filled with a big bunch of facts and figures about greenhouse construction—profitable reading. There are 48 books in the "Library," all of which give useful facts and plans about HOW, WHEN and WHERE to use CYPRESS, "The Wood Eternal," AND WHY. Which one shall we send you?

The Market.

The market has been slow. Stock has been plentiful, but not in demand. Roses sell for $4 and up. Carnations are priced at $3 to $5 per hundred, but larger quantities sell cheaper. Plenty of garden stock is to be had. This stock has been moving slowly. Good delphiniums are in demand. Bedding stock has been a big item this spring. Boxes, vases, beds, etc., are springing up on all the porches and in the yards, around windows, etc.

Memorial Day.

Memorial day business was poor, considering other years, due to the large supply of outdoor stock. The market was loaded with daisies, delphiniums, peonies, hardy roses, honeysuckles, sweet williams, etc. Many out-of-town people were in the market and on the streets selling flowers.

Various Notes.

John Rieman has a new delivery car.

The Indiana State Florists' Association will go to New Albany and Louisville, June 21 and 22, where it will have a joint meeting with the Kentucky State Florists' Association. The first day will be taken up with a business session, while the second day will be spent in visiting and sight-seeing. The Mammoth cave will be one of the places visited. A large crowd is expected to take the trip.

E. E. Temperley will leave June 8 with the Shriners for San Francisco. He will visit Los Angeles and the Grand Canyon before returning. E. E. T.

New Orleans, La.—E. M. Eichling, president of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, left for Atlanta May 27 to represent the society at a meeting of southern horticulturists and nurserymen and to attend a conference of southern districts of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association. The former convened May 30 and 31 with members of the entomologists of the southern states, to discuss plans for uniform laws governing plant inspection and interstate shipments of plants and nursery stock.

A True Story

SOW BUG.

Sow Bugs in greenhouses it is sure death. We had a lot of them before using SLUG SHOT but they got out where it is used.

Office of Alfred Goldring
Florist
Cobleskill, New York

March 17th

We use HAMMOND'S SLUG SHOT on Currant Bushes in the Spring before the leaves are started. We put it on around the roots and have done it for two years, and find that the worms are killed before they get on the bush. For potatoes we put on SLUG SHOT as soon as the bugs come, and we have good vines, plenty of tubers and no bugs. It is the best thing we have ever used. For

ALFRED GOLDRING.

Slug Shot for Sow Bugs

It is with great pleasure each week I read your valued paper, and I like to give a helping hand when I can. I do not wish to say anything against the use of Paris green and sugar, or bran, or any other material, for I know these are all good to kill bugs, such as wood lice (sow bugs), etc. But I would like to state, as I have done formerly, for the benefit of anyone bothered with sow bugs that I have thoroughly cleared my greenhouses of this pest by dusting freely with HAMMOND'S SLUG SHOT, spreading it well in the walks, under the benches, along the side walls and between the plants, using about 20 lbs. to a 20 ft. x 100 ft. house. This Slug Shot will not injure Carnation plants. I hope that this recital of my experience will be of help to others in trouble and especially recommend its use as it is not dangerous to human life as is Paris green.

Is it a Good Time to Build?

We are asked this question almost every day.

The fact that some of the materials entering into greenhouse construction have risen in price recently has caused many growers to seriously consider anticipating their requirements.

In fact, several growers have already placed orders with us specifying Fall delivery.

Whatever your own attitude in the matter may be, we will be glad to talk over your problems with you.

We are in position to give you close prices based on high quality of material and workmanship. Our new factory is equipped with modern machinery. We have low overhead expense. Our central location enables us to ship to you economically. It will pay you to get our figures on any new greenhouses or improvements that you are contemplating. Orders should be placed now for August delivery.

MAY GET MILEAGE BOOKS.

Traveling men in the florists' industry will be interested in the enactment of legislation providing for the issuance by the railroads of interchangeable mileage books at a rate lower than that charged for single tickets. A bill to this effect has already been passed by the Senate and last week was ordered favorably reported to the House of Representatives by the committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

The bill provides that the interstate commerce commission shall prescribe for all railroads an interchangeable mileage book, by which the distance covered and the rate of fare are to be fixed by the commission. These books will be issued at such offices of the various railroads as the commission may prescribe and will be good for first-class passenger travel on all roads, carrying all the privileges ordinarily accompanying a first-class passenger ticket.

The recent decision of the interstate commerce commission reducing railroad rates dealt only with freight traffic, although several of the commissioners, in their individual opinions, declared that a cut in passenger fares was desirable. Traveling men in the florists' and other industries have long sought for legislation of this nature, and have endeavored to secure action by the commission, but have been unable to convince that body that their needs differ from those of the general public.

AJAX BLACK GLAZING CEMENT

A PRACTICAL glazing material made for application in a practical manner. No clumsy, slow-working tools necessary—simply a putty bulber or two and a filling gun to load them—furnished free to users.

Ajax Black Glazing Cement has been used throughout the country for several years with excellent results.

NOT AFFECTED BY EXTREME HEAT OR COLD

Our product is a cement-like composition of Asbestos Fibres and heavy, semi-drying hydro-carbon oils. Its exceptionally long life is due to the fact that it never thoroughly hardens like old-fashioned white putty. The outside surface (which is exposed to the oxygen of the air) forms a resilient, tough skin, below which the material remains soft and plastic. Because of this we guarantee that the coldest weather will not cause it to become brittle or pull away. On the other hand our product is warranted not to sag or run in extremely hot weather, due to its being interlaced with the Asbestos Fibres.

As Ajax Black Glazing Cement never thoroughly hardens, glass glazed with it can be shifted when desired without the loss of breakage that so often results when hard-drying white putties are used.

LOW COST

Compared with the old-fashioned White Lead putties, Ajax Black Glazing Cement not only lasts years longer, but is a great deal lower in initial cost. One gallon is sufficient to glaze 500 lineal feet of sash.

M. S. CHAPIN & COMPANY

Easily applied with a bulber. No clumsy tools necessary.

FREE OFFER

To facilitate the application of our products we furnish the following apparatus free of cost:

With each Half-Barrel

1 Bulber
1 Gun for filling bulber

While primarily made to stop water leaks, so thoroughly does Ajax Black Glazing Cement hermetically seal up the sash, that it will soon pay for itself in the saving of heat that is otherwise lost through air voids. This fact has been demonstrated time and again, and we can prove it.

King GREENHOUSES

Standard Thirty-Six Foot Steel Frame House Built for C. J. Dorrian, Florist, Summit Hill, Pa.

"What do you mix with the soil to grow such wonderful flowers?"

one florist asked another.

"Brains, Sir, Brains," was the answer.

And so it is with King houses. Time has proved that the materials are the best that money can buy. Wind, rain, sun and snow have shown the construction to be second to none. The verdict of hundreds of growers in every part of the United States and Canada, that King houses are most economical to erect and operate and that they meet every requirement, is proof that brains is the big item in their design and construction.

A trained force of veteran construction engineers is ready to serve you in solving your problems and submitting designs for that house you are thinking about.

Prizes go to AGMCO Growers

At the Annual Flower Show, given by the Garden Club of St. Louis, out of thirty prizes awarded, stock grown in AGMCO Houses took twenty-seven firsts and two seconds.

Prize winning growers build AGMCO Houses. These men realize, that to get the best results, they must have ideal planting conditions, and so we build their greenhouses.

Figure it out for yourself. Is this proof that AGMCO is master of greenhouse building? Twenty-seven firsts out of thirty.

And if you want to be among the winners next time, let us figure on that next enlargement.

If there are any problems which confront you, write us. Our experts are waiting to help you.

Paint

What an endless source of worry and bother a poor paint job is!

As a rule the biggest expense in painting work is the labor of applying.

Then why buy a cheap, inferior paint only to have it peel off or discolor or wash off like chalk? You will have to admit THAT is poor economy.

Moninger paint is made only of the highest grade materials, carefully and thoroughly mixed, after a formula worked out years ago by government chemists as being best suited for cypress wood and for greenhouse work generally.

Better send in your order, so that you will have the paint handy when you need it.

Yes, You Are Right

Here is something that proves that you are right when you say it looks as if the present swing was back to houses of moderate widths.

Recently two of our men spent a week calling on growers who had bought houses of us since the first of the year. They spent that entire week to see if everything was satisfactory.

Second, to find out what the growers' ideas were on constructions in general and about ours in particular.

Eighteen were called on.

Of the number, two had 72-footers.

Nine had 50-footers.

Seven had 40-footers.

Most of them it happened were growing carnations and sweet peas. One grew cucumbers.

All the forties were our new No. 2 Construction.

The fifties and the 72-footers were the No. 1.

Always we have believed in moderation.

Always we have believed that there was a lot ahead of us in greenhouse construction and widths, still to be developed and proven.

Always we have been keen to secure growers' ideas.

But it is not always safe for either you or us to follow too closely, ideas which may seem overwhelmingly in favor of some certain thing.

We have found out that there are sort of greenhouse fashions, so to speak, quite like there are styles in clothes.

So although this year's tendency seems towards 40 and 50-foot widths, next year it may be for wider than any we have built yet.

If it is, we will see to it that our houses are the best that can be built.

The best house for a long lasting paying investment, just as the eighteen we called on, declared their present L & B houses are.

PANSY SEED

AMERICAN BULB COMPANY

"PRIVATE STOCK" MIXTURE

Realizing the importance of the Pansy to many growers both as cut flowers and for bedding plant sales, and in fact that FANCY PANSIES are half sold when offered to the public, we have combined a mixture which we believe will create a sensation because of the many new and shades it contains, many of which have originated through various growers who are in charge of large private estates throughout the country, particularly the so-called "Heavenly" types. In short, an experience of over thirty years both as a seedsman and grower, is back of our "PRIVATE STOCK" PANSY MIXTURE.

Cyclamen Seed

A NEW AND BETTER STRAIN

From the World's Foremost Grower, Ferd Fischer, of Wiesbaden.

TO MY CUSTOMERS IN AMERICA:

Those who are in the market for high grade Cyclamen Seed I wish to advise you that I have perfected the finest strain of Cyclamen Seed I have ever offered, as for the past five years have devoted my attention to improving my varieties. Cyclamen offered by me this season are all true to name and selected from the best and healthy plants, which in turn give very good results.

I have paid strict attention to my Salmon and Red shades particularly for the American trade. My seed will be offered to the American Bulb Co. It is with pleasure that I recommend to all florists who are growers of high class plants to try my seed. I hold recommendations from the best growers in the world.

Yours very truly,

FERD. FISCHER

PICKING PROFITS FROM PANSIES

The time is at hand to sow pansy seed for greenhouse culture for cut flowers. Always a profitable crop for a florist who has a cool house, they may be made still more so by special care, according to the directions here given by this noted pansy specialist.

By CHARLES FROST.

give it a little water, using a fine rose. Dust the surface with sulphur or grape dust to keep the damping-off fungus from starting. I prefer the grape dust. I have also used nitrate of soda, twice a week, for the same purpose. That has the additional value of stimulating the plants to rapid growth. I used the nitrate of soda in the following proportions: One heaping teaspoonful to three gallons of water, or nine ounces to a 50-gallon barrel of water.

Cover the seed beds with boards or shaded sashes. Allow some ventilation, or they may get too hot, and pansy seed will not sprout if kept much above 75 degrees. Or you may mulch them with moss, hay or whatever you have handy. You must keep a good watch after the fifth day, and take the covering off as soon as the seeds have sprouted. Then cover the beds with the thinnest of burlap, or muslin, tacked on frames. I like burlap best, as it gives the seedlings a little shade, protects them from insects, heavy rains and drying winds, and still lets in sufficient light, air and rain. Water the seedlings daily, if dry, until they are large enough to plant out, which is usually in five or six weeks from the time of sowing the seed.

Transplanting Seedlings.

Transplant the seedlings, when they are large enough, into good, rich ground, four or five inches apart each way. Transplant plenty of plants, so as to have ample to select from for the greenhouse. In October select the healthiest plants with the best flowers to plant in the greenhouse. Plant them seven or eight inches apart each way. The greenhouse can be run cool. Even a little frost will do the plants no harm up to January 1. Keep all the buds picked off until December 1. You probably will not cut many flowers during midwinter, nor will they have long stems, but if you have grown the plants cool and kept them free from aphids and red spider, they will flower abundantly toward spring. Do not make the mistake of giving pansies too much water in the dull months. Watering is best done before noon. Give the plants plenty of water when they are flowering well. Aphids and red spider are likely to attack pansies grown in the ULTIVATION of pansies for cut flowers is becoming more and more profitable. Much of one's success with them depends upon the selection of the best varieties of seed for this enterprise. I consider the Masterpiece and the blotched type among the best to sow for this purpose in the east, especially for planting in the greenhouse. If self colors are wanted, select them from the Trimardeau type.

Pansies for cut flowers are a desirable crop to follow chrysanthemums. They can be used, also, to fill any space in the violet house. They should do well with violets, as both flowers require the same treatment and temperature.

Success Starts with Seed.

Success in growing a good crop of pansies depends largely on how the seed is treated the first six or twelve days, for if a pansy seed becomes dry after once sprouting it is a dead seed. If the seedlings are kept too close, they will damp off.

A coldframe is a good place in which to sow pansy seed if the boards are not full of fungi. Or one may use a box, nine inches to a foot high, built on good, fresh ground that is a little sandy and has been well manured for a previous crop. The ground should be well dug, made fine and given a good watering a day or two before the seed is sown.

The seed should be sown not later than the first week in July for cut flowers to be grown in greenhouse or frames. One ounce of seed will sow about 300 to 350 feet of drill, or eighty square feet if sown broadcast, and should produce from 4,000 to 8,000 plants. Sow the seed in drills three inches apart, one-sixteenth of an inch deep. Cover the seed with fresh sand, or sandy soil, one-sixteenth of an inch deep. Pat down the soil or roll it. Then greenhouse and are hard to dislodge if they once get a hold, as pansy plants hug the ground. Aphis or no aphis, spray the pansies with a good spray, knocking the plants over so as to get at the under side of the leaves; then spray them from the opposite way. Such spraying, with tobacco dust, will clean the insects out. Give pansies a night temperature of 40 to 50 degrees, with a rise of 10 degrees in the daytime.

KROESCHELLS IN MERGER.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co., whose boilers are used in many greenhouse establishments, and the Kroeschell Bros. Ice Machine Co., of Chicago, have been merged with the Brunswick Refrigerating Co., of New Brunswick, N. J., in a new concern to be known as the Brunswick-Kroeschell Co., with main offices in New Brunswick. The directors of the companies have been in meeting at New Brunswick this week to settle the details of the merger and elect the officers to head the new company. The directors of the Chicago companies are Robert O. Butz, Arnold H. Goelz, Charles H. Kroeschell and Robert A. Kroeschell, while the directors of the Brunswick Refrigerating Co.

are James W. Johnson, Robert W. Johnson, Sidney B. Carpenter, G. H. Wheeler and Walter Jones.

The manufacture of Kroeschell hot water boilers will be carried on in Chicago in a new and larger factory, to be erected at Diversey boulevard and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad tracks. The Kroeschell carbon anhydride ice machines will be manufactured there also, while the factory at New Brunswick, N. J., will continue making the Brunswick anhydrous ammonia machines. Thus will be united the manufacturing and sales organizations of two of the most popular ice machines in the florists' trade, both of which were described at some length in the article on "Ice Machines for Florists" in The Review of April 13, 1922. The Kroeschell hot water boiler is so widely used in greenhouses that the trade is familiar with its outstanding reputation.

The Brunswick-Kroeschell Co. is incorporated with $1,250,000 of seven per cent preferred stock and 30,000 shares of common stock having no par value. In the event of dissolution the preferred stockholders are to receive $125 per share before anything is paid to the holders of the common stock.

fine for cutting. Pink Beauty is of a fine salmon pink color. Other separate colors are to be had, but many prefer mixtures of color. The various forms of D. plumarius, better known as the pheasant-eyed pinks, are of easy culture and are free bloomers. All carry flowers of a rich, spicy odor. Propagation may be effected by seeds, layers or cuttings. D. deltoides, a small-flowering variety of a rich pink color, makes a superb bordering plant. It also comes in pure white and rosy red shades.

Pyrethrums.

Single pyrethrums are splendid for cutting and often come in most useful for Memorial day. The single hybrids of P. roseum are hardy and come quickly from seed. A small proportion only of doubles will come from seed, and those once secured should be increased by division of the roots in August. The giant daisy, P. uliginosum, is of a vigorous habit and one of our best late summer-blooming perennials, a splendid subject for cutting and one of which every florist should have a few clumps. In order to keep it in the best condition, the plants should be divided and replanted once in three years.

Eryngiums.

Many amateurs are charmed by the striking, round, metallic-blue flowers of the eryngiums, or sea hollies. The flowers are sometimes cut and dried in the same way as everlastings, for winter use. E. planum and E. amethystinum are both good varieties. They attain a height of four feet and flower in July, August and September. Propagation from seed is easy.

Viola Cornuta.

Among all the low-growing and persistent-blooming hardy flowering plants, Viola cornuta, the true tufted pansy, easily holds first place. In northern latitudes of this country it blooms from early May until December and proves thoroughly hardy if its location is well drained. The original form carries light blue flowers, but the rich violet blue, V. cornuta atropurpurea, is the finest form. There is also a pure white variety. Propagation is best accomplished by division or cuttings. In order to secure the best cuttings, cut one or two plants back hard and they will soon throw up a swarm of nice, succulent cuttings. The flowers of the true cornuta resemble large violets and must not be confounded with those of the larger-flowered bedding varieties. Seeds of V. cornuta are freely produced, but cannot be depended upon to come true. However, cuttings are produced in such abundance and the plants are so easily divided that propagation is a simple matter.

Lupines.

The hardy lupines, forms of L. polyphyllus, are splendid for cutting and come more quickly than almost any other perennial from seed. Pure white, blue and pink colors are obtainable. Moerheimii, the pink form introduced about ten years ago, is of a pleasing shade. Spring-sown plants will nearly all bloom the first year, but seedlings started now will make sizable field plants before fall. When in flower lupines are sometimes attacked by aphis, and spraying with nicotine is necessary at that season to keep them clean.

PERENNIALS TO PLANT.

More Suggestions.

Last week appeared in this department suggestions as to the sowing of perennials for cutting, with instructions for florists who have not hitherto included these useful flowers among their stock. If you have available space outdoors, now is as good a time as ever to make outdoor plantings. Not only will you thus amplify your stock for retailing, but you will provide a colorful display that is sure to attract those who see it. If you take orders for planting home grounds—and every florist should who can provide the force to do the planting—you will gain many orders by a plot of bright perennials.

Campanulas.

The campanula family is a large one. One valuable for pot culture or cutting is C. Medium, better known as the Canterbury bell. This would have been better if sown some time ago, in order to secure strong flowering plants. The Canterbury bells are biennials and the singles are much better for florists than the cup and saucer varieties. Another beautiful campanula is persicifolia, now coming into flower and persisting for many weeks. In addition to the single forms, there are semi-double white and pale blue forms. This is a splendid perennial for cutting. C. pyramidalis, the chimney flower, is reliably hardy in well drained land and blooms in August. It also makes a magnificent specimen for pot or tub culture in late summer. Treatment should be similar to that afforded C. Medium. In the way of smaller campanulas, the Carpathian bellflower, carpatica, is already in flower and will bloom until December. The flowers are blue or white in color, large and cup-shaped. As the plant only grows eight or ten inches high, it is a fine subject for borderings or rockeries. Some other interesting campanulas are C. rotundifolia, bluebell of Scotland; C. Priscilla, the Alpine harebell; a dwarf-flowering, dainty gem; C. Trachelium, Coventry bell, and C. rapunculoides, with showy blue, tubular, bell-shaped flowers on stems three to four feet in height.

Aquilegias.

The aquilegias, or columbines, have a grace and dainty beauty all their own. Especially is this true of the long-spurred hybrids, which come in many beautiful shades, such as blue, lavender, pink, orange and white. A. chrysantha, a golden yellow variety from the mountains of California, is a true perennial which will last for many years. On the other hand, such beautiful sorts as cærulea, the Rocky Mountain columbine, and haylodgensis, hybrids from cærulea, are less reliable and usually gradually disappear after the second or third year, so that it is well to sow some seeds each year in order to keep up a stock. For aquilegias sown now, it is the best plan to transplant them into frames and carry them over winter in these, as they are of slower growth than a number of other perennials.

Dianthus.

There are some splendid forms of dianthus in full beauty this month. Of these D. barbatus, the sweet william, is

SAVING MUMS FROM MIDGE

PEST DANGEROUS IN JUNE.

How to Recognize It.

"How does the chrysanthemum midge look?" asks a subscriber. If you read the article in The Review for January 1, 1920, which first warned the trade of the midge, and the further article in the issue of June 17, 1920, you are adequately informed by illustrations and descriptions, so as to be able to recognize the pest when it makes its appearance upon your plants and to combat it intelligently.

The insect itself, as it appears in the adult stage, is a tiny fly and its length is about equal to the diameter of an average pinhead, while its width is about one-third of its own length. In the earliest stage of its life its color is the same as that of the leaf. In middle age it is somewhat yellow, but about the time that it leaves its harbor it is a reddish color. It is exceedingly hard to see.

Habits Show Means of Control.

The midge has two fleecy wings, which are apparently not used for the purpose of flying, but rather as an aid in balancing itself upon the leaf of the plant. When the pest comes forth from the egg it leaves a bit of fluff on the sides of the hole in the leaf from which it emerges. It rarely migrates from one plant to another, and several generations of females are often found on one plant. The male, however, does go from one plant to another to some extent. The insect is short-lived. The life of the male is much shorter than that of the female. In the latter, life is sustained as long as from two to five days.

It is extremely important to know the habits of the insect, in order that, when it is found to exist in the greenhouse, it can be intelligently combated and finally exterminated. The damage to the plants is not done by the insect itself, but it is the container of the eggs which reduces the commercial value of the plants and flowers. Immediately upon emerging from the egg, the insect mates and begins to lay its eggs, producing from eighty to 150 eggs and dying a natural death before it is forty-eight hours old in some instances. As far as can be ascertained, during the warmer months the hatching period of the eggs is from eleven to eighteen days; during the winter months the eggs may remain in the plant from three to five months, depending upon the temperature maintained in the greenhouses.

Freezing does not affect the viability of the eggs in the least.

In laying the eggs the female pushes them into the soft part of the leaf; the growth of the plant is rapid and wherever a number of eggs are buried there is a scar on the leaf or stem. Instances are not uncommon of the presence of as many as fifty eggs on one leaf. Under these circumstances, it is not hard to understand why the plant is often badly crippled and undersized. Sometimes the bloom, if it appears at all, will open sideways and perhaps turn down instead of up.

The eggs hatch between midnight and 2 a. m., and it is at this period that measures for the extermination of the insect are most efficacious. The time of the insect's emergence from the shell is the only time at which it is exposed and can be killed before it has a chance to lay its eggs.

Effective Measures.

The most effective means of combating the insect is the nicotine spray. As stated above, the insect lays its eggs in the soft parts of the leaf or stem of the plant. In laying the eggs the insect will puncture the leaf, in order to push the eggs within it, and, if the leaf is covered with a coating of nicotine, the midge must necessarily puncture this coating before it reaches the leaf. As a result, it will die before accomplishing its purpose. The spraying should be done at least every twelve hours to be effective. In regard to the strength of the mixture we will speak later.

Hydrocyanic acid gas is also an effective means of stopping the nefarious work of this pest. But it must be remembered that if the gas is used, it must be applied at about the time the insect emerges from the egg and in sufficient quantity to permeate thoroughly the air around the plant. As stated above, the eggs of the insect hatch between the hours of midnight and 2 a. m., and if the air of the greenhouse is filled with the gas at this time, the insect will be killed before it has a chance to lay its eggs.

Tobacco dust will help to keep the insects down, but will not clean them out, as does the nicotine solution. The hydrocyanic acid gas will not exterminate the pest unless it is applied every few days, or so persistently as to reach them at a time when they are unprotected.

Appearance of Egg Housings.

The presence of midge is readily recognized by the protuberances or "warts," as shown in the accompanying illustration, which form on the leaf or the stem of the chrysanthemum plant. These so-called "galls" are cone-shaped and project obliquely. When fully developed the projection is about one-twelfth of an inch long, and it usually occurs on the upper surface of the leaf. If the insect has already emerged from its egg, a small hole in the leaf or stem of the plant will be found, from which the insect came out. If some of the leaves of the plants are partly crippled, or if light green or white spots are found on the leaves, you have a good example of the midge. If these light spots are opened carefully with a sharp knife, a soft substance will be found, which is the egg of the midge. If the egg is almost ready to hatch, its color will be reddish and the egg will have a soft shell. When the insect emerges from the egg it is a fully developed adult, and it mates immediately.

The various preventive measures are well summarized in the Department of Agriculture bulletin No. 833, as follows: "From the life history it is clear that certain points must be kept in mind if the best practical results are to be secured. First, several generations are always present in greenhouses during the spring and fall occurrences; second, the adults emerge and mate during the early morning hours and egg laying quickly follows; third, preliminary control experiments show that the egg stage may be controlled by means of spraying or dipping the cuttings or plants; fourth, it has been demonstrated that the greenhouse and are hard to dislodge if they once get a hold, as pansy plants hug the ground. Aphis or no aphis, spray the pansies with a good spray, knocking the plants over so as to get at the under side of the leaves; then spray them from the opposite way. Such spraying, with tobacco dust, will clean the insects out. Give pansies a night temperature of 40 to 50 degrees, with a rise of 10 degrees in the daytime.

How to Recognize It.

"How does the chrysanthemum midge look?" asks a subscriber. If you read the article in The Review for January 1, 1920, which first warned the trade of the midge, and the further article in the issue of June 17, 1920, you are adequately informed by illustrations and descriptions, so as to be able to recognize the pest when it makes its appearance upon your plants and to combat it intelligently.

The insect itself, as it appears in the adult stage, is a tiny fly and its length is about equal to the diameter of an average pinhead, while its width is about one-third of its own length. In the earliest stage of its life its color is the same as that of the leaf. In middle age it is somewhat yellow, but about the time that it leaves its harbor it is a reddish color. It is exceedingly hard to see.

Habits Show Means of Control.

The midge has two fleecy wings, which are apparently not used for the purpose of flying, but rather as an aid in balancing itself upon the leaf of the plant. When the pest comes forth from the egg it leaves a bit of fluff on the sides of the hole in the leaf from which it emerges. It rarely migrates from one plant to another, and several generations of females are often found on one plant. The male, however, does go from one plant to another to some extent. The insect is short-lived. The life of the male is much shorter than that of the female. In the latter, life is sustained as long as from two to five days.

It is extremely important to know the habits of the insect, in order that, when it is found to exist in the greenhouse, it can be intelligently combated and finally exterminated. The damage to the plants is not done by the insect itself, but it is the container of the eggs which reduces the commercial value of the plants and flowers. Immediately upon emerging from the egg, the insect mates and begins to lay its eggs, producing from eighty to 150 eggs and dying a natural death before it is forty-eight hours old in some instances. As far as can be ascertained, during the warmer months the hatching period of the eggs is from eleven to eighteen days; during the winter months the eggs may remain in the plant from three to five months, depending upon the temperature maintained in the greenhouses.

Freezing does not affect the viability of the eggs in the least.

In laying the eggs the female pushes them into the soft part of the leaf; the growth of the plant is rapid and wherever a number of eggs are buried there is a scar on the leaf or stem. Instances are not uncommon of the presence of as many as fifty eggs on one leaf. Under these circumstances, it is not hard to understand why the plant is often badly crippled and undersized. Sometimes the bloom, if it appears at all, will open sideways and perhaps turn down instead of up.

The eggs hatch between midnight and 2 a. m., and it is at this period that measures for the extermination of the insect are most efficacious. The time of the insect's emergence from the shell is the only time at which it is exposed and can be killed before it has a chance to lay its eggs.

Effective Measures.

The most effective means of combating the insect is the nicotine spray. As stated above, the insect lays its eggs in the soft parts of the leaf or stem of the plant. In laying the eggs the insect will puncture the leaf, in order to push the eggs within it, and, if the leaf is covered with a coating of nicotine, the midge must necessarily puncture this coating before it reaches the leaf. As a result, it will die before accomplishing its purpose. The spraying should be done at least every twelve hours to be effective. In regard to the strength of the mixture we will speak later.

Hydrocyanic acid gas is also an effective means of stopping the nefarious work of this pest. But it must be remembered that if the gas is used, it must be applied at about the time the insect emerges from the egg and in sufficient quantity to permeate thoroughly the air around the plant. As stated above, the eggs of the insect hatch between the hours of midnight and 2 a. m., and if the air of the greenhouse is filled with the gas at this time, the insect will be killed before it has a chance to lay its eggs.

Tobacco dust will help to keep the insects down, but will not clean them out, as does the nicotine solution. The hydrocyanic acid gas will not exterminate the pest unless it is applied every few days, or so persistently as to reach them at a time when they are unprotected.

Appearance of Egg Housings.

The presence of midge is readily recognized by the protuberances or "warts," as shown in the accompanying illustration, which form on the leaf or the stem of the chrysanthemum plant. These so-called "galls" are cone-shaped and project obliquely. When fully developed the projection is about one-twelfth of an inch long, and it usually occurs on the upper surface of the leaf. If the insect has already emerged from its egg, a small hole in the leaf or stem of the plant will be found, from which the insect came out. If some of the leaves of the plants are partly crippled, or if light green or white spots are found on the leaves, you have a good example of the midge. If these light spots are opened carefully with a sharp knife, a soft substance will be found, which is the egg of the midge. If the egg is almost ready to hatch, its color will be reddish and the egg will have a soft shell. When the insect emerges from the egg it is a fully developed adult, and it mates immediately.

The various preventive measures are well summarized in the Department of Agriculture bulletin No. 833, as follows: "From the life history it is clear that certain points must be kept in mind if the best practical results are to be secured. First, several generations are always present in greenhouses during the spring and fall occurrences; second, the adults emerge and mate during the early morning hours and egg laying quickly follows; third, preliminary control experiments show that the egg stage may be controlled by means of spraying or dipping the cuttings or plants; fourth, it has been demonstrated that the adult can be killed easily at the time of emergence by consistent spraying; fifth, fumigation experiments in a commercial house proved that the adult is easily killed by fumigation either with nicotine papers or hydrocyanic acid gas; sixth, experiments applicable to general propagation practices show conclusively that such measures offer a reasonable safeguard and protection against doubtful stock and infested material without injury to the plants.

For Light and Heavy Infestations.

"In case of a light infestation, daily picking of gall-infested leaves will hold the pest in check. Should this practice prove ineffective, nightly fumigation for a period of two or three weeks may be resorted to.

"When a severe infestation is encountered the most heavily infested plants should be taken out immediately and burned. This should then be followed by either fumigation or spraying. Fumigate every night, with either nicotine papers or hydrocyanic acid gas, for a period of at least six weeks. This will kill all the adults that emerge during such a period and at the same time prevent the further laying of eggs for future generations. The dosage need not be heavy in either case. When nicotine papers are used one sheet to every 1,000 cubic feet of space will suffice. If hydrocyanic acid gas is employed, one-eighth to one-fourth ounce per thousand cubic feet will kill all of the adults. The use of hydrocyanic acid gas is not recommended unless in the hands of a competent fumigator, owing to its deadly poisonous effects. Too much emphasis can not be laid on the fact that fumigation must be set off after midnight to be effective. It is preferable to start the generation between the hours of 12:30 a. m. and 2 a. m. Any fumigation done before midnight would be useless, for it has been pointed out that the adult does not emerge until after midnight. On the other hand, if it is started later than 2 a. m., many adults will have emerged and laid their eggs.

"In case fumigation is not advisable, especially where chrysanthemum plants are isolated or when other varieties of plants are present in the houses, spraying is recommended. This must be done consistently for a period of four to six weeks, a forty per cent solution of nicotine sulphate extract diluted (1-800) being used, and soap added at the rate of one-half to one ounce per gallon of solution. The application should be made late in the afternoon in order that the best results may be obtained. In this manner practically all adults can be killed at the time of emergence and any eggs present will be destroyed.

Taking Cuttings.

"As a preventive measure, it is recommended that cuttings be dipped in the following solution at the time they are taken:

Nicotine sulphate, forty per cent.....part 1
Waterparts 800
Laundry soapounce per gal. 1/2-1

"Another satisfactory method of securing chrysanthemum cuttings free from midge when the previous season's stock has been infested is to plant the stocks in benches or coldframes directly after the season's crop has been removed. This should then be followed by thorough treatment with a mixture consisting of equal parts of dry, or air-slaked, lime and tobacco dust. It is advisable to keep all new growth covered with the mixture until further operations in the spring."

DEMONSTRATING PACKING.

C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, England, who will be remembered as a visitor here about two years ago, does a large export trade in young carnation plants, and often consignments on their journeys to foreign parts are seven or eight weeks before reaching their destination. At the recent Chelsea show, in London, he showed two boxes packed eight weeks before the show and two boxes packed four weeks before the show, sealed and signed by the president and the secretary of the Royal Horticultural Society, and placed in cold storage in London. The boxes were sent to Saffron Walden May 22, returned to Chelsea May 23 and opened in the presence of the society's officers. "The plants had not turned a leaf; they looked as fresh and indeed were as fresh and as full of health and vigor as they were when packed," reports the Horticultural Trade Journal. "Neither had any one plant moved a fraction of an inch from its original position, amply demonstrating the suitability of the method of packing adopted. To see the boxes opened, the carnations looking as fresh as if they had been packed eight minutes instead of eight weeks, made the export of carnations seem easy—but it all depends on knowing how to do it. Mr. Engelmann has certainly solved the problem, and can, with confidence, dispatch plants to any part of the world. The boxes, after being opened, were on view in the scientific tent of the R. H. S."

FOR NATIONAL FLOWER.

The daisy, Bellis perennis, would be made the national flower of the United States, if a bill just introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman John Kissel, of Brooklyn, N. Y., were passed. The bill has been referred to the House committee on library.

For some years past there has been a consistent effort upon the part of flower lovers and others to have Congress designate a given flower as a national floral emblem. Most of the bills have called for the selection of the mountain laurel. To date no action has been taken on the proposed legislation and it is doubtful if Congress will act in the matter.

AZALEA CALENDULACEA.

I have mailed you a sprig of an azalea plant, together with the bloom for identification. The plant from which this was taken is four and one-half feet in height and nine feet across. It has been standing in its present location for twenty-five years without protection of any kind. B. G.—Ia.

The plant in question seems to be a form of Azalea calendulacea. This is one of the most showy species. It has orange-yellow to orange-red flowers, which are often two inches broad, but are nearly scentless. The tube is usually shorter than the limb, and the stamens thicken at the middle. C. W.

Mainly About People

Maxwell, Neb.—J. C. Parker, who formerly operated a greenhouse at Genoa, Neb., is reëntering the trade with cut flowers and pot plants. Mr. Parker was compelled by ill health to give up his business in Genoa about five years ago.

Orlando, Fla.—F. W. Fletcher comments on the lack of demand for alternantheras this season. He says he is dumping nearly 50,000 plants, although he never had better stock, and he wonders if the use of the plant is decreasing.

Pana, Ill.—The Lions' Club is one of the active organizations of this community. It is devoted to "liberty, intelligence and our nation's safety." Martin C. Amling is a director. The secretary is Jesse P. Robinson, who also is secretary of A. N. Nielsen, Inc., rose growers.

Goshen, Ind.—Miss Dora Brown, who for years operated under the name of the Colonial Flower Shop, has moved from her former location, at Main and Jefferson streets, to 219 South Third street, where she has a finely appointed place of business, which is operated under the name of Dora Brown's Flower Shop.

Martins Ferry, O.—Francis Davison has recently completed his fifth greenhouse at North Eighth and Center streets. He has a fine group of blooming plants on display.

Elmira, N. Y.—Jay H. Parker, proprietor of the Rosery Garden Shop, expects to be able to move into his new quarters by July 1. The new quarters of the firm are being erected on North Main street.

Westerville, O.—A distinctive nameplate is that of Sked the Florist. It was designed by Mr. Sked himself. But then, Mr. Sked's ability is far from being restricted to the growing and selling of flowers. He holds the office of city auditor. He is also a member of the Board of Trade.

Omaha, Neb.—Lewis Henderson, after an active life in the greenhouses and store, has been suffering from ill health for the last four years. He has been troubled with paralysis and has had two cerebral hemorrhages during that time, but he says he is not entirely played out and he still gives the business much of his attention. Mr. Henderson is fortunate in having a son who is rapidly assuming the more burdensome parts of the work.

ROSE SOCIETY NOTES.

Following closely on the annual meeting of the American Rose Society, at Syracuse, June 15, the annual Rochester rose show will take place at the neighboring city in New York state June 16 and 17.

For the benefit of those who would like to visit the Cornell rose garden at Ithaca, or the Hartford rose garden at Hartford, it is stated that the former promises to be at its best about June 22 and 23 and the latter about June 25. Prof. E. A. White, Cornell University, Ithaca, is able to supply information in regard to the former and G. A. Parker, superintendent of parks, Hartford, Conn., in regard to the latter.

It has been the aim of J. Horace McFarland, editor of the American Rose Annual, to secure an authoritative short list of the best roses, selected by the vote of members of the American Rose Society. To secure such a list a return post card was attached to the notice of the annual meeting of the society, on which members were asked to name their choice of the five best climbing roses and also of the ten best bush roses.

FEEDING ROSES.

What can I do for rose bushes planted outside to make them grow? Will nitrate of soda do them any good? The plants are growing in the nursery and receive the same cultivation as that given other plants. J. H. A.—Miss.

If the roses have good roots, they may be improved by applying a top-dressing of cow manure, which will also act as a mulch. If this is unobtainable, I should suggest dried blood or tankage, giving a light top-dressing and working it into the soil with a hoe or cultivator. Nitrate of soda is a powerful stimulant, but I should not advise its use on outdoor roses. It promotes a soft, rank growth and, unless it is carefully used, it might easily do more harm than good. C. W.

BENCH ROSES OUTDOORS.

Do bench roses do well if planted in the open ground? Which would you advise planting for a home rose garden, bench roses or own-root plants out of small-sized pots? L. B. M.—Miss.

Bench roses are planted in many gardens. Indeed, so generally are they so used today that few florists throw away the plants they remove from their benches, finding it profitable to dispose of them for use in home gardens. Unless you desire varieties which are not used for forcing—in which case, of course, you have no choice—you will get satisfaction from bench roses planted outdoors.

WORMS ON RUSSELL ROSES.

I am sending you specimens of worms found on our Russell roses. Will you identify them and advise me of a means of getting rid of them?

A. A. D.—Cal.

It was not possible to identify the worms on arrival, due to the fact that during shipment the material had disintegrated so badly that identification was impossible. The worms were badly infested by fungi and the essential parts destroyed.

In shipping insects, a cotton plug should be used in the opening of the container, so that the insects will remain alive; or, better still, the insects may be put in a vial containing either alcohol or four per cent formalin, which preserves their structure.

You will not go amiss if you use ninety parts of fine sulphur and ten parts of powdered arsenate of lead and dust your rose plants with this mixture. The sulphur will control mildew and the lead will destroy the worms.

If you will send more specimens of the worm, put up as suggested above, we shall be glad to identify them for you.

NAMING ROSES.

Will you tell me the names of the roses which I have sent under separate cover? L. P. B.—Okla.

The foliage in the package, owing to the heat wave, was almost pulp on arrival. The two plants could not be recognized. The foliage and wood of the white rose most closely resemble those of Silver Moon, one of the late Dr. Van Fleet's introductions. The buds are almost indistinguishable, from decay in transit, but are apparently of a single, pure white rose. The blight on the buds may be due to mildew or some climatic cause. C. W.

BEST IN BOXES

FLOWER BOX PLANTING.

Some Good Combinations.

The florist must be guided by two things when making his selection of plants, if called upon to fill window or porch boxes; namely, that the plants must produce the desired decorative effect and they must be varieties which will readily adapt themselves to the environment—the intense heat of the summer, the abundance of sunshine and, in many cases, the dust in the air produced by the prolonged dry spells during the summer months.

Every florist is acquainted with the well known combinations of geraniums and Hedera helix (English ivy) or Senecio mikanioides (German ivy) for window boxes, petunias in porch boxes and nasturtiums in either place, with perhaps blue ageratum and Vinca variegata with the petunias and a Dracæna indivisa in the center of the geraniums and ivy. Dracæna indivisa is chosen because it can stand considerable neglect and an abundance of sunshine, together with a cool night temperature.

There are, however, many additional combinations of plants that are of easy culture with which the florist can fill his needs, and a few of them are hereinafter set forth. Writing in the House Beautiful, Annabel Morris Buchanan makes the following comment on the customary selections noted above: "These combinations are popular because they make exceedingly attractive boxes and are certain to grow, with a reasonable amount of attention. Yet there are many other flowers in infinite variety of combinations that will look quite as pretty and grow just as rapidly. Certain types are popular in different localities. But with a little thought, many new effects may be obtained."

Geraniums and Ivy.

The writer in her article goes on to say that the type of house and situation must be considered. She intimates that geraniums and English ivy will suit a formal box along the street, where dust would make it difficult for other flowers to bloom, and if there is much dust or smoke, sword ferns and ivy would be an even better combination, while a deeply shaded window may have ivy, ferns in variety, and other foliage plants.

The article contains many other suggestions which are useful to the florist. For instance, for a window opening on a shady porch, one might try the effect of a box massed in Boston ferns, asparagus and German ivy, with Asparagus Sprengeri trailing over the edge. These plants are selected because they do not require a great deal of sunlight and are especially ornamental or decorative.

Another excellent suggestion is a box of Zebrina pendula (silvery-leaved wandering jew). Asparagus plumosus gives a soft, lacy effect and looks well when it is combined with the heavier ferns and German ivy. These plants are selected because they seem to be totally indifferent to sunshine or shade; that is, they will grow in either and do well.

A good porch box can be produced with pink-flowering geraniums and the rose geranium, with wandering jew hanging over the edge of the box. The dwarf geraniums whose bright green leaves are margined with white make a good contrast when used with dark red geraniums and German ivy.

Begonias and Ivy.

Tuberous-rooted begonias are especially adapted to boxes of this sort, but need a little shade in hot weather. They can be easily combined with Asparagus Sprengeri in making an attractive box. Pink begonias, Linaria Cymbalaria (Kenilworth ivy) and ageratum go well together. The ageratum blooms all summer long. Linaria Cymbalaria is one of the most familiar trailers; it is well adapted for basket work where the light is poor.

Lobelia gracilis goes well with pink or white begonias and some variety of asparagus. L. gracilis also goes well with sweet alyssum, a plant which blooms all summer and is suitable for basket or box work, together with pink dwarf phlox.

Another harmonizing combination can be made up of Kenilworth ivy and Oxalis rosea. The oxalis must have the sunshine to bloom, however. To add to the enjoyment of this box some fragrant plant should be included, such as rose geraniums, lemon verbenas, pansies, heliotrope, mignonette—there are fragrant flowers to suit each location. A box filled with heliotrope, Vinca variegata and wandering jew will prove a good seller, as it has the decorative effect combined with the lasting qualities necessary for this work. The heliotrope will spread out and bloom all summer, while the trailing plants will hang down over the edge of the box for several feet. The heliotrope must have a rich soil in which to grow, together with plenty of sunshine and water.

The pansy makes an excellent and useful plant for box work. Pansy plants require good, rich soil and plenty of sunshine and water. In order to have pansies bloom all summer, however, it is necessary to prevent the seed pods from forming. The pansy may be combined with sweet alyssum. The seeds of the sweet alyssum may be sown between the pansy plants as these are set out. In order to have the sweet alyssum bloom for a long period of time, the bloom should be frequently cut.

Trailing Plants.

Mignonette and verbenas need no companions for box work. If the former is placed in a sunny, fairly cool location, the foliage of a few plants will soon fill the entire box. The latter plant produces trailing branches and will bloom from June 1 until frost, when planted outdoors. Petunias are good when used alone in box work; when combined with other plants for window box work, they grow so fast that they crowd everything else out. This plant requires almost no care.

If a screen for a high porch is desired, nasturtiums can be used with good success. Other good plants for screening verandas or for covering unsightly objects are morning glories and moonflowers. They require a rich soil, in a deep box with good drainage.

When mixed with German ivy and wandering jew, the salmon pink Impatiens Sultan makes an unusual combination, while if plants that can endure hot sun are desired, Asparagus Sprengeri and coleus are good.

Careful consideration must be given to the color combinations if the best effects are to be obtained; that is, colors which clash should not be used. A complete list of color combinations can be found in almost any good cyclopedia.

TAKING CUTTINGS

PROPAGATING HARDY SHRUBS.

Can you give me any information in regard to the propagation of hardy shrubs from soft or green-wood cuttings, particularly as to the watering and ventilating of the frames?

I. G.—Neb.

You need a good, tight frame and lath shadings, which should be elevated sufficiently above the frame so that you can open the sashes, spray and do any necessary work without interference from them. Cuttings of viburnums, weigelas, spiræas, cinerarias, ligustrums, halesias, forsythias, syringas, including lilacs, should be in a suitable condition with you about the middle of June. While a gentle bottom heat is not infrequently provided, I have not found this necessary to successful propagation. Cuttings should be short; two eyes are ample on lilacs and not over three are needed on other shrubs. I prefer to cut away a good part of the foliage which will appear above the sand on lilacs and, of course, remove all leaves from the lower part of the cuttings, but do not cut out the buds.

Clean, sharp sand roots cuttings well. If it is too fine, add some screened charcoal, fine coal ashes or even fine coal to it to make it more porous and sweet. In hot weather great care is needed in taking the cuttings. Do not take off too many at one time; plunge them in fresh water. If the water has been standing around and the cuttings are allowed to remain in it for any length of time, they will turn black. It is better to sprinkle them with water from a faucet, cover with a paper and keep in the shade until put in the frame.

Most of the deciduous shrubs root easily from green-wood cuttings, which should be fairly firm. If quite soft, they are almost sure to damp off should you get a spell of intense heat. Some of the lilacs, like Syringa Josikæ, S. villosa, S. rothomagensis and S. persica, root readily, as also do the tree lilacs, S. japonica and S. pekinensis. On the other hand, the good named varieties of S. vulgaris, like Mme. Lemoine, macrostachya, Philemon, Mme. Casimir-Perier, Marie Legraye and others, are more difficult subjects, and unless the wood is just in the right degree of firmness, success is not attained. However, if you get ten to twenty per cent of these at a first venture, you can feel that you are doing well, and remember that the named lilacs on their own roots make by far the best plants, bring good money and are in great demand. As soon as a batch of cuttings is placed in the frame, water and then spray lightly, not once or twice, but a half-dozen times a day when the weather is warm and clear, less frequently on dark, cloudy days. It is on the care received the first thirty days that success or failure will depend with green-wood cuttings. You cannot leave these for a day, nor can you omit the frequent, light sprayings. In addition to the sprayings, examine the sand carefully and if any signs of approaching dryness appear, water with the hose through a brass rose and never direct from the hose with even your finger as a spreading agent for the water. It will be better for you to use a watering pot, if you want the water evenly distributed.

Lilacs rubbed off with a heel are more likely to root and far less liable to damp off than those cut below an eye. All cuttings unless rubbed off with a heel—short, stubby cuttings with heels are excellent—should be cut below eyes. Some shrubs, like Hydrangea arborescens and H. paniculata; Deutzia Lemoinei and D. gracilis; Ligustrum Ibota and L. ovalifolium and some other varieties, will root within thirty days. The above-named lilacs need more time. Now as to ventilation, do not give any until the cuttings are rooting; then give a little and gradually decrease the spraying somewhat. When cuttings are calloused, a little ventilation given on a cloudy day will do little harm, but the same amount given on a hot, clear day would be harmful.

Boiled down, a few essentials needed for the successful propagation of deciduous green-wood cuttings are: Wood must be in a medium ripe condition; if too soft, damping off will result; care must be taken to prevent wilting before and after insertion; cuttings must be sprayed lightly, but frequently, so that they will hardly ever appear dry for the first few weeks; little or no ventilation should be given until the cuttings are rooting; when the cuttings are rooted, reduce spraying materially, gradually increase ventilation and light, and later remove the sashes altogether and leave them off until freezing weather removes any foliage on the cuttings. These hints are intended for the many small growers who want to root some deciduous shrubs. Nurserymen and large propagators do not need such advice. C. W.

TAKING PHLOX CUTTINGS.

Will you kindly advise me of the method followed in propagating perennial phlox from cuttings—the time the cuttings are taken off, etc.?

J. H. C.—Can.

The native varieties of Phlox paniculata and P. maculata are propagated by side shoots and by cuttings of well matured shoots. Cuttings should be taken from the young, vigorous shoots on the outside of the clump. The spring is the best time to take the cuttings. Place them in sand and keep them well watered. This will give you strong plants in the fall, fit for selling.

GRAFTING GYPSOPHILA.

Will you please tell me how to graft Gypsophila paniculata flore-pleno? What temperature is required and how should the soil or sand be prepared? What time of the year is best? Is budding wax or raffia used to hold the graft in place? What is the best part of the root to use and how should it be prepared?

O. J. S.—Colo.

The writer has done no grafting of Gypsophila paniculata flore-pleno and would like some reader who has done so to give this subscriber the information he desires.

The roots must be used to take the grafts. Late winter or early spring should be the ideal time for this work. Keep the grafts close and warm until they "take." Use sand or very sandy soil and tie the grafts with raffia. When growth starts give the plants a little more air and pot them off singly. Keep them rather close until they have become established. C. W.

MEASURING STEAM.

To secure more accurate data than has heretofore been possible in regard to the heat necessary for different types of houses and under different methods of heating, the American Greenhouse

Mfg. Co., of Chicago, has installed in the greenhouses at Pana, Ill., where its factories are located, meters to measure the flow of steam. At the range of Walter A. Amling a group of connected houses will be measured. At the range of A. N. Nielsen a big house, 61x400 feet, will be measured and a group of 34-foot disconnected houses will be supplied with a separate meter. Thus three different types of constructions will be studied with a view to determining the relative amount of steam each type requires in relation to its size.

It is planned to equip the range of Stielow Bros., at Niles Center, Ill., with a similar steam flow meter. The Stielow houses are heated with oil, and valuable figures as to the relative merits of oil and coal are anticipated.

This experiment is not a cheap one. Each meter costs about $400 to install. The three at Pana and the one at Niles Center are expected to be ready to measure the steam used next winter. Such meters are manufactured by the General Electric Co. and the Republic Flow Meters Co. Hitherto their use has been confined to large power plants, where the extensive flow of steam warranted the expense of installing a meter. If the experiments at Pana and Niles Center reward the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. with valuable statistics, doubtless the use of such meters in large greenhouse establishments the country over will become general.

STANDING SHOWER WREATH.

A wreath quite popular and much admired down in Columbus, O., is the standing "shower wreath," which is a creation of the Wilson Seed & Floral Co., of that city. An illustration of such a wreath appears on this page. The design here shown was sent to the funeral of a prominent local automobile dealer by the Association of Ford Dealers.

In this case the wreath proper consisted of blue and lavender sweet peas, Sunburst roses and valley, while the base was made of yellow and bronze snapdragons and Columbia roses. The firm has made this design in various sizes and heights, its popularity having created a great demand for it.

FLOWERS FOR SICK SOLDIERS.

At Portage Park, on the northwest side of Chicago, an idea for the distribution of plants and flowers to sick soldiers through the children of the community was conceived recently, with the result that in one small district more than 400 plants, besides flowers, were taken, with gratifying results to the neighborhood florists.

An organization composed of women got out a number of dodgers, which were distributed in one school. They read as follows:

HEY, KIDS!

They're going to send a lot of flowers and plants to the sick soldiers at Speedway hospital next Sunday, June 11. Every boy and girl in Portage Park can send a flower or plant. Ask pa or ma to let you get one, and then put your own name and address on a card and fasten it to the flower or plant and then take it to one of the following places and they will take them to the sick soldiers.

Below was a list of five places where the plants might be left by the children—a confectionery, an art shop, a coffee shop, an alderman's residence and a local paper's office. The instructions stated that all of the flowers and plants must be at the places mentioned not later than Saturday, June 10. The dodger ended, in boldface type: "Get busy, kids! Do a good thing for our sick soldiers!"

The "kids" evidently "got busy," for more than 400 plants were collected and taken to the sick soldiers. Peter Pearson, president of the Commercial Flower Growers of Chicago, on discovering the source of the local demand for plants, praised the idea. He believes it is one that can be applied in almost any large community in the country. The trade, through the proper coöperation, can aid in a good cause and at the same time add to the demand for its products.

A WEEDLESS LAWN.

Rhode Island has scored again—this time with the weedless lawn. The secret was disclosed by the experiment station at the Rhode Island State Agricultural College, at Kingston, a year ago. Since then hundreds of inquiries have been received at the institution from all over the world and the treatment has been widely subscribed to as a success.

As originally announced, the weed-less lawn treatment makes use of the discovery that our finest lawn grasses, either Rhode Island bent, or creeping bent, will thrive in a soil more acid than that which is favorable to the ordinary weeds. Hence, by using fertilizing materials, especially sulphate of ammonia, which make the soil acid and at the same time supply the needed plant food, a favorable condition is produced to give the handsomest velvety lawn, without the fear of intrusion of undesired weeds.

The greatest number of inquiries have come from New York, with over 500 letters coming to the offices of the Rhode Island State College from that state. Illinois and Ohio are next in order, with Massachusetts following, but Michigan, Pennsylvania, California, Indiana, Wisconsin and Missouri are not far behind. Over thirty letters of inquiry regarding the weedless lawns have come from Canada and inquiries have been received from Panama, South America and South Africa.

The most satisfactory feature of all this, the college officials say, has been the success of the treatment as tried by many people in many places. Wherever it has been possible to obtain the true bent grass seed and the sulphate of ammonia has been used according to directions, the lawns are slowly but surely freeing themselves from the unpleasant mixture of weeds.

VALUATING BIRTHDAYS.

A few days ago a pedestrian, striding rapidly down a street of St. Louis, Mo., glanced at the posters on the end of a street car to see what time the afternoon's baseball game was to be called. He glanced and his eyes remained glued to the poster, for what he read was:

Today is my birthday.
I am not working.
Vincent Gorly.

"Well, who gives a hoot?" thought the pedestrian, or words to that effect, but this was only the first thought in a series that brought him to the conclusion that birthdays, after all, mean something and are worthy of being remembered. And when the following day the same pedestrian sought to take another look at "the good idea," he saw:

Whose birthday is it today?
"Say It with Flowers."
Grimm & Gorly.

"Why, next week is the wife's birthday and, thanks to Grimm & Gorly, I will 'Say It with Flowers,'" determined the convinced pedestrian.

This is the way that Grimm & Gorly convinced thousands. Mr. Gorly announced his birthday June 3 in the manner described, and all the next week the second-mentioned sign followed. The illustration on this page shows exactly how it was done.

PROBABLY APHIS.

My rose bushes and snowballs are in some way affected. I sprayed the snowballs with a nicotine solution and I expect to spray the rose bushes with Bordeaux mixture or Paris green. Is that all right?
F. C. P.—Ia.

Viburnum Opulus and roses are subject to the attacks of aphis; the black aphis attacks the former and green aphis the roses. Spraying with a nicotine extract containing a little soap to make it more adhesive is an excellent remedy.

BUSINESS EMBARRASMENTS.

Washington, D. C.—One of his creditors having begun suit, Z. D. Blackstone is asking all his merchandise creditors to grant an extension of time by accepting for open accounts ten equal notes, the first of which will become due December 1, 1922, and the others one a month until all are paid. Mr. Blackstone purposes not to include in this arrangement those whose claims are for filling telegraph delivery orders, "because if these are not paid monthly I shall lose the business and the efficiency of my business may be impaired to such an extent that it would be difficult for me to carry out the above arrangement."

Salem, Ore.—C. B. Clancey has filed a petition in bankruptcy in the United States District court. Liabilities, which he lists at $14,117.08, consist largely of unsecured claims, held by 155 creditors. His assets are listed at $3,577.21 and consist almost entirely of stock in trade and store fixtures.

Fort Dodge, Ia.—C. W. Gadd, to whom E. E. Nordwall made a common law assignment for the benefit of creditors last December, has mailed checks to creditors amounting to thirty per cent of their claims. Upon estimating the liabilities and assets a month ago, Mr. Gadd estimated the total dividends, provided the sale of the Nordwall property to Otto A. Schroeder was consummated, at somewhere between thirty and forty per cent.

Oneonta, N. Y.—The greenhouse property on River street lately owned by Arleigh C. Hendry, who for the last two years has conducted the business, was sold recently in foreclosure proceedings. There were three or four bidders and the price was gradually advanced to $9,000, at which figure it was sold to Antonio Angellili, the former proprietor and the holder of the mortgage.

CLUB MEETINGS

Last Meeting Till Autumn.

Fate decreed that the bowling tournament which featured the closing meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club for the season should fall on the hottest night of the year to date. Despite the heat, however, an attendance of about eighty-five, including a number of the ladies, gathered at the Chateau bowling alleys, Thursday evening, June 8, where the club members were the guests of Albert Fuchs, who long ago retired from the florists' business to manage his Chateau building and apartments on Broadway, extending from Grace street to Sheridan road.

A brief business meeting preceded the bowling. At this time it was decided to hold no meetings during July, August and September; the next meeting of the club will be held in October.

A report in regard to transportation to the S. A. F. convention at Kansas City was made by the chairman of the transportation committee, to whom the club left the choice of route to be taken by the Chicago party to the convention. Report as to the committee's selection will be mailed members later.

To remember suitably the deaths of three club members, Frank F. Benthey, Andrew Benson and Lorenz P. Geiger, which occurred recently, the club instructed James Morton to draw up the proper resolutions.

Hans Jepsen invited the club to hold its November meeting at his greenhouses, in Maywood, in November, when the chrysanthemum crop would be at its height.

When called upon, T. E. Waters was not quite prepared to present the final report on the club's dance at the May meeting, but, on motion, all bills for the occasion were ordered paid, as well as any which might accrue in regard to routine matters between this meeting and the next one, in October.

Secretary Lautenschlager was instructed to draw up a suitable resolution thanking Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fuchs for the hospitality shown the club.

Bowling Tournament.

The business meeting was followed by bowling in the alleys on the third floor of the Chateau building. The object of the tournament was to secure material for a team to represent the Chicago Florists' Club in the S. A. F. bowling tournament at Kansas City in August. A. J. Zech is chairman of the committee to organize such a team and the club has voted $100 for practice games. For the club's tournament six teams were organized to represent the various divisions in the trade and were captained as follows: Seedsmen and nurserymen, Leonard H. Vaughan; wholesale florists, A. J. Zech; retail florists, John Huebner; growers, Paul Weiss; supplies, T. E. Waters; allied trades, W. E. Peterson.

The seedsmen and retailers bowled well ahead of the other branches. The seedsmen won by seven pins, having a total of 2,459 against 2,452 for the retailers, when their captain, Leonard Vaughan, rolled the high game of the evening, 238, at the close of the match. The wholesalers accumulated 2,154 in total pins, the supply men, 2,129 and the allied trades, 2,032. The individual scores, by teams, were as follows:

To cool off after the bowling, the club members and friends visited the Marigold Gardens, across the street, upon invitation of the management. Space had been reserved in the outdoor garden, where the florists enjoyed the music, refreshments and dancing. Secretary Lautenschlager was diligent in providing for the comfort of members and guests, who voted the evening, despite the hot weather, one of the most enjoyable the club has had.

Elliott Shows Sweet Peas.

A splendid display of sweet peas was shown by Charles Elliott, of Park Ridge, Ill. They included seven excellent varieties of his own raising, grown outdoors, bearing flowers of bright colors on long, stiff stems. Each of the varieties was awarded the club's certificate of merit; they included Highland Mary, rose pink; Miss Winifred Jones, rose pink; Miss Dora Valentine, light blue; June Bride, white; Mrs. David Lloyd George, oleander pink; Mrs. Charles Elliott, blush, and pink bicolor 8-20.

In his talk to the club members about the sweet peas he displayed, Mr. Elliott stated that they were some of his own seedlings, some of which were grown to determine how well they were fixed, or in other words, if they bred true. The seeds, he said, were sown during November, 1921. After they had germinated, the flats in which they were sown were wintered in a coldframe. In March the plants were put into 3-inch pots and later into 5-inch pots, a single plant in a pot. They were grown in coldframes with plenty of ventilation in mild weather and planted out April 16 eighteen inches apart, being allowed to branch naturally. The plants began to bloom the third week in May.

NEW YORK CLUB CLOSES YEAR.

Pennock Lectures.

The last meeting for the season of the New York Florists' Club was held Monday evening, June 12, in the club's rooms in the Engineering Societies' building, with President Roman J. Irwin presiding, and a good attendance.

S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, president of the S. A. F., was present to give a lecture. He was warmly greeted by the gathering and escorted to a seat on the platform.

After reading the minutes of the previous meeting, Secretary Young presented memorial resolutions on the death of John I. Raynor, a member of the club recently deceased, all members standing. The resolutions were unanimously adopted.

Another International Show.

C. H. Totty, for the flower show committee, reported that this committee had held a meeting that afternoon, afterwards meeting with a committee from the Floricultural Society of New York, and it had been decided to hold another big flower show next spring. A financial report covering last spring's show would show, he said, that receipts totaled $77,000, and that after all expenses were paid the sum of $12,000 would be left to be equally divided between the club and the Horticultural Society. Over $6,000 had been paid to the government for war taxes. The joint committee was organized with the same officers as before: Chairman, T. A. Havemeyer; treasurer, Frederick R. Newbold, and secretary, John Young. The schedule committee would, he said, meet shortly to arrange the preliminary program.

President Irwin announced that he had appointed A. M. Henshaw to the flower show committee.

C. Lowther, for the committee on transportation, reported that about thirty-five reservations had been made for the convention trip and tour of the Great Lakes, and A. L. Miller reported several tentative reservations. Negotiations were under way with up-state clubs and with the Philadelphia and Boston clubs, with a view to interesting their members in the trip.

New Members.

Three new members were elected: Carl W. Meyer, 99 Warren street, New York; Ernest A. Marxson, of the same address, and Fred Muntz, Jamaica, N. Y.

All three were present and were introduced to the members.

On motion of Secretary Young, the matter of securing new quarters for the club was referred to the board of trustees.

Mr. Miller spoke of the great service rendered the flower shows by Frederick R. Newbold, treasurer of the joint committee, and moved that some token of appreciation of his services be presented to him. It was decided that a committee be appointed, with John Scheepers as chairman, to consider and act in the matter.

A committee, consisting of A. T. De La Mare, F. H. Traendly and John Young, was appointed to prepare memorial resolutions on the death of Patrick Welch, of Boston, a much respected member of the club.

Harrie Mueller, of Wichita, Kan., was a guest and made a short address, welcoming the club's members to the Kansas City convention.

Pennock Talks on Travels.

Mr. Pennock's lecture was descriptive of his work in Germany in connection with the Friends' Relief, which was given charge of the dispensation of food provided by the societies, whose head was Herbert Hoover. The food was prepared and distributed only to undernourished children and mothers and expectant mothers, and over a million meals a day were furnished for many months. He showed about 125 pictures on the screen, several of them depicting rose gardens in Germany and France, in the latter the Bagatelle gardens and the garden of M. Graveureaux, both near Paris. The lecturer was, on conclusion, given a standing vote of thanks.

Exhibits.

The Springfield Floral Co., Springfield, N. J., exhibited a handsome vase of hybrid foxgloves and Madonna lilies. C. F. Bertanzel, Roslyn, N. Y., showed five pots of a new white garden pink, which had been named Mothers' Day.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Visits Dreer's.

The Lancaster County Florists' Club June 8 held an automobile run to Henry A. Dreer's, Riverton, N. J. Ten machines filled with members and friends participated. The party met at Elmer J. Weaver's, on the Lincoln highway, at 6:30 a. m. En route a stop was made at Alfred Campbell's, at Strafford, Pa. It was a decided treat to be shown over Mr. Campbell's place, for everything is just topnotch for mid-June—Laddie carnations with midwinter quality, pot hydrangeas, Ricard geraniums in 5-inch size, acres of hydrangeas for next season outdoors and large plantings of big, branching Laddies under Skinner irrigation. It was interesting to note four beds, 200 feet long, of Laddie, which have been flowering in the same soil for three consecutive years, in which they will be kept another season. Seldom do we meet one filled with so much enthusiasm as Alfred Campbell and his able foreman, "Joe." A visit here is always instructive.

With Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Weaver in the pilot car, we drove through Fairmount park on the Wissahickon drive along the Schuylkill river, and then over the Roosevelt boulevard, thence taking the ferry at Tacony over the Delaware river to Riverton.

After lunch, under the care of our genial friend, J. D. Eisele, we were shown through the famous Dreer establishment—acres and acres of palms and ferns, in all sizes from tiniest seedlings to fully matured show plants. The herbaceous gardens were a glow of color and in the water gardens many rare lilies were showing their first blooms. The potted garden rose section of this place is a most extensive one. A bench of new, unnamed seedlings showed many beautiful blooms and a bench of the new yellow, Souvenir de Claudius Pernet, was the admiration of all. The past season has been the banner year of this establishment.

The next meeting of the Lancaster Florists' Club will be held June 22, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Strickler.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

There seems to be plenty of activity in this market, but much stock is being moved at low prices. Each day last week the market was overloaded with roses and carnations. Daily shipments of peonies arrive and the quality has been fairly good.

American Beauty roses were in demand last week at fair prices. Valley and orchids are moving well, because of June weddings. Gladioli are becoming the main factor in the market, and the demand just about meets the supply. There are plenty of outdoor flowers, such as sweet williams, daisies, etc. Easter lilies and callas have been moving slowly.

Various Notes.

Most florists here report that business now is ahead of what it was last year at this time.

E. C. Tipton, C. C. Phillips, Edward Niggel, of the McCallum Co., and Joseph King, of the A. W. Smith Co., have returned from a week's fishing trip in Forest county.

A. W. Smith, of the A. W. Smith Co., has been ill for several days, but is rapidly improving.

Thursday, June 29, Miss Mary O. MacDonald, of Glenshaw, Pa., and Frederick Kocher, Jr., of Bakerstown, Pa., will be united in marriage. The ceremony will be performed at 7:45 p. m. in the Sandusky Street Baptist church, north side. Mr. Kocher is connected with the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., at Bakerstown, as a rose grower.

GERANIUMS DISEASED.

I am sending you a few leaves of diseased geranium foliage. Please let me know how I can combat the disease. The leaves turn yellow. Will spraying help?

C. D.—Mo.

Probably your treatment of your geraniums has not been quite correct. Keeping plants too crowded and damp and spraying overhead will soon cause diseased foliage to appear. Keep your plants spread out more; remove the dead and decaying leaves, and water somewhat more sparingly. Geraniums are not aquatics and resent being kept wet. They succeed much the best when run a little on the dry side, no matter whether in pots or planted outside.

You may have noticed that outdoors they are always seen at their best during long spells of dry weather. Air the plants freely; keep a dry atmosphere; wet the leaves as little as possible and your plants should soon show improvement.

Mishawaka, Ind.—The Flower Shoppe, conducted by R. McGowan and Arnold McGowan, is having good business and expects it to increase. Therefore three greenhouses, 25x100 feet, are now being built.

OBITUARY

G. V. Van Zanten.

Announcement has been made by the firm of Van Zanten Bros., Hillegom, Holland, of the death of G. V. Van Zanten, the oldest partner of the company. Mr. Van Zanten passed away Wednesday, May 24. The deceased was known to many both abroad and in the United States, by whom he will be missed.

J. H. Broxey.

The Review lost one of its earliest and most regular subscribers May 24 when J. H. Broxey, of the Carrmonte Greenhouses, Dayton, O., died by his own hand. Mr. Broxey was well known and well liked by his many friends in the trade. He had been ill for some time and the belief is that he became despondent toward the last.

FRIEND OF THE SOUTH.

In the passing of Patrick Welch, the florists of the south lost one of their best friends. I was just wondering how many florists of the south know who was largely responsible for the S. A. F. convention going from San Francisco to Houston. When this convention was given to Houston, we did not have a single representative in San Francisco. Mr. Welch wired me, asking if Houston wanted the convention. I immediately got busy and had several telegrams sent to San Francisco. Houston was selected, even though New Orleans and New York had representatives, who put in nominations for the convention, but were defeated.

My firm conviction is that our success was due to the influence and loyalty to the south of our good friend, Patrick Welch. He had long been an advocate of the southern convention. He also believed that the convention should be taken to the various sections of the country.

There hangs in my office today a photograph of Mr. Welch, with this inscription: "Mr. Pat Welch, past-president of the S. A. F. and a staunch friend of the florists of the south."

We have lost a good friend, a hard worker and a man whose judgment could be depended upon. I feel the loss of a personal friend, because, when he was elected president, he saw fit to name me one of the board. All this culminated in the convention going south, and I was eventually elected president of the S. A. F.

The florists throughout the country feel the great loss of one of their most substantial friends and members.

HOW CAN WE HELP YOU?

SOWING SWEET PEA SEED.

When is the proper time to sow the seed for winter-flowering sweet peas? What are the best varieties?

L. M. S.—Mich.

For an early crop, sow the seeds about August 1, using the winter-flowering Spencer varieties.

C. W.

SPACING PYRETHRUM.

How far apart should Pyrethrum aureum be planted? Can it be used for the center plants in beds with alternantheras?

C. E. H.—Ill.

Nine to twelve inches apart is right for Pyrethrum aureum. It can be used in the center of a bed with alternantheras, provided you keep the latter plants trimmed back.

C. W.

CYCLAMEN TOPS ROTTING.

What causes the tops of cyclamen plants to rot off while the roots are still in good condition?

E. D. L.—Tenn.

In all probability the cyclamens have been potted rather too deeply. Burying the tubers or corms is the surest way to cause rotting at the surface. The bottom of the corms should rest on the surface soil and not be buried.

C. W.

PINCHING BACK HYDRANGEAS.

What is the latest time that you can pinch back French and otaksa hydrangeas in order to have good flower wood for next year?

E. D. L.—Tenn.

Old plants of the French and otaksa hydrangeas can be pruned back quite hard in your state until the end of July, and the younger plants may be pinched until the same time. This will allow them ample time to make excellent flowering wood.

C. W.

CULTURE OF CALLAS.

Will you inform us through the columns of The Review as to the proper way to treat calla lily bulbs? Our lilies have been growing in beds in a fern house for several years. This year they have done badly indeed and we think that perhaps they should be taken up. However, the tops never die.

How can we destroy the little worm known as woodworm?

C. F. C.—Miss.

Callas need a good rest each season to do their best and can hardly get it in a fern house. Water should be gradually withheld until the foliage dies away; then take up the tubers. If they seem somewhat green at lifting time, pack them closely in flats of soil and stand them in a greenhouse where they get good sunlight. Do not water them at all.

They would do just as well outdoors, provided they are not exposed to rain storms. When all the foliage has died away, overhaul the roots, cut away any decayed portions, lay the best-sized tubers in flats and cover them with sand until time for them to start up again. Smaller sizes should be kept separate and can be grown along in flats containing four or five inches of soil, or several each in 6-inch or 8-inch pots.

Callas do not succeed best in the shade of a fern house. Give them a sunny house and they will succeed much better. Culture in pots or narrow boxes, six or seven inches deep, gives splendid results. Fine bone used as a top-dressing during the flowering time and applied every week or ten days is the best possible stimulant.

The worm you speak of can be exterminated by a poisoned bran mash, or Slug Shot.

C. W.

DUSTY MILLER BACKWARD.

How long will it take for Cineraria maritima candidissima, or dusty miller, to make a show after the first leaves have appeared? My plants seem to be slow, after they have had their first leaves. I wanted to use them in beds this year.

C. E. H.—Ill.

Cineraria candidissima grows quite rapidly, once it is planted out in good soil. Probably your plants were started rather late.

C. W.

PHOENIX SEED PUSHING UP.

I planted some Phoenix canariensis seeds. When they came up, the seeds came out of the soil on a long stem. What should one do in a case like this?

L. B. M.—Miss.

It is natural for the phoenix seed to push up out of the soil, and especially if the soil is of a loose and open character. In common with many other palms, the phoenix seeds send out a radicle into the earth first, and, in due time, this radicle splits on one side and a leaf comes forth, while the lower end of the radicle ultimately produces the root system. Leave the seeds as they are, and they will turn out all right in the future, nature will take care of the further steps in the growth of the young plants.

W. H. T.

FERTILIZERS FOR CARNATIONS.

Is it possible to use a substitute for rotted sod when mixing the soil for use in the carnation benches? I have a good supply of rotted cow manure, some rather heavy loam, but no sod. Would it be feasible to use humus?

G. C.—N. J.

While there is no better soil than rotted sods for nearly all kinds of greenhouse crops, rotted sods are not essential to success with carnations. Any good field soil which has been properly prepared by adding fertilizers, etc., will grow good carnations. It is a trifle late, now, to begin preparing your carnation soil, but if you have soil which is about right in texture, you can mix with it as much of the rotted cattle manure as your judgment suggests to bring it up to proper fertility. Work it over thoroughly and leave it until your benches are ready for filling. It will require no more work to get this soil into proper condition than if you took more time to it, but it will not be in as good condition. We require at least a year, two years would be better, to prepare our soil. We take a plot of good soil, either sod or field soil. We plow it after spreading on a good coat of manure. Then we sow it in rye, which is turned under when about eighteen to twenty-four inches high. After permitting it to lie a while, we put on another good coat of manure, which is disked in. If we can have two years, we prefer to grow a crop of clover to be turned under.

A. F. J. Baur.

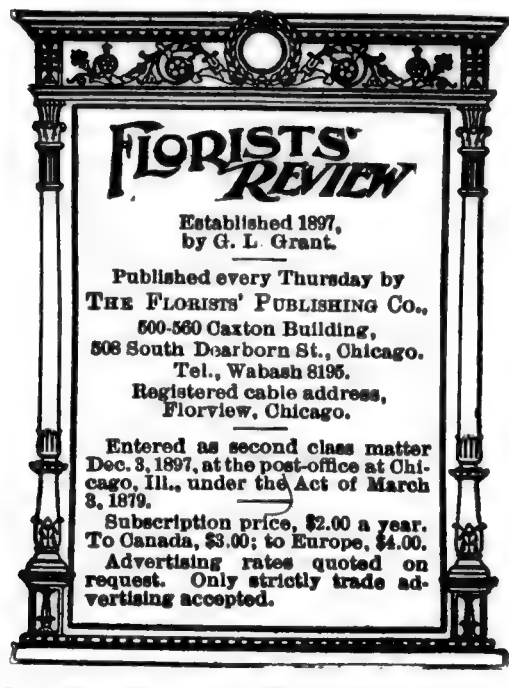

ASTERS DAMPING OFF.

I planted some aster seed in flats 20x24 inches square about March 15. When the young plants were two and three-quarter inches high they were transplanted into other flats, and in watering them a greenhouse spray was used. But I find that most of the plants which were transplanted have developed black feet, and out of the six flats that were planted, there is only one flat left. The seeds were obtained from four seedsmen who are advertisers in The Review. What is the best method of planting aster seed and other smaller seeds so as not to get them too close together? How can the above disease be prevented?

F. X. F.—Mich.

Aster seed should be sown in well drained pans or shallow flats of light and sandy soil for the early crops. The seeds should be lightly covered and carefully watered with a watering can and not with a hose. Probably your seedlings were allowed to remain too long in the seed boxes. When the transplanting is done, care must be used to firm the seedlings properly, but they must not be buried too deeply or damping will result. A light but moderately rich soil suits transplanted seedlings. Omit all chemical fertilizers, but use well pulverized, old manure. Seedlings do not need constant spraying over, but require to be moderately watered with a watering pot, or, when the hose is used, screw a brass nozzle on the end and do not use much pressure. This treatment is decidedly preferable to using an ordinary sprayer or allowing the water to run out of the end of an ordinary hose. It is not too late now to make a sowing of such a good fall aster as American branching, outdoors or in a coldframe.

The seeds will germinate in a few days, if carefully watered, and they should be transplanted once before planting them in the field. Other annual seeds need similar treatment to that given asters. Some very small seeds, like petunia, begonia and gloxinia, need no covering; others need a thin dusting of sand. The larger seeds need to be covered a little more. Sand is a good material to lightly cover the surface soil of the flats and pans. If this material is used, you will not be troubled with green scum on the surface of the soil.

LIVING up to the reputation it has gained by its previous conventions, the Texas State Florists' Association plans another noteworthy gathering, at Dallas, July 5 to 7.

NEXT week-end the American Sweet Pea Society will hold its annual meeting and exhibition, at Boston. Upon the weather man will depend much of the success of the show.

THE sought-for plane of "normalcy" has not been reached, but florists, like everybody else, are getting used to disturbing elements that worried them after a period of tranquil prosperity.

If all the items formerly imported could be replaced by American-grown material with the same speed and completeness as in the case of gladiolus bulbs, quarantine 37 would not bother us nearly so much as it does now.

NEW YORK has a rival. Glasgow will hold an "international" flower show August 31 to September 2, promoted by the corporation of the city of Glasgow in conjunction with the Glasgow and West of Scotland Horticultural Society.

SOMETHING new in plantsmen's advertising is a 4-page folder of J. L. Schiller, Toledo, O., showing blooms of Primula obconica used in design work. Several ideas are afforded retailers who have not made use of primula flowers in this way.

JUNE to date has disappointed those who looked for easier trade collections this month. The fact is, money has come in more slowly than in May or April. Is it because the trade still is too busy with spring work to look after collecting bills and paying past-due accounts?

GIVING his attention to production, the florist who operates a greenhouse is likely to overlook the principles of merchandising which would enhance his success. Yet the disposition of his wares most profitably is not less important than the production of them most economically.

ONE reason why the average grower is a better credit risk than the average retailer is that the grower probably puts his profits back into the business in the way of addition to his glass, whereas the retailer probably puts his profits into some outside business venture that he cannot watch.

JUST now the chrysanthemum midge is causing its spring disturbance. Many florists do not know it when they see it. In fact, the midge is so small that it is seldom noticed. But it is betrayed by the small swellings, like tiny white warts, on the leaves and stems of chrysanthemums. If you find any such on your plants, read carefully the article on page 17 of this issue.

WHEN a business is "organized" so that it doesn't make much difference whether the boss is at home or away, the "organization" is likely to get most of the profits. At the same time, the head of a business should strive to have sufficient competent help so that he may occasionally attend conventions or visit his fellow florists without everything straightway falling to rack and ruin.

BULLETIN No. 16 of the American Peony Society gives members a copy of the proceedings of the society's annual meeting of 1921 just before this year's gathering, which will be held this week at London, Ont. The reports of exhibitions last year at various places provide notes of interest to peony enthusiasts, for whom Secretary A. P. Saunders has done his usual careful job of editing.

IN the post-war boom, high wages and abnormal profits enabled pretty nearly everybody to meet bills as they came due. Never were collections so good and credit men so free of care. But changed business conditions have brought relaxation in the matter of meeting obligations, and delays in payment and requests for long-term credit are becoming more frequent again. It will be a mistake, however, if the trade allows things to drift into the condition they once were. By holding fast to the principle of prompt payment now, we shall be making progress.

STATE GATHERINGS.

Here is a list of the impending state gatherings of the summer:

Texas State Florists' Association, at Dallas, July 5 to 7.

Oklahoma State Florists' Association, at Tulsa, July 13 and 14.

Wisconsin State Florists' Association, at Oshkosh, July 25.

Kansas State Florists' Association, at Fredonia, August 3 and 4.

Missouri State Florists' Association, at Kansas City, August 15 to 17.

CAN YOU HELP?

The Library of Congress has a complete file of issues of The Review with the exception of that dated November 13, 1919, being No. 1146. Copies of that issue in The Review office have been exhausted. Any subscriber who will spare his copy of that issue can assist our national library to make its file complete by sending the number either to the Librarian of Congress, Washington, D. C., or to the office of The Review, whence it will be forwarded to the capital.

WHY LESS MONEY IS SPENT.

There's a reason why people aren't paying what they did for flowers, or for other things. Everybody's pocketbook is getting lighter, according to the monthly circulation statement issued last week by the Treasury department, at Washington. On June 1 the per capita circulation of money in the country was $48.78. This compares with $48.89 May 1 and with $56.89 June 1 a year ago.

The total circulation June 1 was $5,346,832,497, while the population of the country was estimated at 109,605,000.

CHICAGO TO KANSAS CITY.

The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad has been chosen for the trip of the Chicago Florists' Club members and friends to the convention of the Society of American Florists to be held at Kansas City, Mo., August 15 to 17. The party will leave the Union station, Canal and Adams streets, at 6 p. m., standard time (7 p. m., Chicago time), Monday, August 14, and will arrive at Kansas City the following morning at 8 o'clock.

The regular one-way fare is $16.54. A reduced round-trip rate has not yet been authorized. Pullman fares are: Lower berth, $4.50; upper, $3.60; drawing room, $16.50; compartment, $12.75.

Those who plan to go on this train are asked to make reservations early, as a special train will be provided if the size of the party warrants.

For reservations address S. J. Owens, city passenger agent, C., B. & Q., 179 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago; telephone, Wabash 4600.

Members of the trade from other cities are invited to join the party at Chicago.

Those who wish to stop off at St. Joseph, Mo., to visit the greenhouses there, can do so on the C., B. & Q., going or returning, without making a special journey. To do this on the westward trip, it will only be necessary to make reservations in the St. Joseph sleeper on the same train, arriving at St. Joseph at 7:20 Tuesday morning, and proceed from St. Joseph to Kansas City by local train, reversing this arrangement if the stop is made on the return trip.

ROSE PLANTS IN DEMAND.

In the early days of the industry florists who planted even a few roses in their greenhouses were accustomed to propagate their own stock. Today it is different; all the smaller florists and even some of the largest forcers of roses now buy their plants from specialists instead of propagating the stock themselves. The result is that there almost always is a strong demand for young rose plants, both grafted and own-root. Like this:

We certainly received good results from the ad we had in The Review.—A. N. Nielsen, Inc., Jesse P. Robinson, Secretary, Pana, Ill., June 9, 1922.

If you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising, you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Graduations and weddings disposed of a great deal of stock last week. All of the high schools closed, and each school had a large graduating class. The custom of sending flowers to the graduates seems to be returning to favor increasingly. The girls carried bouquets and the boys wore boutonnières. The market was short on roses, due to the heavy demand. Everything in the way of white roses is being used for wedding work. Stock that would ordinarily have been discarded was used willingly. Valley and orchids have been in great demand this month. Carnations are plentiful and extremely good. Garden flowers of all kinds are good and plentiful.

Various Notes.

W. A. Rowe, president of the Missouri State Florists' Association, is appealing to all the members of the association to make the association second to none. He is corresponding with all the Missouri florists, requesting that they attend the annual meeting of the association, which will be held in conjunction with the St. Louis fall flower show, the week of November 7. The exact date of this meeting has not yet been announced. The day of the meeting will be known as Missouri state day. President Rowe is also reminding the members that the S. A. F. meeting is to be held in Kansas City in August, and asks that they come and bring their families. William Wade, of this city, is secretary of the state association.

R. L. Isherwood, of Chillicothe and Pleasant Hill, was in the city last week.

Glenn K. Parker, of the Stuppy Supply Co., spent a day in St. Joseph, Mo., last week.

Thomas Shields, of the Rosedale Rose Gardens, St. Louis, Mo., attended the Holstein dealers' convention here the week of June 5. He found time between sessions to call upon some of the florists. Mr. Shields raises and sells fine cattle as a side line.

Miss Mary Jones and Everett Bennett were married Saturday evening, June 3. Mr. Bennett is a salesman for the W. L. Rock Flower Co.

Peter Bisset, plant introducer and expert nurseryman for the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., was in the city Wednesday, June 7. He called upon Samuel Murray. Mr. Murray and A. Newell, in Mr. Newell's motor car, drove Mr. Bisset about the city. He was surprised at the sight of the beautiful homes here and the planning and planting of their grounds. This was Mr. Bisset's first visit to Kansas City. He said that it was a revelation to him.

John Stevens is cutting some of the finest gladioli ever seen here. His Pendleton and Schwaben are striking in color and size of bloom. He allows the flowers to open before cutting. Mr. Stevens has grown some apricot shade hybrid gladioli for Samuel Murray. These are used effectively in baskets.

Miss Faulkner, of the Apollo Flower Shop, made the bouquets for the graduates of St. Vincent's academy and the Cathedral school. St. Vincent's girls carried shower bouquets of Butterfly roses, sweet peas and gypsophylas.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held Thursday evening, June 8, in the office of the Stuppy Supply Co. The meeting was called for the purpose of considering the "park and plan" celebration, June 14 to 17. The flower parade June 16 will be one of the main features of the celebration. Much of the success of this will depend upon the florists. T. J. Noll, president of the club, told of the arrangements made by the committee of which he, Glenn K. Parker and W. L. Rock are members. He reported that 121 cars had already been entered, and it was expected to have between 400 and 500 in line. No advertising of any kind will be permitted in the parade. A small space for the name of the entrant will be allowed on the side of each car. Besides the prize of $100, which the club has offered, M. E. Chandler, W. L. Rock and W. J. Barnes offered prizes of $35 each and other members said that they would give prizes. The club will have a float in the parade.

Dr. B. W. Murphy and Thomas Best, of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo., were in the city June 10.

Saul Rosenfeld, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, called on the trade June 9 and 10. J. E. K.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The opening of the new Providence-Biltmore hotel, nineteen stories high and containing 600 rooms and costing more than $5,000,000, last week exceeded any social event ever held in this city, and two large gatherings and numerous smaller ones combined to make the flower business here by long odds the biggest ever experienced in any week at this season of the year by Providence florists. The demands were so great that Boston and New York were liberally called upon, while a number of large pieces came direct from those cities from friends of the management. More than 15,000 roses were used on the opening night for tables, ball room and guest rooms, bouquets being placed in each of the 600 rooms, while the lobbies, foyers and halls were all graced by large baskets, vases and designs.

The flower store in the Providence-Biltmore hotel has been leased by Reuben Popkin, who conducts the flower store at Washington and Union streets under the name of Smith the Florist, and will be one of the handsomest in this city. Mr. Popkin had charge of the decorations for the opening night, but practically all of the downtown stores had liberal patronage for the occasion.

Notwithstanding the season of outdoor flowers, business has been exceptionally good on weddings, graduations, commencements and general work, with considerable funeral work of more than usual pretensions.

William Doel, of Pascoag, was a business visitor in the city last week.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe had the decorations and flowers for the dinner and ball of the Aero Club of Rhode Island at the Biltmore Wednesday evening, June 7.

T. J. Johnston & Co. had the table decorations for the luncheon and bridge party given at the Biltmore Thursday afternoon, June 8, by Mrs. Martin S. Budlong to the ladies who were active in the recent Homeopathic hospital drive.

James J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, was a business caller upon the trade here last week.

Fred Davis, of the Riverside Greenhouses, Pawtucket, who has been under the weather for some time, is improving.

F. Macrae's Sons, Smith street, are beginning to pick a fine crop of indoor tomatoes, which are bringing top prices. They are picking several hundred pounds daily.

A son of Cornelius Sullivan, foreman at the O'Connor greenhouses, has taken over the Johnston Bros. greenhouses, on Hope street, and will conduct them.

W. A. Bowers & Co. report an unusually good business for this season of the year.

Willis S. Pino and family have taken up their residence for the summer at their country home, at Barrington beach, overlooking Narragansett bay.

J. A. Champlin, landscaper, 71 Lyon street, Pawtucket, has been unusually busy this spring and has the largest number of estates under care in his experience.

Ed. Brooke, of T. J. Johnston & Co., has taken up his summer residence at his seashore estate, at Cedar Tree Point, on Greenwich bay. He has done considerable landscape work in the vicinity and transformed it into one of the beauty spots along the shore.

The Colonial Flower Shoppe has just added a new automobile to its equipment. W. H. M.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The market was in a sadly depressed condition last week, but the situation seems to have been due solely to unfavorable weather and there appears to be no indication that the flower business as a whole is changing for the worse; indeed, there are those in the market who maintain that more flowers were sold last week than in any other first week in June.

It is seldom that the weather is so warm early in June as was the case last week. For seven consecutive days the temperature was much above normal. There were days on which the shade temperature was 90 degrees and there were nights not below 70 degrees. Such heat would naturally be expected to affect the demand, but it would have a still greater effect under glass, where temperatures of 115 degrees were not uncommon. The heat forced out huge quantities of stock, and any market, no matter how active the demand, would have been overloaded. Of course the quality of stock deteriorated with each successive day of heat, until at the end of the week the large quantities of flowers in the market afforded only moderate supplies of strictly first-class flowers. Again this brought about a condition difficult for the wholesalers. It necessitated endless work in grading to get out stock for shipment. By the end of the week there were fair prices for anything that measured up to the standard required for shipping, but what was left could only be jobbed off to department stores and through other channels outside the regular trade.

There has been an excellent shipping demand thus far in June. The call has been largely for flowers for weddings and school closings. This means that specialties have been in request. Valley and cattleyas have been wanted for weddings. White and yellow and red roses have been in request to make up class colors. It has not been easy to fill all these special orders, even though the market was full of pink roses, white carnations, Easter lilies and peonies.

OUR FLOWERS ARE SECOND TO NONE

The rose supply is now on the down grade. Clear weather conditions, coupled with seasonable replanting and resting operations, have reduced the cut. Flowers are of summer size, but of improved quality.

The heat no doubt hastened the end of the carnation season. There was considerable stock lost last week and average prices were so low that growers soon will start throwing out their poorest houses and the supply probably will go down rapidly, until only a few good houses are being carried along.

A few peonies come straggling in from the north, but practically all the cut either has been moved or is in storage. The result is that prices have stiffened for all good flowers, whereas anything coming out of storage in doubtful condition is sold over the counter for what it will bring. It is the general opinion that good peonies will now be good property, at least for a couple of weeks. Gladioli are much more abundant. It is said the local outdoor crops will be ready before the end of June. There are many fine flowers coming from those who planted under glass and quantities of southern outdoor gladioli are received each day. They have not sold at all well during the time of the glutted market, but should do better now. Sweet peas have been about finished under glass; last week's high heat was too much for them. There are too many Easter lilies. Larkspur, gaillardias and other outdoor flowers are plentiful and good.

The new ferns have not come along as fast as was expected, but neither have those who had cold storage stock been able to sell out as quickly as they expected. Consequently the fern market is in an unsettled condition. Much of the stock is of poor quality.

Said and Done.

Paul R. Klingsporn likes the following, found by him in the joke column of a local daily:

The speedometer said sixty miles an hour.
The constable said it was ninety.
The natives said it was a crime.
He said it was the life.
His friends said it with flowers.

In a feature film at the picture houses this week the vivacious star remarks in a subtitle: "You can't say it with wall-flowers."

The funeral of W. H. Hilton, June 8, was largely attended, several of his old associates in the business being present. There were many flowers.

The Briggs Floral Co. has opened its new store at 1505 East Fifty-third street. It is one of the best locations in town, with half a dozen of the big south side family hotels nearer to it than to any other flower store. There is a wide display window and a handsome showing is maintained in it.

W. J. Smyth and Mrs. Smyth will start June 19 on an automobile trip to Yellowstone park and other points west. The Pierce-Arrow has been put in first-class condition for the journey.

Walter Johnson, of the Bassett & Washburn store staff, has been laid up for several days by rose thorn poisoning in one of his thumbs.

Mrs. A. L. Randall is on the sick list. The Chicago Flower Growers' Association filled an order for 75,000 carnations for delivery at 5 a. m., June 11, for the Jewish tag day, without calling in stock from its growers or buying anything on the market.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. has decided to remove a considerable part of the old range of greenhouses from Aldine and North Halsted streets to the Edgebrook establishment, where reerection will give a much needed increase in facilities.

Edgar F. Winterson will celebrate another anniversary next Wednesday. He was born June 21, 1869. The spring months have been spent in work in the nursery at Highland Park and it has taken fifteen pounds off his weight.

H. N. Booth, western manager of the United States Radiator Co., has been elected president and treasurer of the John C. Moninger Co. James C. Walsh and W. A. Davis, also members of the creditors' committee now in charge of the Moninger affairs, have been elected vice-president and secretary, respect-

O'Leary Florist, at 369 East Forty-seventh street, draws much business from transients, who are attracted by the display windows on two sides of the store. Cut flowers and plants are arranged with particular taste, making these windows well worth looking into. The firm reports good, steady business.

It is reported that George Falsom, formerly with the E. Wienhoeber Co., and later with Walter Adams, is preparing to start in business on his own account in a residence on Rush street, now being remodeled for business purposes.

Johnson's Twin Six. This week they are at the Grand Rapids furniture show.

Charles Elliott, of Park Ridge, whose seedling sweet peas were awarded certificates of merit at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club June 8, won a certificate of horticultural skill on a similar exhibit of sweet peas at a show of the North Shore Horticultural Society at Lake Forest June 12.

Two worthy Texans are with us this week, J. J. Wood, of Flowerland, and Mr. Drumm, of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co., both of Fort Worth. A few weeks ago Mr. Drumm's concern was burned out and one of his errands is the arrangement for a new set of fixtures. While he is at it he intends to fit up one of the most up-to-date flower stores in his state.

J. C. Rutenschroer, florist and dahlia specialist at Price Hill, Cincinnati, has been in town several days, visiting friends and introducing some of his inventions, two of which seem specially promising. He has a little carrier for a ball of string with knife attachment with which growers tying up plants or bunching flowers can save time and work. A bracket for hanging baskets appeals to those who fill them as likely to prove a good seller.

C. E. Gullett, of Gullett & Sons, Lincoln, Ill., was in Chicago for a couple of days this week. He reports that his firm has had a big spring season, April and May having shown good increases over last year in spite of the lower prices this season.

Emil E. Mesenbrink, of Libertyville, Ill., was in town June 13. He has been cutting good stock this spring and has had an excellent season.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Summer conditions have settled upon the New York cut flower market with a vengeance. Last week's business was the worst experienced for a long time, and high temperatures coming in the last two days of it made poor business much worse. With the exception, possibly, of American Beauty roses and one or two other items, prices of cut flowers went to pieces, and there is little likelihood of better conditions at this writing. June usually is a fairly good month, with commencements and other functions which use up considerable quantities of flowers, and weddings usually produce a fair demand for stock. But this year such especial demand is hardly felt. The supply of flowers is enormous in comparison with the demand, but it would not be fair to say that the light business was due to this, as it is anything but a rare condition at this time of year.

Roses are in large supply, and mostly of hot weather quality. American Beauty is plentiful and is one of the few things that maintain quotations of a week or two ago, $15 to $40 per hundred for specials being still the price range. Scott Key also holds up at $10 to $40 per hundred. Hybrid teas are abundant and are moving slowly within a price range of 50 cents to $6 per hundred; this is to an extent explained by the arrival of large quantities of Gen. Jacqueminot and other outdoor roses adaptable to decorative requirements.

Carnations are plentiful, and arrivals are hard to move. The top price for the general run of fancies is $2 per hundred. A few selected flowers bring $3 and by comparison are worth the difference.

Cattleyas are in large supply, but the demand for them is so small that the left-over stock of a day seriously handicaps the sales of the morrow; consequently clean-ups at any price are common. The range of prices for fresh stock is about 35 to 75 cents per flower, with selected flowers at as much as $1.

White lilies are in small supply, but move slowly at $10 to $12 per hundred, and are not notable for quality. Auratum and Madonna lilies are appearing and meet a moderate demand. Lilies of the valley are rather overplentiful, and the price range is down to $1 to $5 per hundred sprays.

There is a wide choice in miscellaneous flowers, which include Delphinium Belladonna at three bunches for a dollar, sweet williams at five bunches for the same amount, gypsophila at 5

Various Notes.

Trepel, Inc., now operating a chain of twenty-five flower stores, is fitting up a handsome new store on Fulton street, Jamaica, at One Hundred and Sixty-fourth street, into which the firm will move from the present store, nearly opposite. The new store has large frontages on both streets. Jack Trepel and a force were busy all Saturday night, June 10, at their depot in the Eighteenth street flower market.

The flower show committee of the New York Florists' Club met Monday afternoon, June 12, at Secretary Young's office to discuss the possibility of promoting a spring flower show for 1923. The committee afterwards went into joint session with the committee of the Horticultural Society of New York.

A special lilac garden is being laid out in Bronx park, along the Pelham parkway margin of the southern boundary of the New York Botanical Garden, east of the Mansion approach entrance. A large collection of lilacs will be included.

As an aftermath of the premiere of the Ziegfeld "Follies" at the New Amsterdam theater, patients in ten hospitals received enormous loads of flowers, which were dispatched to the institutions by F. Ziegfeld, Jr., the producer. The stars of the "Follies" this year received $20,000 worth of flowers, according to newspaper report, and the big warehouse of the theater, used for storing theatrical scenery, was filled with them.

July 13 and 14 the Oklahoma State Florists' Association will hold its second annual meeting in the convention hall at Tulsa. The trade displays will be in the same building as the meeting; the structure is within walking distance of the center of the city.

Though the program for the meeting has not yet been completed, it is expected to include addresses by members of the trade of national repute, whose views will be of interest to the large attendance expected. The entertainment includes a barbecue at Sand Springs park, seven miles from Tulsa, which is reached by a paved road and electric cars.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The extreme heat, coming so early, had a far-reaching effect on the market. Flowers are most plentiful; outdoor flowers are especially so, favored by an unusual growing season. Really choice flowers of varieties and quality suitable for weddings and for commencements are in demand at good prices. All other flowers sell more cheaply than usual at this season. The volume of business for the week was about equal to that of last year for the same week, with something like one-half more flowers in the market.

Beauties, fine roses, orchids, valley and outdoor sweet peas, when good, are in demand. Other flowers sell slowly. There is much soft stock that is a source of worry and loss.

Peonies are coming out of cold storage in only fair condition. Some are all right, but others give trouble. Most of the indoor sweet peas have ceased to give pleasure. Late as it is, callas and snapdragons are still holding on. Larkspur is extremely fine, plentiful and quite cheap. Outdoor flowers are coming in by the wagonload.

Lancaster to Riverton.

From Lancaster, Pa., to Riverton, N. J., there is something like 150 miles, but that was not too much for a day's outing for fifty Lancastrians. Thursday, June 8, the Lancaster Florists' Club, ladies and men, in ten motors started dark and early. Their first stop was at Strafford, where they were met by Edwin J. Fancourt, Alvah R. Jones, Clarence U. Liggit and Raymond I. Mayhew, in two cars, and visited Alfred M. Campbell's Strafford Flower Farm. They then crossed the Delaware into New Jersey and visited the large establishment of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., at Riverton and Riverview, where they spent several hours. Returning, some of the party stopped in Philadelphia. It was a wondrous and long-to-be-remembered day.

The Mothers' Day Report.

The Mothers' day advertising campaign will rank as one of the achievements of the present administration. In exactly ten days after the committee had been appointed, the work was successfully completed. The report of the chairman of the committee, Edward Reid, given at the June meeting of the club, was a model; $1,700 had been subscribed, $1,500 paid in; $1,500 expended on the various forms of advertising. No regrets; no explanations; everyone felt that the work had been well done.

Baseball.

A special meeting of those interested in forming a florists' baseball league was held in the Pennock building Monday afternoon, June 12. Chairman Wal-

Should Wholesalers Retail?

There is war in the retail camp. There is wholesaling retailing around. It sounds like an Irish bull, but that is exactly what it is. There are flagrant cases of wholesalers who have taken in large retail orders which their customers, the retailers, wanted. Is it fair?

The retailers put the case in this way: Is it good business for a wholesaler to compete with his own customers for their customers? Certainly not.

The wholesalers answer in this way: We do not want your customers; we do not depend on them for an outlet for our stock or for financial support, but there are times when our friends bring us orders that we cannot refuse.

Various Notes.

H. H. Battles returned from abroad June 7. He was quicker than a "bander snatch."

J. Otto Thilow spoke before the Orange Garden Club in the home of Thomas A. Edison, Orange, N. J., June 12.

E. P. Klinger, who has made so fine a record as head of the credit department of the Leo Niessen Co., accepted a similar position with H. Bayersdorfer & Co., June 1.

Miss Scott, the charming bookkeeper of Berger Bros., was married June 6—not to one of ourselves, but to a rank outsider. Happily, by a prenuptial arrangement, the young lady continues to brighten the floral world for the nonce.

William R. Gibson has resigned his position with the Virginia Flower Shop.

Cornelius van der Breggen, of the Robert Craig Co., sailed on the Noordam for Rotterdam, June 10. Mrs. Van and their two children accompanied him. They expect to return in August.

Fred Berger is sending Berger Bros. a fine assortment of outdoor flowers—delphiniums, annual larkspur, sweet williams, candytuft and gypsophila. Mr. Berger's greenhouses are ready for glazing.

The friends of George Aeugle, the popular manager of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co., missed him June 10. Mr. Aeugle felt unwell June 8, but pluckily continued at his work. June 10, an exceedingly hot day, he felt so badly that his friend, A. B. Cartledge, took him home. It is thought a few days' rest will restore Mr. Aeugle to health.

Joseph Cousins, of the Joseph Heacock Co., is unfortunately in the grip of his old enemy, muscular rheumatism.

William C. Lynch reports that the Philadelphia Growers' Cut Flower Market is receiving peonies from New York state.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The period between June 3 and June 9 proved to be one of the most trying ever experienced by the wholesale markets in June. Maximum temperatures of from 86 degrees to 94 degrees ruled each day and minimums were unusually high. The intense heat, while it did not completely paralyze the flower trade, gave it a hard blow, from which it is now slowly recovering, with the arrival of cooler weather. The hot wave was a most unusual one for so early in the season and, being so prolonged, it rushed along and spoiled many flowers which growers and retailers were depending on for decorative work later in the month. Up to June 3 scarcely a local peony had appeared. One week later the bulk of the crop had passed; all of the singles and most of the doubles had disappeared. Usually the peony crop remains with us about three weeks. Values sank low and even now they are scarcely quotable, either for peonies or any other flowers. Carnations and roses suffered badly. White roses, such as they were, had a fair call for wedding work. Sweet peas under glass were practically ruined by the intense heat, but a few nice outdoor ones are now arriving and are acceptable.

No one seemed to want any of the snapdragons and other miscellaneous flowers offered. Gladioli streamed in, but sales on these were extremely sluggish. Gypsophila, which has been a great seller all spring, was almost cooked by the heat. Outdoor delphiniums are now coming in freely, and digitalis and other hardy flowers prove acceptable, with the gradual passing of greenhouse flowers. Hardy roses do not cut a large figure in the local market, demand, seemed to sell fairly well in spite of the heat. It has been the greatest season on record for growers of these plants.

Various Notes.

A terrific electrical storm caused tremendous damage in Massachusetts on the afternoon of June 11. Hailstones of large size fell in many places and great damage was done to the roofs of greenhouses and garden crops, particularly in Arlington, Belmont, Scituate, Weymouth, Concord, Cambridge and Somerville. Practically all of the outdoor flowers were entirely ruined. The storm nearly ended the peony season, which has been a short and unprofitable one.

The hail on the afternoon of June 11 caused much destruction among the greenhouse establishments in the vicinity of Boston. Peirce Bros., at Waltham, suffered a loss of more than $4,000. Thomas Roland sustained heavy damages at his Revere houses. Among the others whose ranges the storm damaged severely were Wollrath & Sons, the W. W. Edgar Co., Frank Edgar, Charles Evans and Osgood Bros.

Visitors last week included W. J. Lobjoit, comptroller of horticulture for Great Britain and a delegate to the quarantine conference at Washington May 15. Mr. Lobjoit looked over the Arnold Arboretum and other local points of horticultural interest. Other callers were Dr. Van Slogteren and Dr. Van Poeteren, of Holland.

Alexander P. Dewar, of the R. & J. Farquhar Co., states that the demand for evergreens and other nursery stock has been remarkable this season, and some lines are so much reduced that there is a question where we are going to get material to plant the hundreds of new residences being built. The building boom will surely bring a tremendous demand for nursery stock next fall and spring.

Eugene M. Naukam, organizing secretary of the New England Flower Growers' Association, who was engaged to spend three months here organizing the growers, left this week to accept a responsible position in Buffalo. Mr. Naukam made many friends during his short stay here, who wish him well in his new field. He is succeeded by George C. Moyse.

Albert Jay, formerly in charge of the H. C. Frick estate at Pride's, Mass., and later of the Coolidge estate, Magnolia, Mass., has purchased from Mrs. Frank L. Ramsey her florists' establishment at Stoughton, Mass. There are 5,000 feet of glass, two and one-half acres of land and convenient buildings.

Ladies' night at the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, June 20, should attract a record attendance, on account of the splendid entertainment which has been secured by J. C. Harris for the occasion. In addition to the noted Swedish Glee Club of twenty-five voices, there will be a symphony orchestra, a violinist and several other noted instrumentalists and soloists. All members attending will have a rare treat. The stage will be elaborately decorated for the occasion. An orchestra will furnish music for dancing after a collation has been served.

At Penn's last week unusual activity prevailed, in spite of the heat, owing to the great number of wedding and funeral orders to be filled. More wedding orders have been booked for June than for the same month of any previous year.

The annual peony show at Horticultural hall, June 17 and 18, will, it is feared, be smaller than usual, as the intense heat has rushed the crop along so fast. It is extremely difficult to select dates for these early shows months in advance, when our erratic climatic conditions are considered. Some years we have no peonies open by June 17. Prospects for the holding of a rose, sweet pea and strawberry show, June 24 and 25, are good. The cooperation of the

The W. W. Edgar Co. has a splendid lot of some 10,000 cyclamens this season; many are already in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. Over 30,000 winter-flowering begonias have been potted so far, and the demand for these is in excess of the supply. Melior is the favorite variety. Demand for bedding plants has broken all records this season and stocks are now largely exhausted.

Carbone had the decorations, which were carried out in exquisite taste, for the wedding of Miss Janice Liggett, daughter of Louis K. Liggett, head of the Liggett drug stores and other corporations, and Clarke T. Baldwin, at the First church, Newton, Mass., June 10. This firm also carried out the decorations at the home.

Fred E. Palmer has an annual celebration June 15, his birthday falling on that day. This year he had another celebration, June 11, in honor of his becoming a grandfather, and has a springiness of step characteristic of him while on some of the winter hikes of the Appalachian Mountain Club.

Some welcome rains have come, in the way of thunder storms, which were badly needed after the excessive heat from which vegetation has been suffering of late.

Rhododendrons are the finest of broad-leaved flowering evergreens and are at their height this year early in June. They are extensively planted in and around Boston and are flowering now with unusual freedom. Taking an automobile tour through Brookline, Chestnut Hill, Jamaica Plain, Wellesley, Milton and Cedarville, the writer was impressed with the numerous grand displays of rhododendrons and azaleas, and it was refreshing to note how many automobiles slackened speed or stopped entirely, the better to drink in the glorious displays.

B. F. Letson, of Carbone's, reports numerous large wedding orders for the present month, which will help to keep the large staff busy. The past season has been the best in the firm's history and at present, in addition to flowers and plants, great numbers of garden accessories are being sold.

Wollrath & Sons, of Waltham, have an unusually fine lot of gloxinias this season, which are in good demand at all the better-class retail stores.

The Symphony Flower Shop, on Huntingdon avenue, opposite Horticultural hall and the Christian Science temple, is doing a nice and growing business. A short time ago a store located so far from the center of the city was considered out of the question, but at this stand there is a good business in summer as well as winter, and the wide-awake young men, trained with Wax Bros., Henry Penn and other first-class retailers, are making good.

William R. Nicholson grows delphiniums finely under glass. He also has one entire field of them now beginning to flower in the open. They include some beautiful varieties in many charming shades of blue.

A final decision regarding the site for the new wholesale flower market is expected within a few days. The number of sites has been boiled down to two.

TORONTO, ONT.

The Market.

Business was good last week for the florists, with the exception of those in the areas where the street railways have the streets torn up, preventing motor traffic. There have been many weddings and some of these have been large ones, necessitating the decoration of both church and home.

A large number of hospital and college graduation exercises have taken place, requiring large quantities of flowers. Bouquets for these occasions were large and beautiful. The processions of the successful young ladies at the various institutions have been great floral displays.

Many garden flowers are now available, such as peonies, and some of the peony gardens are extensive and beautiful. Garden valley is over and there is a great demand for the greenhouse valley. There was a temporary shortage, which is now over.

Carnations are showing the effects of the heat, the blooms being small in size. For the most part, however, there is a plentiful supply of flowers to meet the demand.

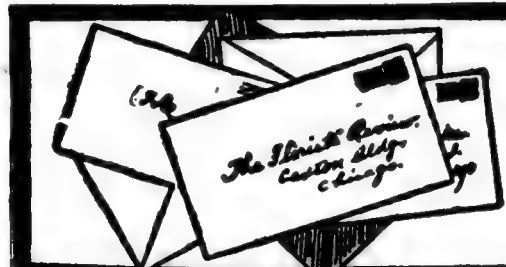

Various Notes.

Harry Brant has been calling on the trade, and finds that florists, generally, are doing a big business. He said that the florists' trade was one business which was growing.

The Toronto Horticultural Society held a successful flower show with special exhibits of irises at the Jenkins Art Galleries, June 8 and 9. J. J. H.

Benton, Ill.—The Clayton Flower Shop is now located in the room where the Max Brown fire occurred recently. This location is convenient and makes for a better display of the stock.

South Bend, Ind.—The firm formerly operating under the name of the Beyer Floral Shop, 108 East Jefferson boulevard, has changed its name and location and is now doing business at 225 North Michigan street under the name of Beyer & Weber. The owner, W. R. Beyer, has taken a partner, F. W. Weber, into business with him. Mr. Weber was formerly with the Williams Floral Co. and is not unknown in the trade. Papers of incorporation will be drawn up soon.

Albany, Ore.—The greenhouse on South Buckeye street, which has been owned and operated by Mrs. Josephine Bitler for about fifteen years, has been sold to W. D. Bruner, who recently came to this city with his family from North Manchester. The consideration was $16,000.

SANTA CRUZ FLOWER FAIR.

The second annual flower fair under the auspices of the San Lorenzo Improvement Association, Santa Cruz, Cal., was held June 1 to 3. Owing to unforeseen circumstances, the fair had been delayed three weeks; consequently, roses were past their best. Robert Barson, of the Riverside hotel, and A. J. Cook secured all honors. Sweet peas were well shown by many exhibitors.

Six tables of wild flowers, all correctly named, were shown by as many schools; these were an object of interest to all visitors. One of the decorations was a tub of Azalea occidentalis cut in 6-foot lengths, an object of great beauty, which lasted three days. This flower is considered too fugitive for florists' use.

Some well grown pots of Statice Suworowii were shown by George Kirby, of Hotel Casa del Ray. A fine specimen of Strelitzia Reginae was grown by Mr. Wilkinson, of City Hall Garden. The best vase of gladioli, Prince of Wales, was shown by Mrs. Alma V. Rovnianek.

Trade exhibits were made by Robert O. Lincoln, Los Robles Gardens; W. L. Gordon, Mrs. Hattie A. Harrison, E. D. Rogers and Mr. Barnhill.

Laura E. Welker, Sec'y.

PROTECTION WANTED.

We have a first-class and thoroughly modern flower shop here at Bisbee, Ariz., and handle cut flowers the year around, which we purchase from Los Angeles wholesale florists. We take the risk entailed in being located so far from our market supply. We take the bad days with the good days, just as they happen to come in this business in a small locality. We have no fear of legitimate competition, as we are capable of handling the better trade in all kinds of floral work, although we have the only flower shop in this district. We just established this modern flower shop last December, but we have been handling cut flowers from Los Angeles and from the same shipper there for over three years.

In this town is a large company store of the Phelps Dodge Mercantile Co. This mining company also has a store in Lowell and one in Warren, both small towns, Lowell being two miles from Bisbee, and Warren being two miles from Lowell, with Bisbee, Lowell and Warren comprising what is known as the Warren district. In none of their stores have these people a cut flower department, but on our special days—Thanksgiving day, Christmas, Easter, Mothers' day and Memorial day—this company sends to Los Angeles wholesale florists and ships in several hundred dozen carnations, which they sell at cost or below cost. They only order carnations each time, and they know nothing about the flower business at all.

On these special florists' days, when we have a chance to do a good business and make a little money to offset the slack business on other days, they cut our throat in this manner for the sake of drawing people to their store. It not only causes us losses (while our brother florists all over the country are taking a nice gain for the special occasion), but it creates a lack of confidence in us on the part of the flower-buying public—our customers. After this company sold out of carnations May 13, people came to us and expected us to sell them carnations at 25 cents per dozen, too, when they cost us more than that price in Los Angeles, not counting the heavy express charges to Bisbee. It is quite obvious that this company lost money in selling these carnations at 25 cents per dozen, but they got some cheap advertising at the expense of our business and the ruination of the cut flower business in general.

When the people called at our shop and wanted to buy carnations for 25 cents per dozen and we told them that we could not sell them for less than 75 cents per dozen, some of them actually got angry at us and walked out of our shop. This method of the mining company in sacrificing and ruining the flower business here, after we have worked hard to elevate it to its present level, is certainly most unfair to us as exclusive florists. If there is any protection to be had at all, we want it.

The best method of preventing this is the coöperation of the Los Angeles wholesale florists in refusing to quote the company prices or to sell to the company at all. The wholesale florists of Los Angeles, as a whole, would lose little by so doing, as this company only orders about five times a year, while we get in several shipments each week of the year. We always sell flowers to our customers here on a 100 per cent margin and take our total expense and loss out of that. Therefore, we do the best we can for the flower-buying public here. We are now selling carnations at 60 cents per dozen, which is the best we can do and still stay in business.

We would suggest that the wholesale florists of Los Angeles, should this Bisee company write for quotations or flowers, reply that the company is not entitled to wholesale prices and cannot be supplied with flowers by the wholesale florists. The Floral Shop.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

There is little change since last week with regard to stock, excepting that gladioli are even more plentiful and many fine flowers are wasted. Never in the history of the market here has there been so large a supply, with so little business; the price has gone glimmering. Other good stock sells well. Roses that are in good shape are in good demand, but there is a considerable amount of second-rate stock on the market, which does not sell well. Valley is in fine shape and demand.

prominence lately, including C. Winsel, our local seedsman and vice-consul for Belgium. Mr. Winsel had his picture "took" while presenting a bronze medal from King Albert of Belgium to President Stephens of the Rotary Club. The medal was in appreciation of the club's efforts on behalf of Belgium in 1918. Roy F. Wilcox also has his genial features well displayed in the local papers as chairman of the bands and music committee. A. F. Borden was probably going too fast for the photographers to catch him. Two prominent members of the trade from Phoenix, Ariz., graced the occasion—C. E. Morton and J. R. Tice, who grow the fine outdoor roses near the Arizona city.

Angelo Tassano and his brother, Dominic, were hosts to a party of about 200 members of the trade at a barbecue at the Artesia, Cal., nursery June 4. This was a final "get-together" occasion before the Tassano brothers and their wives and families sailed for Italy. Everyone who was there expressed himself as delighted with the hearty welcome and good time afforded; all joined in wishing the boys a safe and pleasant visit to their home country and a speedy return.

C. A. Cole, of Ventura, Cal., was visiting the market last week. Mr. Cole says that his father, so long well known as a grower of callas, still takes an interest in the business, though not actively engaged in it. The firm is now growing freesias in quantity, as well as callas.

Gustave Swenson has opened a retail store at 1344 Colorado street, Eagle Rock. He is bringing in good Ulrich Brunner roses to the market and still grows a good deal of his own stock for the store.

F. Rosaia, of Seattle, Wash., was visiting the Howard & Smith nurseries and other places last week.

Walter Armacost & Co. are in with a magnificent cut of valley for the June brides. Another big consignment of baskets is in.

The Dostal-Wolters Flower Shop reports excellent business, with prospects for school work good.

Frank Warner, of Inglewood, has a limited number of fine new Gladiolus Marshall Foch, but, while he shows it around the market, the entire cut is

The Market.

The market was flooded with stock last week, but the demand was light. It is expected that next week will see a marked revival of local business on account of the Shriners' convention. Carnations and roses were plentiful. Rambler roses in pots seem to be the only thing in the line of roses on which the price was kept up. Carnations were a drug on the market. The supply of peonies was limited and, in consequence, brought satisfactory prices. A large crop of delphiniums arrived. There were plenty of large and small gladioli. Sweet peas, marigolds, gillyflowers, cornflowers, sweet williams, poppies and pansies were plentiful, though sweet peas brought the best prices. Large crops of strawflowers arrived and there were plenty of lilies of the valley and orchids to meet all demands.

George H. Starr, nurseryman and florist of Turlock, Cal., has been visiting the city to dispose of his stock of immortelles. "I am experimenting with fifteen kinds of statice," he said. "I have half an acre of double gypsophila, which is especially satisfactory. It seems to me that our climate and soil are well suited to the growth of the statice, judging from this year's crops." Stanislaus county has bonded itself and built the great Don Pedro dam, one of the largest dams in the world. Some of the power companies are now making a great campaign to obtain control of this bountiful source of irrigation, as well as of other great California water enterprises built by the people. Mr. Starr is a firm believer in letting the county, or the cities of Modesto and Turlock, handle their own water problems. "We have built this great enterprise and we ought to control it," he said. "All-the-year-round irrigation will be ours if we control our dam."

abundance of snapdragons. Roses sold well and were of good quality. A few shipments came in from California and some came through in poor condition. Some fine gladioli and stocks in pink and lavender were sold at good prices. The market offered ample outside flowers Monday before Memorial day; on account of hot weather this became of poor quality.

Various Notes.

Rahn & Herbert, of Clackamas, Ore., report an increase in the bedding plant line.

The Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. reports a large increase in bedding plant business this season. In geraniums S. A. Nutt is the favorite with this firm, especially for baskets and boxes.

The Holden Floral Co. is bringing in fine Gladiolus Mrs. Pendleton.

Fred M. Gower, formerly with the Holden Floral Co., has been added to the force of the Wilson-Crout-Gehr Co. Clarke Bros. are cutting fine peonies for their retail store. This firm reports a satisfactory spring business.

The Smith Flower Shop is showing some gladioli in the store. The firm says that business is up to expectations.

The Van Kirk Floral Co. has begun refilling its place with young carnation stock, and will plant heavily the Chinook variety, which is a favorite with this company. N. V. H.

The Market.

There was fair trade activity last week, without any startling changes in the supply. Weather conditions are making for better outdoor flowers, and this has brought the usual summer increase in the number of growers offering stock. "This is one of the chief reasons we are forced to get higher prices for our flowers at holiday times," says one of the older-established growers here. "We must collect enough on those days to care for the lean summer period, when our prices of production are undercut by part-time growers. It is my opinion that one of the biggest moves in the direction of more reasonable prices to the public for flower holidays is going to be some sort of action on the retailers' part to see that the regular growers' stock is taken in the summer before anything else is purchased.

There has been a good increase in the cut of roses, and the stock coming to hand is of fine quality. Carnations are making a better showing, and the run of gladioli for this year exceeds anything previously grown by local parties, according to most retailers. Irises have been popular with buyers and there is more than enough of a demand to clean up stocks as fast as they are offered. Peonies are also selling more freely this year, and the larger shops report a good movement on rhododendrons.

The cut of orchids is beginning to show an increase, which is a good thing, with the run of June weddings in sight, while outside lily of the valley is getting pretty well out. However, there is a sufficient supply of greenhouse offerings to offset this condition.

Various Notes.

Offerings of outdoor stock grown by himself have been increasing steadily for Henry Morgan, but business at this shop has more than kept pace with the increase.

The Seattle Fern & Moss Co. reports business holding up for the summer months in better shape than in previous years, with the shipping demand for ferns a big factor.

The Woodlawn Flower Shop held a special sale last week on pottery and various European novelty flower holders, grouping these attractively in the main show window with a background of Scotch broom. The results secured from this intensive effort more than proved that the public will buy pottery

IDEA FOR THE WINDOW.

Many illustrations in the pages of The Review have an especial value in their appropriateness. This is particularly true in the special numbers, such as the Mothers' day number, the Memorial day number, etc. Jensen Bros., 3335 Lincoln avenue, Chicago, realizing that many of these illustrations appeal to the public, have formed the plan of posting the illustrations at one side of the display window. For instance, this firm posted the brides' and bridesmaids' pictures shown in the June bride number, June 1, and it attracted many to the windows.

JOGGING THE PUBLIC'S MIND.

"Needles and pins; needles and pins; when a man's married, his trouble begins." Let us hope not. But it is as certain as night and day that when a man's married, the anniversaries of that event will take place at regular 365-day intervals. This is interesting to us as florists, because almost all wives like to be remembered on these anniversaries—with flowers. Flowers are always more than welcome from "hubby." And "hubby" is often sincerely glad to present flowers—if he remembers the date. It is to the trade's interest to help him do the remembering or at least to incite the faculties of memory.

The Allied Florists' Association of Chicago has been jogging the minds of the public with advertisements that are, in their seasonal appropriateness, pulling strongly for business. For instance, in the Chicago Tribune for June 5 and the Chicago Evening Post for June 6 a 9-inch, double-column advertisement appeared bearing the picture of a bride and groom standing directly above the following caption: "Whose wedding anniversary comes this month?" Under this in smaller type was printed:

To your good friends, whether it be the first or fiftieth anniversary, add your appreciation to their happiness through a remembrance of flowers.

Flowers will call to mind that greatest of days—their wedding day. Memories will live when you

SAY IT WITH FLOWERS.

At the bottom of the advertisement was the interrogation, "Whose birthday comes in June?" surmounting a calendar for the month of June.

This kind of advertisement keeps the public thinking. When the public thinks, it acts.

NEWELL'S MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial day wreaths are the standby of the New England florist in the business for May 30. But the popularity of the wreath is not confined to the states east of the Hudson river. In fact, it extends clear across the continent. In Kansas City, Mo., it is quite keen. This year Arthur Newell, whose position among the leaders in the trade in that city is well known, found that wreaths made of oak and magnolia foliage, decorated with gray statice and the cape flowers of different colors, were most popular. Such wreaths sold readily at from $5 to $25.

Those who are going to Kansas City next August to attend the S. A. F. convention will be interested in the view on this page of Arthur Newell's store, which is on the southwest corner of Eleventh and McGee streets. In the illustration will be seen the three men who handled the extensive business in wreaths at Memorial day and made up all of them. The gentlemen are Fred L. Horst, Warren T. Spain and Joseph Haley.

COMPUTING RENTS.

Some florists pay so much a month to the landlord as rent for the store they occupy, while others own both ground and building. The latter are apt to deceive themselves in the matter of rent, unless they include in their calculations the same items for which the landlord is responsible in case the property is leased. In order to secure a proper comparison between the rent paid by a florist who leases his store and the rent calculated by a florist who owns his own property, it is necessary to include taxes, repairs, insurance and depreciation on the building, rather than to enter these items under expense headings. Interest on a mortgage on the property should also be entered as a part of the rental and not as interest on capital borrowed. One method of estimating the proper amount to charge as rent when both the land and buildings are owned is to compute a fair allowance for interest on investment in land and buildings used in the operation of the business and to add to this sum the insurance, taxes, repairs and depreciation on this real estate.

In case the florist owns the building he occupies, but ground rent is paid, the amount of the latter should be added to the taxes, repairs, insurance and depreciation on the building and interest on capital invested in the building, to obtain a comparable rent figure.

If a florist leases his store on an arrangement whereby he, and not the landlord, pays taxes, repairs and insurance, the items so paid should be added to the computed rent, since they are payments made in lieu of rent.

GLAD HAND OR COLD SHOULDER?

When a customer enters your store, does he feel welcome or does he experience the sensations of an intruder in a private icebox? Is he made to feel like an individual, a human being, or does he become in your place of business a buying, uninteresting unit, one of the many nonentities that come for the purpose of consuming the supply? Are you interested in him, as well as in the profits resulting from a possible sale? In other words, how do you meet the stranger within your doors?

It is absolutely accurate to say that each retailer has his own personality. It is either a natural gift or a natural hindrance that must be "tuned up" to be a possession of value. If he is a natural-born mixer he is especially fortunate, but there are many persons who from youth to manhood have found it difficult to meet others. But this class of people is quickly recognized and, by just a show of cordiality, the other party will instinctively bridge the gap and matters are soon on a friendly basis.

Then there are still other dealers who do not genuinely realize that the attitude toward the customer has a great deal to do in making the maximum of initial sales and return trade. Their argument is: "Well, we have the stock; it is good stock. If the customer has the money, he can buy this stock and he will be getting value. We believe in letting quality sell itself." And, so philosophizing, they lean against the counter or make a telephone call while the customer is looking about; consequently, the customer buys a bunch of violets and goes down the street into another florist's store and orders the flowers for a wedding.

It is not supposed that the retailer should make himself a "busybody" who meddles in other people's affairs, but a retailer, by making himself pleasant and courteous, can make a friend of a buyer and gain his good will. Business men know the value of good will.

Observations made in a large number of retail stores point to the fact that those who take an interest and help the customer select have always

And A Flower Did It

Coming up from Washington recently, overheard two men in the seat back of me talking about how a little thing will turn defeat into success.

It seems that one of them was a cereal salesman, calling on grocers. His contract called for an average of 10 sales a day in cities of 30 thousand and over.

For two days in Pittsburgh he had made but six sales—3 a day.

He was mighty blue.

About 3 o'clock went past a school just as the children were dismissed.

Before he hardly knew what was happening, two little girls came skipping up to him and asked him to bend over while they put a daisy in his button hole.

Then they each took hold of his hand and walked down to the corner grocer, where he went in.

Not only did he sell to him, but to five others he called on that afternoon.

The hoodoo was broken.

The flower had done it.

And now he declares he always tries to have a flower in his button hole. His average is now 12 sales a day.

I am a bug on getting men to wear a flower, so what these two men said hit me just right.

It set me to wondering if we florists are not kind of overlooking the men.

Have a notion it's an F. T. D. thought worth thinking.

BUYS DAYTONA STORE.

Currey the Florist, of Deland, Fla., has purchased from L. F. Darnell the business and good will of the Daytona

The Daytona flower store will be open as usual, only for the winter season, October to May, while any summer business will be taken care of by the Deland

In fact, it extends clear across the continent. In Kansas City, Mo., it is quite keen. This year Arthur Newell, whose position among the leaders in the trade in that city is well known, found that wreaths made of oak and magnolia foliage, decorated with gray statice and the cape flowers of different colors, were most popular. Such wreaths sold readily at from $5 to $25.

Those who are going to Kansas City next August to attend the S. A. F. convention will be interested in the view on this page of Arthur Newell's store, which is on the southwest corner of Eleventh and McGee streets. In the illustration will be seen the three men who handled the extensive business in wreaths at Memorial day and made up all of them. The gentlemen are Fred L. Horst, Warren T. Spain and Joseph Haley.

COMPUTING RENTS.

Some florists pay so much a month to the landlord as rent for the store they occupy, while others own both ground and building. The latter are apt to deceive themselves in the matter of rent, unless they include in their calculations the same items for which the landlord is responsible in case the property is leased. In order to secure a proper comparison between the rent paid by a florist who leases his store and the rent calculated by a florist who owns his own property, it is necessary to include taxes, repairs, insurance and depreciation on the building, rather than to enter these items under expense headings. Interest on a mortgage on the property should also be entered as a part of the rental and not as interest on capital borrowed. One method of estimating the proper amount to charge as rent when both the land and buildings are owned is to compute a fair allowance for interest on investment in land and buildings used in the operation of the business and to add to this sum the insurance, taxes, repairs and depreciation on this real estate.

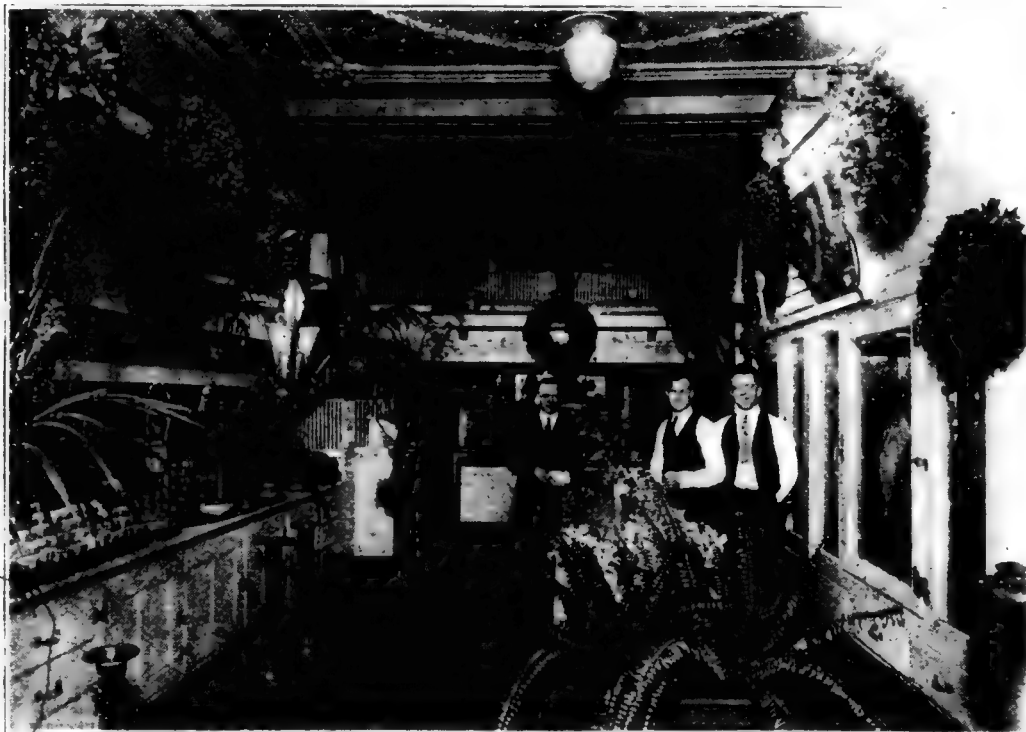

In case the florist owns the building he occupies, but ground rent is paid, the amount of the latter should be added to the taxes, repairs, insurance and depreciation on the building and interest on capital invested in the building, to obtain a comparable rent figure.

If a florist leases his store on an arrangement whereby he, and not the landlord, pays taxes, repairs and insurance, the items so paid should be added to the computed rent, since they are payments made in lieu of rent.

GLAD HAND OR COLD SHOULDER?

When a customer enters your store, does he feel welcome or does he experience the sensations of an intruder in a private icebox? Is he made to feel like an individual, a human being, or does he become in your place of business a buying, uninteresting unit, one of the many nonentities that come for the purpose of consuming the supply? Are you interested in him, as well as in the profits resulting from a possible sale? In other words, how do you meet the stranger within your doors?

It is absolutely accurate to say that each retailer has his own personality. It is either a natural gift or a natural hindrance that must be "tuned up" to be a possession of value. If he is a natural-born mixer he is especially fortunate, but there are many persons who from youth to manhood have found it difficult to meet others. But this class of people is quickly recognized and, by just a show of cordiality, the other party will instinctively bridge the gap and matters are soon on a friendly basis.

Then there are still other dealers who do not genuinely realize that the attitude toward the customer has a great deal to do in making the maximum of initial sales and return trade. Their argument is: "Well, we have the stock; it is good stock. If the customer has the money, he can buy this stock and he will be getting value. We believe in letting quality sell itself." And, so philosophizing, they lean against the counter or make a telephone call while the customer is looking about; consequently, the customer buys a bunch of violets and goes down the street into another florist's store and orders the flowers for a wedding.

It is not supposed that the retailer should make himself a "busybody" who meddles in other people's affairs, but a retailer, by making himself pleasant and courteous, can make a friend of a buyer and gain his good will. Business men know the value of good will.

Observations made in a large number of retail stores point to the fact that those who take an interest and help the customer select have always

And A Flower Did It

Coming up from Washington recently, overheard two men in the seat back of me talking about how a little thing will turn defeat into success.

It seems that one of them was a cereal salesman, calling on grocers. His contract called for an average of 10 sales a day in cities of 30 thousand and over.

For two days in Pittsburgh he had made but six sales—3 a day.

He was mighty blue.

About 3 o'clock went past a school just as the children were dismissed.

Before he hardly knew what was happening, two little girls came skipping up to him and asked him to bend over while they put a daisy in his button hole.

Then they each took hold of his hand and walked down to the corner grocer, where he went in.

Not only did he sell to him, but to five others he called on that afternoon.

The hoodoo was broken.

The flower had done it.

And now he declares he always tries to have a flower in his button hole. His average is now 12 sales a day.

I am a bug on getting men to wear a flower, so what these two men said hit me just right.

It set me to wondering if we florists are not kind of overlooking the men.

Have a notion it's an F. T. D. thought worth thinking.

Flowers and Giving

"Consider the lilies of the field." How bountifully they bloom, how freely and fully they give of their loveliness and sweetness.

store. A distance of only twenty-four miles separates the two stores, there being a good brick and asphalt road all the way. On this Deland-Daytona highway Mr. Currey recently acquired a fine piece of land, where he has already a creditable showing of plants and flowers coming on for local trade. He has also an Asparagus plumosus fernery, which will supply his own, as well as some outside demand. He intends putting up more glass in the near future.

Mr. Currey is young, capable and full of enthusiasm in his new venture and he intends to put forth his best efforts in giving the flower lovers of Deland, Daytona and vicinity a service of which they may well be proud.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Since Memorial day receipts at the various wholesale markets have taxed icebox capacities. Most of the left-over was in the poorer grades, as prime stock is not in oversupply. This latter held up well, while poorer grades had to be sacrificed at unusually low prices. Since last week ended the social season and school commencements, the dull season will soon be on.

Low prices did not seem to influence the big majority of retailers, affecting only those in the business part of the city. Here special sales were put on, which handled the great surplus. Roses were in heavy supply. Columbia, the best in quality and sales, had the call. Good red roses are in demand. Milady is showing poor stock. Premier is off color at present, as is Russell. White Killarney sells well.

Carnations are plentiful in all va-

Field daisies are fine and there are plenty of them. Delphiniums and cornflowers are in abundance. Easter lilies and valley were in demand all last week.

All varieties of greens are to be had at any time. Fancy asparagus and smilax clear almost daily.

establishment of W. J. Pilcher, with a meeting, smoker and refreshments. Mr. Pilcher was the club's president in 1914.

The members assembled in the wholesale district, where automobiles were waiting to convey them to the meeting place. Sixty-five were present. Before the meeting opened the members inspected this up-to-date establishment of 21,000 square feet of glass, under which only roses of high quality are grown.

President W. A. Rowe called the meeting to order, with all officers present. The regular routine opening work was first gone over. The chair called for reports of all committees. The trustees reported through Chairman A. W. Gumz that they had arranged for the annual picnic for the florists and their friends. This will be held July 27 at Normandy grove. The club made its usual appropriation for defraying the expense. None of the other committees had anything of interest to report.

Oscar C. May, state vice-president of the S. A. F., who has the club's transportation in charge, reported that he had not as yet completed his arrangements for the Kansas City trip and that apparently the St. Louis party will be the largest ever. Definite arrangements will be reported at the July meeting.

The membership committee reported nineteen applicants for membership. Of these the committee had ten: F. A. Windler, four; H. G. Berning, two; Philip Giebel, two, and E. Biems, one. The new applicants were as follows: L. A. Hoerr, John W. Steidle, John Kern, Miss G. Malloy, John Masek, Oscar Lekingse, A. Jensen, R. Muehleberg, Louis Grimm, August Kunz, George Piser, W. A. Ferree, Fred Decker, J. S. Carter, Jr., Christ Kilmer, F. A. Alves, Mrs. E. K. Turk, Walter J. Young and H. S. Lauscher. The applications were placed in the hands of a committee consisting of L. P. Jensen and Edward Guntley for report at the July meeting. Treasurer Smith's report on the financial condition of the club was pleasing.

For the good of the club the chair called on Luther Armstrong for a talk. He spoke on the club's early history; he was the first secretary, thirty-six years ago. This was indeed interesting. E. W. Guy, who became a member thirty-six years ago, also gave an interesting talk on what happened during the early days of the club. He said that Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Kehrmann were the only living charter members and that himself and James D. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., were the only ones living who became members during the year 1886. All are now honorary members.

Next came the drawing for the attendance prizes. F. J. Fillmore was fortunate enough to receive a year's dues. George H. Pring was not in attendance and could not claim his. Each month two prizes of a year's dues will be given, all winners' numbers being out of the box for one year. This feature of the meeting created an unusual interest.

The question box brought out a good discussion, after which the meeting adjourned. Mr. Pilcher then escorted the members to a fine lunch, with cigars. He was given a rising vote of thanks for the afternoon's entertainment. The thirty-sixth birthday will long be remembered.

The club will hold its July meeting at St. Charles, Mo., as guest of Edwin

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Flower Growers' Publicity Association's executive board held its meeting June 6, at publicity headquarters. W. A. Rowe presided over the meeting. The secretary's report showed plenty of money available for payment of all bills, amounting to $1,200 for advertising during May. Six of the eleven board members were present. All summer advertising was left in the hands of the advertising committee, F. A. Windler, H. G. Berning and J. J. Beneke, as the board will not meet again until the first Tuesday in August, when plans for fall and winter advertising will be made. Almost $10,000 has been spent by the present board.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association has taken a new lease of life. A meeting was held June 7, the first in several months. There was a large attendance. President Ude called the meeting to order and there was plenty of business for transaction. Oscar C. May, state vice-president of the S. A. F., was present and talked on plans for the trip to Kansas City. W. A. Rowe, president of the Missouri State Florists' Association and vice-president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, was present and spoke on the coming meetings of the two bodies at St. Louis. The annual picnic of the association also came up for discussion. This will be fully arranged at the next meeting, to be held the first Wednesday in July at 8 p. m.

Grimm & Gorly had a splendid sale last week, when they sold roses at 25 cents per dozen, making the sale known by large advertisements in all the papers and on the fronts of the street cars. In answer to "Does Advertising Pay?" Vincent Gorly says, "When you can relieve the market of 10,000 roses a day and turn them over to the public, you are quick to learn what brought the crowd in. The Growers' Publicity Association, since it has taken over the advertising, has taught our firm and all the rest of the retailers a lesson. When you want business, especially during the dull months, do not do as we used to do—wait for it to come in—but advertise for it. Our recent advertising campaign, excluding my birthday party, cost us more than $2,000."
